www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas  * 412-648-7392*  clas@pitt.edu

Students are encouraged to enroll in courses on Latin America/the Caribbean or to participate in the programs of Latin American Studies—Related Concentration, Undergraduate or Graduate Certificate. Many of the undergraduate courses on this list may be used to satisfy the School of Arts and Sciences foreign culture or non-Western culture requirement or other general education requirements. Need advice concerning registration or want information about the certificates or related concentration? Please contact Julian Asenjo (email juasenjo@pitt.edu or phone 648-7396).

Students also are welcome to attend CLAS events—lectures, films, workshops, concerts, conferences, and the annual Latin American and Caribbean Festival. See the monthly schedule of activities on the CLAS website: http://www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas or call 412-648-7392 for a printed copy.

Important Information for Students and Advisors

Program Registration: To be officially enrolled in the CLAS certificate program, students must complete an application for admission to CLAS. Admissions are done on a rolling basis. The only pre-requisite is interest in Latin American related topics. There are no deadlines, nor is there an application fee. However, the sooner a student enrolls, the sooner they may be eligible for awards, grants, and fellowships from CLAS.

Acceptable Certificate Courses: Courses in this list with titles typed in ALL CAPS are accepted to fulfill Latin American Studies area course requirements. Courses with titles typed in Upper and Lower Case are international courses in which a significant amount of the content is Latin American. For these courses to count towards the certificate, work must be focused on Latin America. (If the professor requires a paper or papers, bibliography, readings, etc., you must do all the work on a Latin American topic. You will be asked to present your work for the course to the CLAS academic advisor.)

University of Pittsburgh Course Numbers

Courses numbered from:

- 0001 to 0999 are lower level undergraduate courses; they are not acceptable for graduate credit.
- 1000 to 1999 are upper level undergraduate courses; they are acceptable for both undergraduate and graduate certificates.
- 2000 to 2999 are master's level courses and those in the 3000s are doctoral level courses.

All Latin American courses for the certificate or related concentration will be counted as “inside” or “outside” the student’s major. The primary academic department of the faculty member teaching the course determines how the course will be counted. Examples: A course taught by Prof. Barry Ames that is cross-listed in Political Science and GSPIA will be counted as a course in Political Science (the primary academic department of Prof. Ames) no matter if the student registers for the course under GSPIA or PS. A course taught by Prof. John Beverley that is cross-listed in Spanish, English Literature, and Cultural Studies will be counted as a course in Hispanic Languages and Literatures (the primary academic department of Prof. Beverley).

Faculty: Please contact Julian Asenjo (email juasenjo@pitt.edu or phone x8-7396) if your course contains a significant amount of Latin American content and is missing from this list or if the information given about your course is incorrect. Revisions to this list are made as soon as corrections are received.
SCHEDULE OF LATIN AMERICAN AREA STUDIES COURSES
SPRING TERM (JANUARY 6 TO APRIL 22, 2016)

All courses are three credits unless otherwise indicated. Area courses are listed first and then their descriptions. A list of the Spanish/Portuguese language courses is found at the end of the document.

Note: the information on this course list is subject to change. Updates are available on the CLAS website:
www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas/students.html

SCHOOL AND FACULTY OF ARTS AND SCIENCE--ARTSC
Study abroad programs are offered in many countries of the Caribbean, Mesoamerica, Central and South America. Students should contact the Study Abroad Office, 802 William Pitt Union, to arrange an appropriate study program. See the CLAS academic advisor to verify how credits will count towards completion of the certificate or related concentration in Latin American Studies.

This course will examine the historical roots of contemporary Caribbean society. Major historical developments from the period of the subjugation of the indigenous populations through the era of slavery and the plantation system to the rise of modern nationalism and the impact of U.S. intervention will be examined, as will related socio-economic systems and institutions. The pan-regional approach which recognizes shared identity and experiences not only within the Caribbean but also with Africa and the American south will be preferred, although illustrative studies of some individual countries will be undertaken.

What do Akon and Rihanna have in common? They are both part of recent Diasporas from Africa and the Caribbean.
This course focuses on the issues and experiences of people of African descent in contemporary (20th and 21st centuries) migratory Diasporas from both Africa and the Caribbean. The course draws on extensive literature on migration, transnationalism, racial and ethnic identity formation, health, and other topics to illuminate the causes for migration and the experiences that migrants have in different host countries. What experiences do migrants from Africa and the Caribbean share? How do their experiences differ? How do migrants define themselves in new host countries? How do they stay connected to their homelands?

