Important Information for Students and Advisors

Program Registration: To be officially enrolled in the CLAS certificate program, students must complete an application for admission to CLAS. Admissions are done on a rolling basis. The only prerequisite is interest in Latin American related topics. There are no deadlines, nor is there an application fee. However, the sooner a student enrolls, the sooner they may be eligible for awards, grants, and fellowships from CLAS.

Acceptable Certificate Courses: Courses in this list with titles typed in ALL CAPS are accepted to fulfill Latin American Studies area course requirements. Courses with titles typed in upper and lower case are international courses in which at least 25% of the content is Latin American. To have international courses count towards the certificate, focus your work on Latin America. (If the professor requires a paper or papers, bibliography, readings, etc., you must do all the work on a Latin American topic. You will be asked to present your work for the course to the CLAS academic advisor.)

University of Pittsburgh Course Numbers

Courses numbered from:
- 0001 to 0999 are lower level undergraduate courses; they are not acceptable for graduate credit.
- 1000 to 1999 are upper level undergraduate courses; they are acceptable for both undergraduate and graduate certificates.
- 2000 to 2999 are master's level courses and those in the 3000s are doctoral level courses.

All Latin American courses for the certificate or related concentration will be counted as “inside” or “outside” the student’s major.

Faculty: Please contact Luis Bravo (email bravo@pitt.edu or phone 412-648-7396) if your course contains at least 25% Latin American content and is missing from this list or if the information given about your course is incorrect. Revisions to this list are made as soon as corrections are received.
SCHEDULE OF LATIN AMERICAN AREA STUDIES COURSES
FALL TERM (AUGUST 28 - DECEMBER 8, 2017)

All courses are three credits unless otherwise indicated. Area courses are listed first and then their descriptions. A list of the Spanish/Portuguese language courses is found at the end of the document.

Note: the information on this course list is subject to change. Updates are available on the CLAS website: www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas/students.html

SCHOOL AND FACULTY OF ARTS AND SCIENCE--ARTSC
Study Abroad Programs are offered in many countries of the Caribbean, Mesoamerica, Central and South America. Students should contact the Study Abroad Office, 802 William Pitt Union, to arrange study programs of 3 to 18 credits. See the CLAS Academic Advisor to verify how credits will count towards completion of the certificate or related concentration in Latin American Studies.

0385 CARIBBEAN HISTORY
27648 Mo We 1:00 - 2:15 PM 4165 WWPH
No Combined Enroll Reid, Michele
recitation. w/ HIST 0521 Limit 30

Caribbean History is an undergraduate course that introduces students to conceptual, comparative, and integrative issues of the Caribbean. To gain a deeper understanding the Caribbean’s complex history and its global connections, we will explore indigenous and African enslavement, degrees of freedom within slave systems, rebellion and revolution, paths to emancipation, post-emancipation societies, anticolonial and social movements, postcolonial identities, and contemporary migration. In addition to discussing assigned readings and primary documents and linking those materials to contemporary news on the Caribbean, students will complete a series of assignments with the goal of producing a short critical analysis paper, and present their findings. The syllabus, select readings, and additional resources are accessible on Course Web. This course contributes to the curriculum of Africana Studies, Global Studies, and Latin American Studies, along with a number of other majors, minors, and certificate programs. This course fulfills following General Education Requirements: Historical Change, International/Foreign Culture-REG.

recitation. w/ HIST 0502 Limit 10

This course examines the history of the African diaspora in Spanish America and Brazil from 1500 to the present. It begins with the initial implantation of plantation slavery in the New World, the subsequent expansion of slavery, and the growth of a large free black population during the colonial period (1500-1820). It then looks at the role of slaves and free black people in the region’s struggle for independence and in the nineteenth-century republics. The course concludes with an examination of twentieth-century race relations in the region, paying particular attention to socialist Cuba and capitalist Brazil. No formal prerequisites though some prior knowledge of Latin American or African-American history will be helpful.

Prerequisite(s): none
Check with the department on how often this course is offered.
What to Akon and Rihanna have in common? They are both part of recent diasporas from Africa and the Caribbean. This course focuses on the issues and experiences of people of African descent in contemporary (20th and 21st centuries) migratory diasporas from both Africa and the Caribbean. The course draws on extensive literature on migration, transnationalism, racial and ethnic identity formation, health and other topics to illuminate the causes for the migration and the experiences that migrants have in different host countries. What experiences do migrants from Africa and the Caribbean share? How do their experiences differ? How do migrants define themselves in new host countries? How do they stay connected to their homelands?

