Students are encouraged to enroll in courses on Latin America/the Caribbean or to participate in the programs of Latin American Studies—Related Concentration, Undergraduate or Graduate Certificate. Many of the undergraduate courses on this list may be used to satisfy the School of Arts and Sciences foreign culture or non-Western culture requirement or other general education requirements. Need advice concerning registration or want information about the certificates or related concentration? Please contact Luis Bravo (email bravo@pitt.edu or phone 648-7396).

Students also are welcome to attend CLAS events–lectures, films, workshops, concerts, conferences, and the annual Latin American and Caribbean Festival. See the monthly schedule of activities on the CLAS website: http://www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas or call 412-648-7391 for a printed copy.

Important Information for Students and Advisors

Program Registration: To be officially enrolled in the CLAS certificate program, students must complete an application for admission to CLAS. Admissions are done on a rolling basis. The only pre-requisite is interest in Latin American related topics. There are no deadlines, nor is there an application fee. However, the sooner a student enrolls, the sooner they may be eligible for awards, grants, and fellowships from CLAS.

Acceptable Certificate Courses: Courses in this list with titles typed in ALL CAPS are accepted to fulfill Latin American Studies area course requirements. Courses with titles typed in upper and lower case are international courses in which at least 25% of the content is Latin American. To have international courses count towards the certificate, focus your work on Latin America. (If the professor requires a paper or papers, bibliography, readings, etc., you must do all the work on a Latin American topic. You will be asked to present your work for the course to the CLAS academic advisor.)

University of Pittsburgh Course Numbers

Courses numbered from:
- 0001 to 0999 are lower level undergraduate courses; they are not acceptable for graduate credit.
- 1000 to 1999 are upper level undergraduate courses; they are acceptable for both undergraduate and graduate certificates.
- 2000 to 2999 are master's level courses and those in the 3000s are doctoral level courses.

All Latin American courses for the certificate or related concentration will be counted as “inside” or “outside” the student’s major.

Faculty: Please contact Luis Bravo (email bravo@pitt.edu or phone 412-648-7396) if your course contains at least 25% Latin American content and is missing from this list or if the information given about your course is incorrect. Revisions to this list are made as soon as corrections are received.
SCHEDULE OF LATIN AMERICAN AREA STUDIES COURSES
FALL TERM (AUGUST 28 - DECEMBER 8, 2017)

All courses are three credits unless otherwise indicated. Area courses are listed first and then their descriptions. A list of the Spanish/Portuguese language courses is found at the end of the document. Note: the information on this course list is subject to change. Updates are available on the CLAS website: www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas/students.html

SCHOOL AND FACULTY OF ARTS AND SCIENCE--ARTSC

Study Abroad Programs are offered in many countries of the Caribbean, Mesoamerica, Central and South America. Students should contact the Study Abroad Office, 802 William Pitt Union, to arrange study programs of 3 to 18 credits. See the CLAS Academic Advisor to verify how credits will count towards completion of the certificate or related concentration in Latin American Studies.

0385  CARIBBEAN HISTORY
27648  Mo We
1:00 - 2:15 PM
4165 WWPH

Caribbean History is an undergraduate course that introduces students to conceptual, comparative, and integrative issues of the Caribbean. To gain a deeper understanding the Caribbean’s complex history and its global connections, we will explore indigenous and African enslavement, degrees of freedom within slave systems, rebellion and revolution, paths to emancipation, post-emancipation societies, anticolonial and social movements, postcolonial identities, and contemporary migration. In addition to discussing assigned readings and primary documents and linking those materials to contemporary news on the Caribbean, students will complete a series of assignments with the goal of producing a short critical analysis paper, and present their findings. The syllabus, select readings, and additional resources are accessible on Course Web. This course contributes to the curriculum of Africana Studies, Global Studies, and Latin American Studies, along with a number of other majors, minors, and certificate programs. This course fulfills following General Education Requirements: Historical Change, International/Foreign Culture-REG.

This course examines the history of the African diaspora in Spanish America and Brazil from 1500 to the present. It begins with the initial implantation of plantation slavery in the New World, the subsequent expansion of slavery, and the growth of a large free black population during the colonial period (1500-1820). It then looks at the role of slaves and free black people in the region’s struggle for independence and in the nineteenth-century republics. The course concludes with an examination of twentieth-century race relations in the region, paying particular attention to socialist Cuba and capitalist Brazil. No formal prerequisites though some prior knowledge of Latin American or African-American history will be helpful.