Culture contact studies in archaeology deal with a wide variety of topics such as cultural interaction in prehistory, the recognition of archaeological ethnic or cultural units, exchange and trade, warfare, migration and culture contact, frontiers and boundaries, and relationships between ‘peer polities’ as well as between those in colonialisit situations. We will range in time from prehistoric through historic times. This seminar on culture contact is designed to expose you to a wide variety of contemporary thought on this issue. While an archaeological perspective will be primary, we also examine culture contact using cultural anthropological and historical perspectives. In addition, culture contact in historical perspective and contacts between Native peoples and Europeans are discussed. We will examine what cultures of the world were like prior to European contact; the kinds of contacts they had with other groups; the uses of archaeology, ethno history, and history in studying situations of culture contact; and the effects of European contact on Native cultures. While we will examine contact as it occurred in a variety of situations around the world, special attention will be paid to contact between Native Americans and Europeans. Rather than viewing Natives as passive recipients and reactors to contact with Europeans, we will emphasize the active roles they played in incorporating aspects of European culture into their society and the effects they had on colonial and European cultures. Many of these studies provide models for examining contact in prehistoric situations.

This is a first level graduate seminar in Medical Anthropology. It is designed to be the second general course in medical anthropology and follows on Medical Anthropology I. It focuses on the key theoretical perspectives and methodological problems that have characterized the sub-field of medical anthropology. This course offers an intensive study of selected topics in contemporary theory and method in medical anthropology. Topics to be covered include biocultural approaches to health and healing, critical approaches to the study of biomedicine, interpretive approaches to ethnomedical systems, meaning centered approaches to understanding the experience of suffering and pain, and the social construction of illness and healing. The course will examine the construction of research problems from different theoretical perspectives in medical anthropology, an overview of methodological issues in research design in medical anthropology, discussions of the specific techniques of data collection and analysis associated with different theoretical approaches. Special topics investigated include the anthropology of the body and sexuality, and physician-patient communication. Other topics can be added in accordance with student interests. Prerequisites: Medical Anthropology I or consent of the instructor.

This course explores the transnational connections amongst different literatures, regions, and languages of the Americas, which came to be understood collectively with the 15th century European voyages as the "New World". We will raise such questions as: How does literature play a role in constructing people's visions of the world? What constitutes a literary tradition? In what traditions do the texts we read participate? How do those traditions overlap and differ? We will address these questions by reading several texts from the "New World," situating the texts with respect to one another, as well as to texts from the "Old World."

Through readings of a relatively wide range of English-language texts from Africa, the Americas and Europe - including works translated into English - spanning the period of the twentieth-century from roughly World War I to the present, this course will elaborate and explore the problematics of fragmentation, temporality and formal sensibility commonly associated with modernism.

Was the 20th century the prime time for dictators? To be sure, the last century saw many of them: Hitler, Stalin, Kim Jong-il, Gaddafi – to name but a few. Yet the term itself is much older. In Ancient Rome a dictatorship was an established short-term form of government in exceptional situations. Modern dictatorships, however, are a very different phenomenon, and last century’s extraordinary peak is connected to the historical changes of the 20th century. This course will take a comparative approach studying the preconditions of dictatorships, the “charismatic leadership” of dictators, the reasons for their rise and fall, as well as their legacies. The first part of the course will focus on Europe and the two most well-known dictators of that era – Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin. We will investigate the official methods and media that transmitted the ideologies and aimed to manufacture consent for National Socialism and Stalinist Communism. The second part of this course will be devoted to modern dictatorships outside of Europe, with case studies from Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East.

This course examines the historical origins of important changes taking place in Latin America today. Those changes include: the election of female presidents in several countries of the region; the rise of racially defined black (Afro-descendent) and indigenous (Amerindian) political movements; current environmental challenges and responses. Through readings, films, discussion and writing exercises, we will try to set those current events in their historical context and to think seriously about their implications for the future.

The course examines the impact of religion as a moral, intellectual, and institutional force in America from 1865 to the present. We seek to understand how religions have both shaped and reflected economic, social, and cultural conditions in the United States. The course format combines lecture with student discussion of religious conflicts and critical moments of cultural change. Documentary films, slides, and local sites are also used. Major emphases include religious responses to intellectual, scientific, and economic change, including Biblical criticism, evolutionary theory, immigration, urbanization, industrialization, Marxism, fascism, racism, feminism, and globalization.