Prerequisite(s): none

This course is designed to examine, at a higher level, dance influences of West Africa on the islands in the Caribbean and parts of Latin America. In this course, students will examine 3 aspects of dance in the Caribbean – Historical, Religious, and Sociological. In addition, students will develop an understanding of and participate in techniques devised by Katherine Dunham.

Prerequisite(s): none

When the Spanish conquerors arrived in Mexico and Guatemala they found large cities with impressive temples raised on tall pyramids, lavish palaces for rulers, elaborate markets, and skilled craftsmen working in gold, copper, feathers, stone pottery, and other materials. They were astonished to find a civilization so like their own in some respects and yet so different (so "barbaric" to European eyes) in other ways. In this course we will explore this civilization and then trace its development from its remote roots three thousand years before the arrival of Cortez. Our exploration will center on examining the archaeological and historical evidence left by people in earlier periods and reconstructing the patterns of their lives and cultures. Recitation sections will concentrate on discussion of exercises and of the methods archaeologists use to reconstruct the past.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.

Gender is a key structuring principle of difference and inequality in society, while globalization is a condition characterized by time-space compression and ever-expanding connections across national boundaries. Globalization emerged out of such (and often violent) practices of contact as capitalism, colonialism, socialism, the Cold War, and neoliberalism. This course will explore the intersection of gender and globalization asking how gender shapes processes of globalization and how the role of gender is shifting as national/cultural regulatory systems are no longer able to maintain control over what is recognized as “normative” in the context of gender roles and gendered practices. Adopting an interdisciplinary approach, this course will draw on a range of materials including scholarly texts, fiction, and film to examine various facets of the interface between gender and globalization in such contexts as labor migration, gendered labor in transnational factories, maritime trade, and the high-tech industries, marriage and family, sex and colonialism, sex work and state violence, new reproductive technologies, as well as queer identities and activism. The particular historical contexts in which we will discuss these themes include colonialism, the Cold War Era, post-socialism, and neoliberalism.

This lecture course examines the rise and fall of several ancient civilizations. It covers the archaeology and earliest history of regions recognized as significant centers for the development of early civilization: Eastern Mediterranean, Mesopotamia, Egypt, Indus Valley, China, Southeast Asia, Mesoamerica, and Andean South America. Central themes concern: why and how civilizations first emerge and then collapse; relationships among economic, political, social, and ideological factors in early civilizations; generic versus unique qualities of different early civilizations.

11704  Mo We  No  Enroll Limit 14  Delgado, Jorge Enrique

4:30 - 05:45 PM  recitation.  316 OEH

This is an introductory course on Latin America and the Caribbean. Since the indigenous past and colonial experiences have repercussions in the present and future of the nations in the region, the course begins with a historical perspective. It then surveys major topics and issues such as religion, the environment, art, race and gender, etc. in contemporary contexts and from an interdisciplinary perspective. The course will stimulate students to pursue further study of Latin American/Caribbean or world issues during their undergraduate careers.

11:00 AM - 12:15 PM  Limit 80  129 VICT

This course provides an introduction to the field of international economics. The course divides roughly in half between topics from international trade and from international finance. Topics to be covered include: comparative advantage; the effects of tariffs and other forms of protectionism; U.S. commercial policy; the balance of payments; exchange rates; and the international monetary system.

The CLAS student taking this course will have to commit to analyzing international trade of a selected country within the region of interest and prepare a short paper. The student using this class towards the certificate or related concentration must talk with the instructor at the beginning of the term.