What to Akon and Rihanna have in common? They are both part of recent diasporas from Africa and the Caribbean. This course focuses on the issues and experiences of people of African descent in contemporary (20th and 21st centuries) migratory diasporas from both Africa and the Caribbean. The course draws on extensive literature on migration, transnationalism, racial and ethnic identity formation, health and other topics to illuminate the causes for the migration and the experiences that migrants have in different host countries. What experiences do migrants from Africa and the Caribbean share? How do their experiences differ? How do migrants define themselves in new host countries? How do they stay connected to their homelands?

Gender is a key structuring principle of difference and inequality in society, while globalization is a condition characterized by time-space compression and ever-expanding connections across national boundaries. Globalization emerged out of such (and often violent) practices of contact as capitalism, colonialism, socialism, the Cold War, and neoliberalism. This course will explore the intersection of gender and globalization asking how gender shapes processes of globalization and how the role of gender is shifting as national/cultural regulatory systems are no longer able to maintain control over what is recognized as “normative” in the context of gender roles and gendered practices. Adopting an interdisciplinary approach, this course will draw on a range of materials including scholarly texts, fiction, and film to examine various facets of the interface between gender and globalization in such contexts as labor migration, gendered labor in transnational factories, maritime trade, and the high-tech industries, marriage and family, sex and colonialism, sex work and state violence, new reproductive technologies, as well as queer identities and activism. The particular historical contexts in which we will discuss these themes include colonialism, the Cold War Era, post-socialism, and neoliberalism.

This lecture course examines the rise and fall of several ancient civilizations. It covers the archaeology and earliest history of regions recognized as significant centers for the development of early civilization: Eastern Mediterranean, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Indus Valley, China, Southeast Asia, Mesoamerica, and Andean South America. Central themes concern: why and how civilizations first emerge and then collapse; relationships among economic, political, social, and ideological factors in early civilizations; generic versus unique qualities of different early civilizations.

This is an introductory course on Latin America and the Caribbean. Since the indigenous past and colonial experiences have repercussions in the present and future of the nations in the region, the course begins with a historical perspective.
It then surveys major topics and issues such as religion, the environment, art, race and gender, etc. in contemporary contexts and from an interdisciplinary perspective. The course will stimulate students to pursue further study of Latin American/Caribbean or world issues during their undergraduate careers.

This course provides an introduction to the field of international economics. The course divides roughly in half between topics from international trade and from international finance. Topics to be covered include: comparative advantage; the effects of tariffs and other forms of protectionism; U.S. commercial policy; the balance of payments; exchange rates; and the international monetary system.

The CLAS student taking this course will have to commit to analyzing international trade of a selected country within the region of interest and prepare a short paper. The student using this class towards the certificate or related concentration must talk with the instructor at the beginning of the term.

This course begins with an exploration of indigenous mythologies and religions of the pre-Columbian Americas, as well as traditions from West Africa that have been adapted to cultures in Latin America, the Caribbean, and the U.S. South. After familiarizing ourselves with some of these traditions, we will read works from contemporary Latin American, U.S., and Canadian literature that prove how practices and beliefs lived on through colonization and slavery. We will read and learn about alternative medicines, religious adaptations, approaches to life and death, and other knowledges absent from mainstream education. The theme of this semester’s class is “the curse,” and we will read novels, short stories, poetry, and films that center around conjure, hechizo, gopher, and other forms of curses that appear in the work of authors such as Toni Morrison, Junot Diaz, Isabel Allende, Cristina Garcia, William Faulkner, and Laura Esquivel.

0725 Intro To Translation Studies
29506 Tu Th 2:30 - 3:45 PM
208A CL

Reading World Literature as Translation. (No knowledge of a foreign language is required). This course introduces students to the study of world literature as translated texts. We examine different English versions of literary texts (including the new Google Translator version) and also films dealing with translation: Villeneuve's Arrival (2017) and Coppola’s Lost in Translation (2003). You will learn about how gender shapes the rendering of texts into English, including controversial versions of sexuality and of the US: Kafka’s Amerika, Beauvoir’s America Day by Day and The Second Sex, as well as Anzaldua’s Borderlands and Char's and Vallejo’s poems. We read theories of translation from Spain, Mexico, Argentina, Russia, Africa, the US, and other cultures. You can choose your own world lit./film topic or write your own short story on translation for a major assignment. The course satisfies GEC Writing (pending approval), 2nd Lit/Arts/Creative Expression; Engl. Minor; Gender, Sexuality/Women’s and the Latin American, as well as the Asian, African, and Russian/East European Studies certificate requirements.