We find dancing in every world culture and throughout history, but the dances of each place and time are specific, distinctive, and ever changing. This makes dance both an excellent and a problematic subject for cultural and historical comparisons. The Global History of Dance investigates the types, uses, and understandings of dance across the globe and examines shifting attitudes and practices from the Renaissance to today. We will consider themes such as dance as a spiritual practice, a tool of the state, and an expression of personal identity, and we will examine a broad diversity of styles, from belly dance to b-boying to ballet to bharata natyam. Participatory workshops and video viewing assignments will supplement lectures and readings, and students will write a performance review, as well as a research paper.

This course surveys the history of sport, focusing primarily on the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. Its emphasis is on the changing nature and meaning of sport. It tackles several questions, including why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. We will look at sport in settings that range from baseball in the Caribbean to football in American Samoa, and rugby in South Africa, as well as focus on the role of sport in Pittsburgh.

The history of sport and global capitalism is designed for students seeking to make their way as professionals and/or for those interested in global sport as a social and political force both in the U.S. and around the world. Focusing on the evolution of sport as a global industry and the creation of an imposing scholastic, community, and non-profit infrastructure, it equips students to understand and navigate those arenas. If, after graduation, students venture into the sports industry, scholastic sport, or sport for development, they should do so with their eyes wide open.

The Iberian peninsula: the birthplace of globalization? Beginning in the early fifteenth century, Portuguese and Spaniards left their homelands to establish trading posts, colonies, and missions in Africa, Asia, and the Americas. By the turn of the seventeenth century, Philip II, king of Spain and Portugal, ruled over a sprawling imperial web that stretched from Madrid and Lisbon to Mexico City to Manila and Macau – the first empire “on which the sun never set.” In this course, we will explore how that globe-spanning empire developed, and consider how it took different forms in different places. Spanish conquistadors toppled existing empires in Mexico and Peru, while the Portuguese colonization of Brazil proceeded more gradually; Portuguese influence in India was more limited, while the Spaniards were unable to realize their dreams of conquering China. We will investigate how the evolution of empire was shaped by the nature of relations between the representatives of Portugal, Spain, and the Catholic Church – officials, soldiers, adventurers, merchants, churchmen – and the peoples they encountered overseas. Looking at Catholic evangelization and global commercial exchange, we will see how modes of domination and interaction operated simultaneously. Throughout the course, we will consider how the Iberian empires of the early modern period have shaped the world we live in today.

This course examines the origins, course, and consequences of Latin America's three major social revolutions of the twentieth century. It begins with the Mexican Revolution (1910-40), focusing on the key role peasants played in promoting revolutionary change. The course then considers the socialist project of the Cuban Revolution (1959-). It concludes with Nicaragua's Sandinista Revolution (1979-90), the first revolution to freely give up power at the polls, in order to consider the complicated relationship between revolution and democracy.

The age of revolution has long been considered the beginning of western, and therefore of global, political modernity – the period in which liberal democracy declared victory over absolute monarchy, citizens over subjects, imperial nation-states over composite empires, the bourgeoisie over the nobility, industrialists over landowners, capitalism over feudalism, and wage-labor over slavery. But the rise of world history has complicated this view, drawing attention to the worldwide dimensions of many of these processes on the one hand, while questioning the utility of potentially Eurocentric frameworks within this broader global context on the other (for example, “democratic,” “Atlantic,” “bourgeois,” or “industrial” revolution). This course plans to engage with these debates by probing the conceptual, geographic, and chronological boundaries of this so-called “age of revolution.” It is designed to appeal to students from across multiple thematic and regional fields, including power and inequality, Atlantic, world, Europe, us, Latin America, and East Asia.

This course will explore select aspects of the vast history of migration, with an emphasis on works that illuminate how structures and ideas of power and inequality shape and are shaped by movement across borders. It will take a broad approach to the topic, linking labor migration with expulsion, displacement, and exile; considering how diverse forms of migration shape and are shaped by ideas about citizenship, race, gender, sexuality, and national belonging; and connecting the process and experience of migration with the making and remaking of communities and cities after migration. We will focus especially on the nineteenth to the twenty-first centuries and on movements of people from Europe, Asia, and the Middle East to the Americas; and from Latin America to the United States and Europe. An underlying thread will be the fundamental role that gender plays in migratory flows and the ways that migration differently impacts the lives of women and men. Multidisciplinary perspectives from history, anthropology, sociology, public policy, and law will inform our discussions. The course welcomes students from diverse disciplines, programs, and fields.