1:00 - 02:15 PM  recitation.  Limit 22  TBA

This course offers an opportunity to read, discuss, and write about a wide variety of short stories and their social and historical contexts, beginning with an examination of what contexts we now bring to our readings of short stories: What do we expect a short story to be and to mean? And what historical and cultural influences have shaped our ways of thinking, reading, and writing about short stories? It includes 25% of the work in Latin American topics, including the stories of Borges.
This course is offered every fall and spring. Students intending to apply this course to their certificate for CLAS must focus their work on Latin America/the Caribbean and submit their paper(s) to the Luis Bravo, CLAS Advisor bravo@pitt.edu

0573 Literature Of The Americas

23217 Tu Th 2:30 - 3:45 PM WRIT No Enroll Limit 22 Fielder, Elizabeth 121 CL

This course begins with an exploration of indigenous mythologies and religions of the pre-Columbian Americas, as well as traditions from West Africa that have been adapted to cultures in Latin America, the Caribbean, and the U.S. South. After familiarizing ourselves with some of these traditions, we will read works from contemporary Latin American, U.S., and Canadian literature that prove how practices and beliefs lived on through colonization and slavery. We will read and learn about alternative medicines, religious adaptations, approaches to life and death, and other knowledges absent from mainstream education. The theme of this semester’s class is “the curse,” and we will read novels, short stories, poetry, and films that center around conjure, hechizo, gopher, and other forms of curses that appear in the work of authors such as Toni Morrison, Junot Diaz, Isabel Allende, Cristina Garcia, William Faulkner, and Laura Esquivel.

Reading World Literature as Translation. (No knowledge of a foreign language is required). This course introduces students to the study of world literature as translated texts. We examine different English versions of literary texts (including the new Google Translator version) and also films dealing with translation: Villeneuve’s Arrival (2017) and Coppola’s Lost in Translation (2003). You will learn about how gender shapes the rendering of texts into English, including controversial versions of sexuality and of the US: Kafka’s Amerika, Beauvoir’s America Day by Day and The Second Sex, as well as Anzaldúa’s Borderlands and Char's and Vallejo's poems. We read theories of translation from Spain, Mexico, Argentina, Russia, Africa, the US, and other cultures. You can choose your own world lit./film topic or write your own short story on translation for a major assignment. The course satisfies GEC Writing (pending approval), 2nd Lit/Arts/Creative Expression; Engl. This course surveys the history of sport, focusing primarily on the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Its emphasis is on the changing nature and meaning of sport. It tackles several questions, including why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. We will look at sport in settings that range from baseball in the Caribbean to football in American Samoa, and rugby in South Africa, as well as focus on the role of sport in Pittsburgh.

This course is offered at least once a year.

The University Honors College History of Sports course focuses on the emergence and evolution of sport during the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. It looks at the changing nature and meaning of sport, tackling why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. It will also look at the global consequences of sport's current model—that of global capitalism—on youth, play, and the meaning of sport. It will do so by looking at baseball academies in the Caribbean, football academies in Africa and Europe, junior hockey in Canada, and high school basketball and football in the United States and the South Pacific. The seminar format permits greater student involvement, research opportunities, and participation/discussion. The course asks you to address these questions and topics in seminar sessions as well as in writing about them. No prerequisites but come ready to explore.

This course ranges widely over the past two hundred years of Latin American history to explore the lives of women in all their complexity and diversity, from nineteenth-century enslaved wet nurses to indigenous marketwomen to modern ballet stars. Women’s lives in Latin America have embodied a series of contradictions that make us rethink U.S.-based assumptions about gender, sexuality, and power. This is a region where traditional gender roles coexist with a spectrum of sexual identities; where devout Catholicism and motherhood have at times fueled radical political action by women. We will draw on films, documentaries, and autobiographies as well as the writings of historians and anthropologists. Our goal will be to map the range and complexity of Latin American women’s lives and track how they have changed over time. Along the way we examine the major political, economic, and social trends in Latin American history and explore urgent current topics like migration, environmental activism, and organized crime.

This course is offered at least once a year.

This course examines the historical and contemporary relations between the United States and Latin American countries. After a brief historical overview of U.S. foreign policy toward Latin America, we will explore various themes central to U.S.-Latin American relations. Topics include the impact of U.S. imperial rule; revolutionary challenges to U.S. hegemony; defending national security, democracy, and human rights; the “war on drugs”; economic and cultural exchanges; and Latin American migration to the United States.

This course is offered at least once a year.