This course surveys the history of sport, focusing primarily on the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Its emphasis is on the changing nature and meaning of sport. It tackles several questions, including why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. We will look at sport in settings that range from baseball in the Caribbean to football in American Samoa, and rugby in South Africa, as well as focus on the role of sport in Pittsburgh.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.

The University Honors College History of Sports course focuses on the emergence and evolution of sport during the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. It looks at the changing nature and meaning of sport, tackling why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. It will also look at the global consequences of sport’s current model—that of global capitalism—on youth, play, and the meaning of sport. It will do so by looking at baseball academies in the Caribbean, football academies in Africa and Europe, junior hockey in Canada, and high school basketball and football in the United States and the South Pacific. The seminar format permits greater student involvement, research opportunities, and participation/discussion. The course asks you to address these questions and topics in seminar sessions as well as in writing about them. No prerequisites but come ready to explore.

Prerequisite(s): none. This course is offered infrequently.

This course ranges widely over the past two hundred years of Latin American history to explore the lives of women in all their complexity and diversity, from nineteenth-century enslaved wet nurses to indigenous marketwomen to modern ballet stars. Women’s lives in Latin America have embodied a series of contradictions that make us rethink U.S.-based assumptions about gender, sexuality, and power. This is a region where traditional gender roles coexist with a spectrum of sexual identities; where devout Catholicism and motherhood have at times fueled radical political action by women. We will draw on films, documentaries, and autobiographies as well as the writings of historians and anthropologists. Our goal will be to map the range and complexity of Latin American women’s lives and track how they have changed over time. Along the way we examine the major political, economic, and social trends in Latin American history and explore urgent current topics like migration, environmental activism, and organized crime.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.

This course examines the historical and contemporary relations between the United States and Latin American countries. After a brief historical overview of U.S. foreign policy toward Latin America, we will explore various themes central to U.S.-Latin American relations. Topics include the impact of U.S. imperial rule; revolutionary challenges to U.S. hegemony; defending national security, democracy, and human rights; the “war on drugs”; economic and cultural exchanges; and Latin American migration to the United States.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.

This course will examine historical patterns of race relations in the U.S., Latin America (Brazil, Cuba), Africa (South Africa), and Asia (India). For India, the focus will be more on caste relations, particularly untouchability, as a counterpoint to caste-like race relations in the U. S. and South Africa. The course will include pictures, videos and other materials acquired on trips to those locations in 1993, 1997 and 2002. The overall goal of the course will be comparative: to examine the operation of these processes in a variety of economic, political and cultural settings.

Focusing on a variety of musical traditions throughout the world, this course addresses factors that have influenced historical and contemporary musical performance practices. Special attention is placed on how political, economic, social, and religious factors influence musical aesthetics and notions of identity among performers and audiences. Positioning music within a broader context of postcolonial, technological, and transnational development, this course analyzes the ever-changing relationship between traditional and modern socio-musical approaches toward performance techniques, musical transmission, and intercultural exchange.

The course introduces students to interdisciplinary methods and approaches to "global studies." It draws on case studies of current global issues and trends that require students to think analytically and critically about how we approach, interpret and respond to 'global' phenomena, and about the consequences for different regions, cultures and localities. In this the usefulness, complexity and controversy of the concept of globalization as a key analytical tool is assessed, and students develop an ability to engage with core debates regarding the impact of globalization on culture, economic and social equality, politics and governance, security, and sustainable development.

Developing a new democracy is a process, with at least two main parts. First the country must move away from authoritarian rule. The first part of the course, therefore, will examine why (or why not) countries make that transition and how they do so. The second part of the course will then examine why some countries are more successful in their transition, based on an examination of civil society and the types of political institutions (such as political parties, the executive system, and the judiciary) that countries develop. What influences these choices and how do these choices affect success and stability of the new democracy? Has international aid been successful in helping countries develop democratic practices?

