Students are encouraged to enroll in courses on Latin America/the Caribbean or to participate in the programs of Latin American Studies—Related Concentration, Undergraduate or Graduate Certificate. Many of the undergraduate courses on this list may be used to satisfy the School of Arts and Sciences foreign culture, non-Western culture requirement or other general education requirements. Need advice concerning registration or want information about the certificates or related concentration? Please contact Julian Asenjo (email juasenjo@pitt.edu or phone 648-7396).

Students also are welcome to attend CLAS events—lectures, films, workshops, concerts, conferences and the annual Latin American and Caribbean Festival. See the monthly schedule of activities on the CLAS website: http://www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas

Important Information for Students and Advisors

Program Registration: To be officially enrolled in the CLAS certificate program, students must complete an application for admission to CLAS. Admissions are done on a rolling basis. The only pre-requisite is interest in Latin American related topics. There are no deadlines, nor is there an application fee. However, the sooner a student enrolls, the sooner they may be eligible for awards, grants, and fellowships from CLAS.

Acceptable Certificate Courses: Courses in this list with titles typed in ALL CAPS are accepted to fulfill Latin American Studies area course requirements. Courses with titles typed in upper and lower case are international courses in which at least 25% of the content is Latin American. To have international courses count towards the certificate, focus your work on Latin America. (If the professor requires a paper or papers, bibliography, readings, etc., you must do all the work on a Latin American topic. You will be asked to present your work for the course to the CLAS academic advisor.)

Other Courses: Students may, with the permission of the CLAS advisor, register for a course with international content, a directed study, independent study or readings course taught by a CLAS faculty member. These courses will count towards the certificate/related concentration only if the student focuses specifically on a Latin American topic for the course.

University of Pittsburgh Course Numbers

Courses numbered from:
- 0001 to 0999 are lower level undergraduate courses; they are not acceptable for graduate credit.
- 1000 to 1999 are upper level undergraduate courses; they are acceptable for both undergraduate and graduate certificates.
- 2000 to 2999 are master's level courses and those in the 3000s are doctoral level courses.

All Latin American courses for the certificate or related concentration will be counted as “inside” or “outside” the student’s major. The primary academic department of the faculty member teaching the course determines how the course will be counted. Examples: A course taught by Prof. Barry Ames that is cross-listed in Political Science and GSPIA will be counted as a course in Political Science (the primary academic department of Prof. Ames) no matter if the student registers for the course under GSPIA or PS. A course taught by Prof. John Beverley that is cross-listed in Spanish, English Literature, and Cultural Studies will be counted as a course in Hispanic Languages and Literatures (the primary academic department of Prof. Beverley).

Faculty: Please contact Julian Asenjo (email juasenjo@pitt.edu or phone 648-7396) if your course contains 25% Latin American content and is missing from this list or if the information given about your course is incorrect. Revisions to this list are made as soon as corrections are received.

Graduate Course Offerings
2355 World War II, Cold War and Its Impact on Developing Nations
12676 Mo No recitation Rizzi, Michael
05:45 PM-09:00 PM
3431 Posvar Hall
This is a policy-relevant history course that examines the international relations of the 20th century, as well as the lasting legacy of the cold war today. After discussing the causes, conduct, and consequences of World War II, students study the rise of the Soviet Union and iron curtain, postwar trusteeships, and the process of decolonization by which large swaths of Africa and Asia obtained their independence. Class lectures cover just war theory, the geopolitics of war, the rise of NATO, dictatorship and democratization in Latin America, and the major cold war conflicts in Cuba, Afghanistan, Iran, and Vietnam. Using historical case studies, students learn important practical skills useful for a career in diplomacy, international negotiation, or statecraft, as seen through the eyes of master practitioners. Students must focus their papers on Latin America to have this course count towards the certificate in Latin American Studies.
Prerequisite(s): none
Undergraduate and graduate students are welcome.

A215 Public Health
The core course provides an overview of the social and behavioral sciences and their importance in the inter-disciplinary field of public health. A primary emphasis is on the social-ecological model, its application to public health issues, and its use in the development of policies, strategies, interventions, and programs. The course content will introduce students to several relevant social and behavioral theories as well as a range of community health assessment and planning models used by public health professionals in both domestic and international venues. Through a series of assigned readings, discussion exercises, group projects, quizzes and written assignments, students will enhance their knowledge and awareness of the role of social and behavioral sciences in public health and its relevance to their specific discipline. At the conclusion of the course, students will be able to: identify the important social and behavioral determinants of health; describe the inter-relationships between the social, behavioral, bio-medical, physiological, and environmental factors related to individual and community health; identify the major health disparities related to social, behavioral and economic factors; describe the role of culture and socio-economic status in health behavior, access to services, and decision-making; and understand the importance of community partnerships and participatory approaches in the development, implementation, management and evaluation of community policies and programs.

The purpose of this course is to offer a wide survey of the anthropology (including archeology, history, and geography) of Latin America. It will emphasize changes of Latin America and Caribbean societies and cultures through time, and focus on key issues/themes that have consistently surfaced in Latin American cultural anthropology and continuing priority, relevance, and interest up to the present. Special attention is placed on historical, political, and economic contexts as a means of understanding contemporary cultural anthropological research in Latin America and Caribbean anthropology. This course is primarily tailored to students with little or no knowledge of, or experience in, Latin America and the Caribbean, will consist of lectures, readings, and films. Grades will be based on three non-cumulative, in-class exams, two written essays, and attendance.