This course will examine historical patterns of race relations in the U.S., Latin America (Brazil, Cuba), Africa (South Africa), and Asia (India). For India, the focus will be more on caste relations, particularly untouchability, as a counterpoint to caste-like race relations in the U. S. and South Africa. The course will include pictures, videos and other materials acquired on trips to those locations in 1993, 1997 and 2002. The overall goal of the course will be comparative: to examine the operation of these processes in a variety of economic, political and cultural settings.

Focusing on a variety of musical traditions throughout the world, this course addresses factors that have influenced historical and contemporary musical performance practices. Special attention is placed on how political, economic, social, and religious factors influence musical aesthetics and notions of identity among performers and audiences. Positioning music within a broader context of postcolonial, technological, and transnational development, this course analyzes the ever-changing relationship between traditional and modern socio-musical approaches toward performance techniques, musical transmission, and intercultural exchange.

In this general survey of music in Latin America, you will become familiar with important styles from Mexico, Nicaragua, Colombia, Venezuela, Cuba, Brazil, Argentina, Peru and Chile. We will develop an historical and musical framework for describing traditional and popular musics, connecting sound to the lived experiences of performers and audiences. You will have the opportunity to explore additional regional styles, classical music and transnational genres through a case study of a musician using secondary research and/or Pittsburgh-based fieldwork. The course will be taught in a lecture-discussion format with extensive use of recordings and films. A workshop on Andean music and Latin American guitar technique will be included.

This course provides students with basic information about a range of political systems outside the United States and teaches them to use that information to examine major theories about politics. The course is also designed to help students understand the government and the politics of the United States in comparative perspective and to develop some understanding of comparative methodology and the logic of comparison as a social science method. Depending on the interests, area of expertise, and inclinations of the particular instructor, some regions and topics might be emphasized more heavily than others.

The course introduces students to interdisciplinary methods and approaches to "global studies." It draws on case studies of current global issues and trends that require students to think analytically and critically about how we approach, interpret and respond to 'global' phenomena, and about the consequences for different regions, cultures and localities. In this the usefulness, complexity and controversy of the concept of globalization as a key analytical tool is assessed, and students develop an ability to engage with core debates regarding the impact of globalization on culture, economic and social equality, politics and governance, security, and sustainable development.

Developing a new democracy is a process, with at least two main parts. First the country must move away from authoritarian rule. The first part of the course, therefore, will examine why (or why not) countries make that transition and how they do so. The second part of the course will then examine why some countries are more successful in their transition, based on an examination of civil society and the types of political institutions (such as political parties, the executive system, and the judiciary) that countries develop. What influences these choices and how do these choices affect success and stability of the new democracy? Has international aid been successful in helping countries develop democratic practices?

This course will examine the major problems involved in the study and understanding of change in "less developed countries," the main approaches and theories applied to these problems, and the criticisms directed at some of these approaches. In particular, it will consider attempts to understand "development" by reference to the earlier experiences of Europe and the United States and will evaluate the relevance of such an approach to the current problems of the underdeveloped world. This seminar covers the basic approaches and methods in the study of comparative politics. By the end of the course you will be familiar with some of the most prominent works in the field and will able to bring new analytical tools into your design of comparative research. The seminar will cover two large themes. First, we will explore some of the most prominent theoretical perspectives in comparative politics: historical sociology, modernization theory, political economy approaches to development and inequality, the study of political culture and civil society, and different approaches to political institutions. Most of the books selected for this seminar are exemplars—models of research that have inspired later scholarly work in our field. I have made a conscious choice of selecting books over journal articles, since you will read a large number of articles in more specialized courses. Second, the course will deal with methodological questions. How do we select cases for comparative research? How do we build analytical categories in order to make comparisons across societies? How should we structure a comparison in order to draw causal inferences? What is the relationship between small-N comparison and large-N statistical work? Since the 1970s, a significant literature in the field has addressed those questions, but over the past two decades, the methodological debate in comparative politics has expanded considerably.

People’s health is increasingly tied to global forces such as climate change, globalization of food production and distribution, migration, and international finance and trade policies. The course explores how globalization impacts health outcomes in the United States and around the world. Students learn about how global trade and international regulations affect governments' ability to control the “problems without passports” that impact the health and well-being of their populations. In addition, we consider factors shaping inequalities in access to health services.