This course will examine the major problems involved in the study and understanding of change in "less developed countries," the main approaches and theories applied to these problems, and the criticisms directed at some of these approaches. In particular, it will consider attempts to understand "development" by reference to the earlier experiences of Europe and the United States and will evaluate the relevance of such an approach to the current problems of the underdeveloped world. This seminar covers the basic approaches and methods in the study of comparative politics. By the end of the course you will be familiar with some of the most prominent works in the field and will able to bring new analytical tools into your design of comparative research. The seminar will cover two large themes. First, we will explore some of the most prominent theoretical perspectives in comparative politics: historical sociology, modernization theory, political economy approaches to development and inequality, the study of political culture and civil society, and different approaches to political institutions. Most of the books selected for this seminar are exemplars—models of research that have inspired later scholarly work in our field. I have made a conscious choice of selecting books over journal articles, since you will read a large number of articles in more specialized courses. Second, the course will deal with methodological questions. How do we select cases for comparative research? How do we build analytical categories in order to make comparisons across societies? How should we structure a comparison in order to draw causal inferences? What is the relationship between small-N comparison and large-N statistical work? Since the 1970s, a significant literature in the field has addressed those questions, but over the past two decades, the methodological debate in comparative politics has expanded considerably.

People’s health is increasingly tied to global forces such as climate change, globalization of food production and distribution, migration, and international finance and trade policies. The course explores how globalization impacts health outcomes in the United States and around the world. Students learn about how global trade and international regulations affect governments’ ability to control the “problems without passports” that impact the health and well-being of their populations. In addition, we consider factors shaping inequalities in access to health services.

The course is designed to introduce students to the study of Hispanic literature, while at the same time dealing with concepts which can be applied to all literature. In discussing the nature of literature as a category of writing, the course will focus on exploring various approaches to the study of literature. While some of the readings will be in English, all course production (lectures, discussion, assignments) will be in Spanish. 0055 counts as a departmental W course for the writing requirement.

11:00 AM-11:50 AM / 242 CL

This course is an overview of contemporary Latin America and its people and is designed to be an introduction for students who have no previous knowledge of the area. Students will be exposed to several aspects of Latin America. A special attempt will be made to show contemporary social reality as interpreted by some of the region’s most gifted filmmakers, artists, writers and intellectuals. Readings, lectures, and class discussions will be conducted in English.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.
The primary goal of this course is to introduce students to the cultural histories of the Hispanic world, with a particular emphasis on Latin America. Through a multidisciplinary approach, we will study the interaction of social, political, ethnic, racial, and gender dynamics, and the resulting transformations in Latin America, past and present. After a study of pre-contact Iberian and Amerindian societies, we will critically examine the ensuing conflicts that characterized the three centuries of contested colonial rule in Latin America. We will then focus on the different national projects and revolutions that shaped the current geopolitical landscape through both cultural manifestations as well as discourses of national identity and calls for patriotic behavior. We will close with an overview of some of the challenges actors across Latin America face at the turn of the millennium. Throughout the semester, the goal will be both to learn about Latin America and about how it has been imagined by its most influential past and present thinkers, tracing differences and continuities.

Prerequisite(s): PREQ: SPAN 0020 or 0025 (Min Grade C); PLAN: SPAN BA or BPH
This course is offered every fall and spring.

This course is designed for Spanish majors who have completed SPAN 0020 and/or SPAN 0025 or can demonstrate an equivalent level of proficiency. The course will provide a broad overview of Spanish literature from the Middle Ages to the present, covering Spanish achievements in the arts as well. Texts, works of art, and films, will be studied particularly in relation to how we can read “Spain” through Spanish art and literature and to what extent the “idea of Spain” emerges from its own literary culture.

This course will focus on the short stories of Jorge Luis Borges (1899-1986), particularly on those of Ficciones (1944) and El Aleph (1949), but with attention also to earlier stories (Historia universal de la infamia, 1935) and later ones (El informe de Brodie, 1970, and El libro de arena, 1975). Attention will be paid to Borges's theory of narrative, particularly to his audacious use of verisimilitude. Stories will be read carefully and in depth, using the Fishburn and Hughes Dictionary of Borges, the Finder's Guide and Timeline on the Borges Center website (www.borges.pitt.edu) and other resources. Issues to be examined include the weaving together of fiction and history, uses of the fantastic, the pleasures of paradox.