This course examines artistic developments in modern Latin America in relation to broader political, social, and economic forces. Latin America offers rich opportunities to study cases of artists and architects who worked in the service of governmental regimes during the twentieth century, such as Diego Rivera in Mexico and Oscar Niemeyer in Brazil. At the same time, we will consider cases in which artists employed artworks to challenge or subvert political repression, as occurred in Ecuador in the 1930s and in Chile during the dictatorship of Augusto Pinochet. Beyond politics, this course focuses on the tensions—indigenous vs. cosmopolitan, urban vs. rural, rich vs. poor—and the trans-Atlantic dialogues that have informed the production and reception of art and architecture in Latin America from the nineteenth century to the present day. Visits to the Carnegie Museum of Art and other local venues are an integral aspect of this course, offering opportunities to consider the contributions of artists from Latin America to modern and contemporary art across the globe.

From Mexican muralist David Alfaro Siqueiros’s Tropical America mural for downtown Los Angeles to U.S. sculptor Richard Serra’s monumental steel Tilted Arc for New York’s Federal Plaza, modern artworks installed in public spaces have been crucibles for political and artistic claims and controversies. Taking a continental and comparative approach, participants in this course will examine these and other key examples of twentieth-century public art from across North, Central, and South America and the Caribbean to analyze the following issues: public vs. private patronage; censorship; approaches to representing history, technology, and identity; and alternative modes of exhibition and dissemination. Case studies will be introduced via readings, presentations, and in-class discussions, as well as frequent visits to sites of public art on and off-campus. Over the course of the semester, participants will work closely with each other and the instructor to plan, write, and revise an individual 15-page research paper on a topic that bridges the course material and their specific interests within the history of art, architecture, and/or the built environment. This course is offered every fall and spring term, but with different topics.

Topics will include writing a dissertation, the publication process, teaching, work-life balance, and other issues.
Oil and other natural resources have played a crucial role in shaping the politics, development, and foreign relations of countries in all regions of the world. While experts originally believed that natural resource wealth would be a blessing for endowed countries, we now know they often impede economic growth, reinforce authoritarianism, exacerbate corruption, and cause conflict. This course will examine the political economy of oil, natural gas, minerals, and other natural resources to gain insight into why they can be a blessing or a curse. We will explore the role of governments, oil companies, OPEC, the demand for energy security, and environmental concerns in shaping the effects of natural resources.

The largest Latin American country, both in geographic size and population, Brazil is also the home of a dynamic national cinema that includes the critically acclaimed film City of God (2002), directed by Fernando Meirelles. Beyond the depiction of a nation still hindered by inequality, poverty and crime, lies a rich and diverse filmmaking tradition that waits to be explored. This course introduces students to canonical Brazilian films, alongside a set of key critical approaches to Brazilian society and the configuration of Brazilian film aesthetics. Starting with Cinema Novo (“New Cinema”) of the 1960s until the present, the films exemplify the main currents of Brazilian art cinema, its transformations and plurality, and distinctive representations of gender, race and cultural images (brasilidade). A selection of themes are considered with an attempt to choose accomplished and provocative works, but also ones that promote marginal stories, as well as those working in various filmic genres (drama, comedy, etc.) and modes (fiction, non-fiction, etc.). Equal attention will be paid to thematic and formal aspects of the films and to their historical significance, both within the history of Brazilian filmmaking and in terms of broader social, political, economic and cultural contexts. In addition to studying particular directors and their films, the course explores the creative use of the many components of film language in Brazilian cinema, such as camera movement, mise-en-scène, lighting, editing, and scoring. The goal is to provide an opportunity for understanding the principles behind the creative choices of female and male directors that make Brazilian cinema distinctive. Directors to be studied include Glauber Rocha (Black God, White Devil, 1964), Carla Camurati (Carlota Joaquina, 1995), Fernando Meirelles (City of God, 2002), and Sandra Werneck (Stolen Dreams, 2010). Films will be discussed in relation to the context of their production, from the 1960s to the present. All films will be in Portuguese with English subtitles. Language of instruction will be English. Written work may be submitted in English, Portuguese or Spanish.