The primary goal of this course is to introduce students to the cultural histories of the Hispanic world, with a particular emphasis on Latin America. Through a multidisciplinary approach, we will study the interaction of social, political, ethnic, racial, and gender dynamics, and the resulting transformations in Latin America, past and present. After a study of pre-contact Iberian and Amerindian societies, we will critically examine the ensuing conflicts that characterized the three centuries of contested colonial rule in Latin America. We will then focus on the different national projects and revolutions that shaped the current geopolitical landscape through both cultural manifestations as well as discourses of national identity and calls for patriotic behavior. We will close with an overview of some of the challenges actors across Latin America face at the turn of the millennium. Throughout the semester, the goal will be both to learn about Latin America and about how it has been imagined by its most influential past and present thinkers, tracing differences and continuities.

This course introduces students to the cultural history of the Hispanic World. Starting with the study of Pre-Colombian civilizations and the controversial politics of the Spanish Conquest we will discuss the conflicts involved in the transformation of Latin America. Through a broad variety of texts; chronicles, documentaries, films, fiction and novels, students will learn about the Spanish-speaking world and also explore the complex interactions implied in the process of colonization, in the foundation of national identities and in the creation of cultural traditions. We will stress the importance that these social and political tensions have in order to understand the past but also we will analyze its impact in the present.

This course will focus on the short stories of Jorge Luis Borges (1899-1986), particularly on those of Ficciones (1944) and El Aleph (1949), but with attention also to earlier stories (Historia universal de la infamia, 1935) and later ones (El informe de Brodie, 1970, and El libro de arena, 1975). Attention will be paid to Borges's theory of narrative, particularly to his audacious use of verisimilitude. Stories will be read carefully and in depth, using the Fishburn and Hughes Dictionary of Borges, the Finder's Guide and Timeline on the Borges Center website (www.borges.pitt.edu) and other resources. Issues to be examined include the weaving together of fiction and history, uses of the fantastic, the pleasures of paradox.

This course attempts to examine writing and art produced by women. A writer from the Colony, as poet Juana Inés de la Cruz, or a Puerto Rican singer as Lucesita Benitez or a character as Teresa in the film Retrato de Teresa, or painters as Frida Kahlo (Mexico) or Luisa Géigel (Puerto Rico) are all important characters within a timeline, a context, and the struggle for voice and visibility. Ours is an intersectional approach to patriarchy, violence, sexuality, race, and art, which are the five topics of this course. Each will be preceded by a theoretical or sociological essay with its corresponding examples (writing, performance, music or film). Under Jean Franco’s concept concerning the “struggle for interpretive power”, and the vision of women as “double agents” (Massiello), art becomes a creative way of envisioning a different world where women are no longer underestimated nor subjected to the patriarchal order. As art is inquiry, these texts open a rich dialogue concerning language (Juana Inés de la Cruz), violence (Enríquez, Allende, Bolaño, Segato, Galindo), love (Lispector, Storni, Dávila, Agustini, Lair), race (Burgos, Anzaldúa, Dávila, Ferré, black feminists), fear (Bassi, Berman, Llosa), geography and urbanism (Santa Cruz) and performative art (Eltit and Galindo). Each topic will be examined from a multiplicity of perspectives in order to render an intersectional approach to a sociological, economic, racial and political situation such as Juarez “maquiladoras”, the “guerra sucia” and the disappeared, las Madres de Mayo movement, geography, women artists as cultural icons, murder and rape as exercise of masculine power, among others. Law will also be part of this course through the examination of “crimen pasional” and the special visit of Law Professor Chloe Georas, who will lecture on “Coloniality, Performance and Gender in the Courtroom and Beyond”, which deals with Loreta Bobbitt's "malicious wounding", her trial, and the cultural, sexual and racial politics involving its repercussions. Georas sets the stage by addressing the location of Latinos in the trans-American social imaginary, profoundly marked by the "coloniality of power". Students will enrich their knowledge of Latin American literature and culture through a look at the artistic production of some of its great writers and artists from the Colony to contemporaneity.