General objective. This course will examine the implications of Eric Williams’s notion of “abolition from above and abolition from below” in its literary, ideological, historical manifestations, paying particular attention to Enlightenment precepts concerning emancipation and natural rights. The course will also look at the Latin American antislavery canon (Cuba/Brazil) against the background of metropolitan abolitionist activism in the nineteenth century, and U.S abolitionist discourse. It will highlight the emergent nationalist discourse of the ciudad letrada in Latin America (Antonio Saco, Domingo del Monte, Joaquim Nabuco), as well as the ongoing liberation attempts from the enslaved and free black community itself during the latter eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

Coloniality, Visuality, Race, Laughter Overview This course is an invitation to think questions of subalternity, coloniality and modernity, with a particular emphasis on the productive projects that emerge as responses to the former. For instance, how should relations between the West and its others be conceived? Should they be thought as dynamics of repression and imposition done by one party over the other, or are there commonalities and denials of them, active acts of copying and appropriating and projecting? Are we talking about conscious acts and/or about complex mechanisms of self-denial, veiling and projection? In what conditions can marginalized voices de-center Western racialized taxonomies that determine who can legitimately speak and about what, and effectively propose new articulations of culture, power and identity? How are these Other thinking to be understood? Are they the expression of a pre-existing, essential difference? Are they spaces from which to produce a difference that makes a difference, unrelated to the non-western? What roles do epistemology, race, vision and laughter play? We will search for answers scrutinizing a plurality of materials in terms of disciplines, areas and perspectives, and examine among others the notions of border thinking, mimesis, survivance, subalternity, double consciousness, and the third eye. Material and class discussion will be in English.

The main focus will be "gauchesque poetry" ("poesía gauchesca"), a unique genre that began in Uruguay at the time of the independence wars (Bartolomé Hidalgo) through the works of Hilario Ascasubi (Santos Vega, 1851 and other works), Estanislao del Campo (Fausto, 1866), Antonio Lussich (Los tres gauchos orientales, 1872) and José Hernández (El gaucho Martin Fierro, 1872, and La vuelta de Martín Fierro, 1879). Critics to be considered include Angel Rama (Los gauchipoliticos rioplatenses), Josefina Ludmer (El género gauchesco) and Julio Schvartzman (Letras gauchas). Careful attention will be paid to formal questions (versification, creation of fictional characters, relations between author, characters and text, etc.) and to the uses of the gauchesque genre in debates about politics, the relations between high and low culture (and the country and the city), and arguments about Argentine and Uruguayan nationalism.

The main line of thought of this course is placed on a working definition of justice, sovereignty, and truth processes from a theoretical point of view. Several Western Philosophers will be studied, among which are Benjamin ("Critique of Violence"), Derrida ("Force de Loi"), Badiou (Ethics), Agamben (State of Exception) and Rancière ("Aesthetics as Politics", The Emancipated Spectator). The exploration of these theorists and several Latin american poetics (narration, poetry, testimonies, performance and film) will establish a dialogue across nations and idioms. The construction of textualities will be studied in Plasma (Guadalupe Santa Cruz), Virgilio Piñera (La carne de René), The Apple in the Dark (Clarice Lispector), El padre mio (Diamela Eltit), and Gabriela Cabezón Cámara (La virgen cabeza), among others.

This course is designed to examine the history of organized crime not only within the United States, but from an International perspective as well. The emergence of "non-traditional" groups which are competing for power and profits will be examined, as well as the alliances between various criminal groups that have evolved, resulting in the phenomenon of "transnational" organized crime. Those "non-traditional" groups include, but are not necessarily limited to, domestic and international terrorist organizations, the reasons for their development as well as the perceived risk to American citizens both in a domestic environment and abroad. Neither organized crime nor a terrorist organization can be effectively discussed without integrating the evolution of U.S. Drug Policy, which will be included. Finally, the various government tactics implemented to counter the threats mentioned herein as well as the impact on the private sector will be integrated into lectures throughout the program.

Organized crime is no longer confined to a few countries such as Italy, the United States, and Japan. During the 1980s and 1990s it has become much more pervasive, and has had a major impact in countries such as Russia and other countries in transition, Turkey, Mexico, and South Africa. This course looks at the dynamics of organized crime, explains why it develops in particular countries, the various forms it takes, and the responses of law enforcement agencies and international institutions.