The course examines the impact of religion as a moral, intellectual, and institutional force in America from 1865 to the present. Despite claims that the nation was becoming less religious, at least seven new religions were founded in the U.S. after the Civil War, while millions of migrants from southern and eastern Europe brought large numbers of Catholics and Jews to challenge the dominance of Protestants. We seek to understand how religions have both shaped and reflected economic, social, and cultural conditions in the United States. The course combines lecture with student discussion of religious conflicts and critical moments of cultural change, using primary sources and secondary interpreters. We also engage documentary films, slides, and local museums and historical sites. Major emphases include religious responses to intellectual, scientific, and economic change, including Biblical criticism, evolutionary theory, immigration, urbanization, industrialization, Marxism, fascism, racism, and feminism. We conclude with questions about the present day: is the United States an exception for its high levels of religious behavior or is secularism on the rise?

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the fascinating world of sociology. Through a series of lectures, films, documentaries and exercises, we will explore the contributions of both classical and contemporary sociologists to the understanding of human societies. The course will focus on the theories and methodological approaches of different authors and on the basic questions that have guided social inquiry since the birth of the discipline. How are human beings shaped by their social context? How are social contexts shaped by human beings? Are human beings free agents, or are their actions determined by their social context? How does social change occur? How is power exercised? What role should social scientists play in societies? These are all questions that have been addressed by different sociologists in the past and that inform the work of sociologists in the world today. The course will be of interest to students who are simply curious about sociology and to students who want to pursue a career in the social sciences in the future.

The multispecies approach to the Humanities and Literature accounts for the relationships between species as an essential part of the human experience. There are indigenous and conventional literary trends in Latin America that assume the human perspective to be non-exclusive of homo sapiens and shared by animals and other “nonhuman” entities. The course will explore shorts stories, myths and other expressions where this occurs, as well as some essays that discuss the issues involved. Global ecology and sustenance topics are an interdisciplinary component of the course.

The primary goal of this course is to examine the complex relationships between the indigenous peoples of the Andean region (mainly Peru and Bolivia, but also Ecuador and the north of Chile and Argentina) and the different institutions of Spanish colonialism. The course begins with an overview of Andean politics and societies under Inca rule, to then focus on the colonial period. The two main historical processes/periods studied are the long and protracted negotiations that went from the moment of contact between Incas and conquistadors to the establishment of the colonial regime in the 16th century, and the massive rebellions that took place all over the Andes toward the end of Spanish colonial rule, in the latter half of the 18th century. In both cases, we will study the interaction of political, artistic, religious, and racial dynamics, and the resulting historical transformations, using a multidisciplinary approach that will include anything from current scholarly debates to paintings and primary sources, at times even original manuscript ones.

Perez Cano, Tania

This course explores the creative work of Latin American writers and artists who deal with representations of the environment from a variety of perspectives, personal approaches and national and social contexts. These representations of the environment are analyzed through short stories, poetry, film, comic art, photography and performance. Some of the authors included are Horacio Quiroga, María Luisa Bombal, Julio Ramón Ribeyro, Jaime Quezada, Homero Aridjis, Vik Muniz, Edgar Clément, and Rubem Fonseca, among others. The urban and country landscapes, and their importance in the configuration of cultural oppositions such as civilization and barbarism, are reconfigured in the 20th century through new topics, like the disposable and the recyclable. The city as a symbol of chaos, contamination and human isolation emerges as a paradigm of a dystopian imagination that announces a future of ecological squalor and social and political turmoil. The emergence of a cultural imagination that reflects the utopian desire for a harmonious coexistence with the environment, while envisions an apocalyptic future for the whole planet, is closely related in Latin American authors and artists with questions about social conflicts, inequality, dictatorships and the exploitation of natural resources for the benefit of big corporations.

1404 LATIN AMERICAN TOPICS
Latin American Poetry
Poetry is one of the most fascinating literary genres, but poetry is also omnipresent outside poetry as a genre: it is a way of living, of experiencing, of creating another life. In this course, students will be guided through different types of poetry as a path to sensible knowledge and intervention. Reading in structure, allusion, and “poetic language” as such will place us within the limits of the genre “poetic” and its relation to an open disposition to intuition within the limits of form. This course will concentrate on a step by step immersion in the experience of reading and analyzing poetry from an affective point of view. Latin American contemporary poetry will be our main focus, although this tradition will be placed within a larger context of what is poetry and its impact on life. In this respect, some essays by European and Latin American theorists and poets defining what poetry is will be put at the center of our meditation.