Coloniality, Visuality, Race, Laughter Overview This course is an invitation to think questions of subalternity, coloniality and modernity, with a particular emphasis on the productive projects that emerge as responses to the former. For instance, how should relations between the West and its others be conceived? Should they be thought as dynamics of repression and imposition done by one party over the other, or are there commonalities and denials of them, active acts of copying and appropriating and projecting? Are we talking about conscious acts and/or about complex mechanisms of self-denial, veiling and projection? In what conditions can marginalized voices de-center Western racialized taxonomies that determine who can legitimately speak and about what, and effectively propose new articulations of culture, power and identity? How are these Other thinkings to be understood? Are they the expression of a pre-existing, essential difference? Are they spaces from which to produce a difference that makes a difference, unrelated to the non-western? What roles do epistemology, race, vision and laughter play? We will search for answers scrutinizing a plurality of materials in terms of disciplines, areas and perspectives, and examine – among others – the notions of border thinking, mimesis, survivance, subalternity, double consciousness, and the third eye. Material and class discussion will be in English.

This course will look at the earliest references to the gaucho (Concolocorvo's Lazarillo de los ciegos caminantes), the important discussion of the gaucho in Sarmiento's Facundo, and later versions (Gerchunoff's Los gauchos judíos, Güiraldes's Don Segundo Sombra). The main focus will be "gauchesque poetry" ("poesía gauchesca"), a unique genre that began in Uruguay at the time of the independence wars (Bartolomé Hidalgo) through the works of Hilario Ascasubi (Santos Vega, 1851 and other works), Estanislao del Campo (Fausto, 1866), Antonio Lussich (Los tres gauchos orientales, 1872) and José Hernández (El gaucho Martín Fierro, 1872, and La vuelta de Martín Fierro, 1879). Critics to be considered include Angel Rama (Los gauchipolíticos rioplatenses), Josefina Ludmer (El género gauchesco) and Julio Schwartzman (Letras gauchas). Careful attention will be paid to formal questions (versification, creation of fictional characters, relations between author, characters and text, etc.) and to the uses of the gauchesque genre in debates about politics, the relations between high and low culture (and the country and the city), and arguments about Argentine and Uruguayan nationalism.

This course is designed to examine the history of organized crime not only within the United States, but from an International perspective as well. The emergence of "non-traditional" groups which are competing for power and profits will be examined, as well as the alliances between various criminal groups that have evolved, resulting in the phenomenon of "transnational" organized crime. Those "non-traditional" groups include, but are not necessarily limited to, domestic and international terrorist organizations, the reasons for their development as well as the perceived risk to American citizens both in a domestic environment and abroad. Neither organized crime nor a terrorist organization can be effectively discussed without integrating the evolution of U.S. Drug Policy, which will be included. Finally, the various government tactics implemented to counter the threats mentioned herein as well as the impact on the private sector will be integrated into lectures throughout the program.

This course introduces the core concepts of human security, examines the institutions that promote them, and probes the advantages and limitations of human security as a means of addressing difficult policy issues. Human security treats individuals and communities, rather than states and institutions, as the fundamental units of analysis. It calls for an integration of individuals’ security and integrity with state security and sovereignty. Analyzing security at the level of individuals instead of states raises important challenges and opportunities for observers and practitioners of development, conflict and peace, human security, and investigate substantive policy agendas affecting human security on a range of global issues. We grapple with both direct and structural violence especially among vulnerable populations, and with debates about prioritizing or narrowing human security threats and referents. And we explore how a diverse set of actors develop global public policy responses by articulating new policy agendas and defining policy recommendations. Throughout the term we assess the advantages and drawbacks of the human security.

This is a survey of development policies, issues, institutions, and resources for professionals working in development. Lectures, discussions, and presentations in class focus on analysis of development policies, and on new and significant policy issues, skills, methodologies, and resources. The course helps students develop the ability to analyze development issues from several perspectives, understand the breadth of international development as a field of professional service and academic study, and clarify their priorities for acquiring skills in preparation for that service. Students completing the course will be able to grasp the history of approaches and experiences with development, identify and critically analyze major institutions involved, assess political and institutional environments of development, employ some key social science and administrative tools, and recognize and understand principles of other significant skills and emerging methodologies in development practice. The course is organized in three parts: 1) dynamics of development and social change; 2) development management: who's in charge?; and 3) contemporary issues and skills. Throughout the course we will introduce, discuss, and return to case studies that illuminate key issues and themes: the global hiv/aids pandemic, microfinance programs in development, the chad-cameroon oil pipeline project, water system privatization, and the global and local food prices and production.