This seminar explores contemporary issues of social and public policy in Latin America through systems, global, comparative, and case-study approaches. In the first section participants review general policy concepts and theories, to be followed by the historical, economic and political context of public and social policy in the region. The second section examines several policy areas such as education, employment, poverty alleviation, public administration, social security, health, minorities, and violence. Materials for the class include current news, scholarly publications, videos and other material published in English, Spanish, and possibly Portuguese.

This seminar is an opportunity for students to engage in interdisciplinary deliberation on policy issues in this region and fulfills the requirements for certificates in Latin American studies.

This course introduces the core concepts of human security, examines the institutions that promote them, and probes the advantages and limitations of human security as a means of addressing difficult policy issues. Human security treats individuals and communities, rather than states and institutions, as the fundamental units of analysis. It calls for an integration of individuals' security and integrity with state security and sovereignty. Analyzing security at the level of individuals instead of states raises important challenges and opportunities for observers and practitioners of development, conflict and peace, human security, and investigate substantive policy agendas affecting human security on a range of global issues. We grapple with both direct and structural violence especially among vulnerable populations, and with debates about prioritizing or narrowing human security threats and referents. And we explore how a diverse set of actors develop global public policy responses by articulating new policy agendas and defining policy recommendations. Throughout the term we assess the advantages and drawbacks of the human security.

This is a survey of development policies, issues, institutions, and resources for professionals working in development. Lectures, discussions, and presentations in class focus on analysis of development policies, and on new and significant policy issues, skills, methodologies, and resources. The course helps students develop the ability to analyze development issues from several perspectives, understand the breadth of international development as a field of professional service and academic study, and clarify their priorities for acquiring skills in preparation for that service. Students completing the course will be able to grasp the history of approaches and experiences with development, identify and critically analyze major institutions involved, assess political and institutional environments of development, employ some key social science and administrative tools, and recognize and understand principles of other significant skills and emerging methodologies in development practice. The course is organized in three parts: 1) dynamics of development and social change; 2) development management: who's in charge?; and 3) contemporary issues and skills. Throughout the course we will introduce, discuss, and return to case studies that illuminate key issues and themes: the global hiv/aids pandemic, microfinance programs in development, the chad-cameroon oil pipeline project, water system privatization, and the global and local food prices and production.

In this course students examine global human rights as an evolving social and political institution, analyze human rights violations and the challenges of human rights practice, and learn how serious threats to human security may be addressed. We examine key human rights concepts, theories and laws, and related controversies that often obstruct international action on human rights (e.g. origins and nature of rights, universality and cultural relativity claims, conflicting rights, state sovereignty, and notions of obligations and accountability). We then examine the field of international action for human rights (e.g., states, inter-governmental actors, non-governmental actors and civil society) and the core dimensions and challenges of human rights work. Throughout the course, human rights target groups (such as women, children, and refugees) and current topics (such as genocide, child soldiering, gender violence, and peacekeeping) are examined as case studies, illustrating key principles and challenges, and providing insight into the range and depth of current human rights and their practice across fields. Students also select a specific human rights topic for major assignments, including a human rights issue brief and a comparative case study of international action on human rights.

We use basic conceptual frameworks from economics and quantitative methods to examine economic development issues. We begin by discussing Amartya Sen's concept of 'development as freedom' and measures of development such as the Human Development Index. We examine when the market and government can serve as appropriate mechanisms to allocate resources within the economy. We discuss the institutions that are needed to ensure that markets function well. We study innovations, such as disclosure programs, that reduce corruption. We examine gender-sensitive pro-poor strategies, such as micro-credit programs, the granting of property rights to women, investment into girls' schooling and women's reproductive health. We study World Trade Organization provisions that assist or impede poor countries' access to drugs in combating AIDS and other public health crises. We review the rules of the WTO that attempt to balance free trade and countries' ability to protect public health and the environment. We discuss the role of international trade (e.g., OECD subsidies for agriculture), foreign aid and debt in encouraging or impeding economic development. Students will be graded on policy memos that are well written, based on quantitative and qualitative evidence, and oral briefings that recommend solutions to development challenges faced by governments, international organizations, non-governmental organizations or corporations.

This course provides students with a foundation in second language (L2) acquisition research. It examines theories and research in L2 acquisition and teaching practices as well as the individual factors that affect the relative success in L2 learning. This course will look at how different methodologies have approached the teaching-learning practice. As a practical component, students will have the opportunity to practice different teaching methodologies.

Prerequisite(s): none Check with the department on how often this course is offered.