Prerequisite(s): PREQ: [(SPAN 1260 or 1280 or 1400 or 1600) and (0050 or 1250) (MIN GRADE C for Listed Courses; PLAN: Spanish (BA, BPH)] or [SPAN 0050 or 1250) (MIN GRADE C for Listed Courses) and PLAN: Spanish (MN)]

This course will introduce graduate students to the tools of genetic criticism, a contemporary approach to the study of modern manuscripts that was first developed in France in the 1970s but now is used widely around the world to study the early stages of literary and artistic creation. Critique génétique focuses on texts as process, with an emphasis on early outlines, drafts and revisions. Initially developed to study literary manuscripts such as those of Heinrich Heine, Gustave Flaubert and Marcel Proust, it has now been used productively in the study of Herman Melville (John Bryant), William Wordsworth, Alfred Tennyson and Emily Dickinson (Sally Bushell), Gerard Manley Hopkins, William Butler Yeats, Joseph Conrad, E. M. Forster, James Joyce and Virginia Woolf (Fordham), José Hernández, Juan Bautista Alberdi and José Hernández (Élida Lois), Juan José Saer (Premat), Jorge Luis Borges, Manuel Puig, Silva Ocampo and Juan José Saer (Balderston), Alejandra Pizarnik (Di Ció), Samuel Beckett and James Joyce (van Dulle and Slote), José Donoso (Bocaz) and others. A good anthology of writings from the French theorists in the field is Deppman et al., Genetic Criticism (Penn), while good introductions in other languages include Biasi’s Génétique des textes and Lois’s Génesis de escritura y estudios culturales. An interesting book on the applications of the field to music and theatrical manuscripts is Kinderman and Jones’s Genetic Criticism and the Creative Process. This is the third time I will teach a graduate seminar on this field at Pitt but the first time I will offer it in English; the previous two courses resulted in joint publication of genetic/critical editions of short stories and a fragment of a novel (of Silvina Ocampo for the Revista Escritural at the Université de Poitiers and of Juan Carlos Onetti for Lo que los archivos cuentan at the National Library of Uruguay). I would be interested in having a mix of students from HAA, Music, English, Theatre Arts and the language departments, as well as from my home department of Hispanic Languages and Literatures. There will be a conference associated with this course, “Text as Process: Genetic and Textual Criticism in the Digital Age,” on April 4-6, 2016. Participants who have confirmed so far are Peter Shillingsburg, Alejandro Higashi, Mariana Di Ció, Julio Premat, María Laura Bocaz, Sam Slote and María Julia Rossi, with several others in the wings. There will also be work with literary archives in Pittsburgh such as the Ramón Gómez de la Serna Papers in the Hillman Library. There are also important archives online.

This course is designed to examine the history of organized crime not only within the United States, but from an International perspective as well. The emergence of "non-traditional" groups which are competing for power and profits will be examined, as well as the alliances between various criminal groups that have evolved, resulting in the phenomenon of "transnational" organized crime. Those "non-traditional" groups include, but are not necessarily limited to, domestic and international terrorist organizations, the reasons for their development as well as the perceived risk to American citizens both in a domestic environment and abroad. Neither organized crime nor a terrorist organization can be effectively discussed without integrating the evolution of U.S. Drug Policy, which will be included. Finally, the various government tactics implemented to counter the threats mentioned herein as well as the impact on the private sector will be integrated into lectures throughout the program.

This course provides a thorough analysis of the linguistic problems in teaching Spanish to speakers of English with particular emphasis on problems of interference by transfer from the native to the target language. Contrastive analysis will be used as a method of problem solving. Study of grammar (morphology and syntax), with attention to certain techniques in foreign language teaching, will be covered. Several workshops will focus on specific areas of Spanish Applied Linguistics useful for teachers as well as for learners of Spanish. Prerequisite(s): PREQ: [SPAN 0020 and 0025 (MIN GRADE ‘C’ for Listed Courses) PLAN: Spanish (BA, BPH)] or [SPAN 0020 or 0025 (MIN GRADE ‘C’ for Listed Courses) PLAN: Spanish]

Prerequisite(s): PREQ: SPAN 0020 or 0025 (MIN GRADE C for Listed Courses)