In this course students examine global human rights as an evolving social and political institution, analyze human rights violations and the challenges of human rights practice, and learn how serious threats to human security may be addressed. We examine key human rights concepts, theories and laws, and related controversies that often obstruct international action on human rights (e.g. origins and nature of rights, universality and cultural relativity claims, conflicting rights, state sovereignty, and notions of obligations and accountability). We then examine the field of international action for human rights (e.g., states, inter-governmental actors, non-governmental actors and civil society) and the core dimensions and challenges of human rights work. Throughout the course, human rights target groups (such as women, children, and refugees) and current topics (such as genocide, child soldiering, gender violence, and peacekeeping) are examined as case studies, illustrating key principles and challenges, and providing insight into the range and depth of current human rights and their practice across fields. Students also select a specific human rights topic for major assignments, including a human rights issue brief and a comparative case study of international action on human rights.

We use basic conceptual frameworks from economics and quantitative methods to examine economic development issues. We begin by discussing Amartya Sen's concept of 'development as freedom' and measures of development such as the Human Development Index. We examine when the market and government can serve as appropriate mechanisms to allocate resources within the economy. We discuss the institutions that are needed to ensure that markets function well. We study innovations, such as disclosure programs, that reduce corruption. We examine gender-sensitive pro-poor strategies, such as micro-credit programs, the granting of property rights to women, investment into girls' schooling and women's reproductive health. We study World Trade Organization provisions that assist or impede poor countries' access to drugs in combating AIDS and other public health crises. We review the rules... of the WTO that attempt to balance free trade and countries' ability to protect public health and the environment. We discuss the role of international trade (e.g., OECD subsidies for agriculture), foreign aid and debt in encouraging or impeding economic development. Students will be graded on policy memos that are well written, based on quantitative and qualitative evidence, and oral briefings that recommend solutions to development challenges faced by governments, international organizations, non-governmental organizations or corporations.

The goal of this two-credit course is to provide you with fundamental skills to identify, use and create scales and indices for research and evaluation. The course will be primarily based on classical measurement theory, yet we will discuss item response theory as well. We will also cover good measurement processes, including establishing and evaluating validity and reliability. We will address communication of measurement principles and applications to lay and scientific audiences. Throughout the course, materials will highlight the influence that culture and socio-demographics have on measurement tools and their validity.
Note: The courses listed below are not "Latin American Area Courses." They are language instruction courses. Please see the previous pages for Latin American AREA courses. You may use the courses listed below to meet the language proficiency requirement of the Latin American Certificate/Related Concentration. Please refer to the University Schedule of classes for registration numbers, days, times, etc.

Spanish for Business was created especially for business students, MBA candidates, and young professionals studying at University of Pittsburgh and looking to build their resumes and enhance their Spanish with specific, fundamental, and relevant Spanish for the Business world. This is a customized Spanish Course focusing on Peninsular and Latin American Business practices. In addition, it will introduce advanced business terminology and usage. This class will be conducted in a seminar form throughout the semester, with a strong focus on speaking, listening, writing, and reading practice at the advanced level. Prerequisite(s): PREQ: SPAN 0020 or 0025 (MIN GRADE Check with the department on how often this course is offered.

This course provides a thorough analysis of the linguistic problems in teaching Spanish to speakers of English with particular emphasis on problems of interference by transfer from the native to the target language. Contrastive analysis will be used as a method of problem solving. Study of grammar (morphology and syntax), with attention to certain techniques in foreign language teaching, will be covered. Several workshops will focus on specific areas of Spanish Applied Linguistics useful for teachers as well as for learners of Spanish. Prerequisite(s): PREQ: [SPAN 0020 and 0025 (MIN GRADE 'C' for Listed Courses) PLAN: Spanish (BA, BPH)] or [SPAN 0020 or 0025 (MIN GRADE 'C' for Listed Courses) PLAN: Spanish] Check with the department on how often this course is offered.

This course provides students with a foundation in second language (L2) acquisition research. It examines theories and research in L2 acquisition and teaching practices as well as the individual factors that affect the relative success in L2 learning. This course will look at how different methodologies have approached the teaching-learning practice. As a practical component, students will have the opportunity to practice different teaching methodologies.