0500 COLONIAL LATIN AMERICA

18997 Tu Th 01:00 PM-04:15 PM G13 CL

Welcome to an exciting survey of Colonial Latin America and the Caribbean, where we will re-examine and debate the history of our southern neighbors, especially from Columbus’ visit in 1492 up to the independence wars of 1810-1825. Emphasis will be placed on 1) Perspectives from indigenous peoples pre- and post-Columbus, 2) The rise of the plantation complex, the hierarchical caste system and the Catholic church, 3) How workers, slaves, and women negotiated the new social order, 4) Land and resource management, 5) The silver, gold and sugar rushes that fueled the emerging Atlantic capitalist system, and 6) political struggles including popular and slave rebellions. The course will require mainly readings and discussions. Students from all majors are welcome to come learn about the history and culture of this fascinating region.

Prerequisite(s): none

This course is offered at least once a year.
Since 1990, all Latin American countries—except Cuba—are democracies, and authoritarian setbacks are not a serious threat anymore. However, the level of development varies deeply in the region and many nations face profound challenges to become stable democracies. Presidents forced to resign before their mandates expire, executives that antagonize/takeover the Judicial Power and/or the legislature, under-institutionalized party systems, clientelism, populism and corruption in a context of social disparity and discontent makes the consolidation of democracies an urgent task in some countries. The overarching question to be explored in this course is what forces—such as institutional and social—affect the emergence, development, interruption, reemergence and consolidation of democracy in the region. We will explore current topics such as “street coups”, social movements, US-Latin American relations, (anti-)neoliberal economics, regional integration and globalization. Current politics cannot be understood without an understanding of path dependence. Thus, the course is divided in three main historical periods. First, we will briefly reexamine Latin American history from its conquest to the end of World War II (1492-1945). The aim is to uncover the demographic and geographical setting with its unique economic, social and political evolution. The second part covers from the beginning of the Cold War until the end of military dictatorships, examining a period of political and economic experiments (e.g., revolutions, ISI policies, coups and military governments). The third part covers from the last wave of transitions to democracy (since 1978) to the current challenges of democratic consolidation. Concepts of the comparative method will guide our discussion, with a special focus on institutional development.

Prerequisite(s): none

This course is offered infrequently.

The aim of this course is to introduce students to the broad spectrum of histories and theories of global civilization. This includes examining processes of expansion and interconnections in social, economic, political, and cultural life across various societies. In this respect, today's globalization is approached as a process with deep roots in the comparative history of civilizations, and not simply as a contemporary phenomenon. Parallels to contemporary processes of globalization can be seen in the spread of trade routes, world religions, common languages, habits, manners, fashions, lifestyles, ideas and ideologies. These have foundations in migrations, conquests, ancient world systems, discoveries, travels, and economic networks no less profound in the past than in the present.

1361 Comparative Political Party Systems

18992 Tu Th No recitation. Enroll Carreras, Limit 50 Miguel
06:00 PM-09:15 PM
207 Lawrence Hall

This course will investigate one pillar of democracy, political parties, by studying the nature and results of party interaction and party competition. It is a comparative politics course and as such compares political phenomena across countries, as well as over time. The focus is generally on Europe and Latin America (many examples will be drawn from these two cases), but students will be welcome to apply the material to other contexts. Occasionally, we will also discuss the two-party system in the United States. The goals of the course are threefold. First, we will seek to understand how different party systems come about, focusing on the history of political competition, social cleavages, and electoral rules. Second, we will address how variation in party competition leads to different political outcomes. In particular, the course will assess whether the characteristics of the party system affect policy outcomes. Third, we will evaluate arguments about party system change. If parties are losing its partisans in both advanced and new democracies, how does that affect the dynamics of party interaction? Are party systems becoming more volatile and less institutionalized? It is impossible to discuss party systems without a clear understanding of its constitutive elements (political parties). Hence, we will start the course by discussing different definitions of the concept of “political party”. We will then proceed to explore basic elements of party organization (structure, leadership, membership, financing). The first part will conclude with a discussion of the different classifications of party systems present in the literature, starting with the classic Sartorian typology (number of parties and polarization). More recent classifications of party systems in terms of institutionalization will also be presented in this part of the course. The second part of the course will seek to explain the formation and institutionalization of parties and party systems. Different theories that explain the formation of different types of party systems will be discussed. In this part of the course, we will adopt a historical perspective and focus mostly on the formation and evolution of party systems in Western Europe in the 19th century. In order to understand why and how party systems stabilize, we will explore explanations based on the dynamics of political competition (e.g. impact of mass mobilization on party politics), societal cleavages (ethnic, religious, and cultural divisions), and electoral institutions (impact of electoral systems on the number of parties). After understanding how party systems institutionalize, the third part of the course will present theories of party system change. Under what conditions are we likely to see a supportive shift (realignment) among the parties in the system? When can we expect citizens to lose confidence on all the parties in the system (dealignment)? What factors best explain the rise of new and populist parties in previously stable systems? This part of the course will adopt both an institutional and a behavioral perspective to explain changes in institutions (parties and party systems) and in citizens’ attitudes toward these institutions. The final and most important part of the course will ask why party systems matter. We will examine how party systems shape policy-making and the impact of party competition on a variety of political outcomes generally viewed as significant to peoples’ lives, from economic performance to accountability to the sustainability of democracy itself. This course will introduce the student to modern Mexican film. The trajectory of the course covers a basic canon of essential works from the high point of Mexico’s so-called “Golden Age” up until the present (roughly 1940 – 2010). Between an introductory discussion on primitive Mexican film and a closing discussion on future directions, the course will center on the work of five directors: Fernández, Buñuel, Ripstein, Sariñana and González Iñárritu. Alongside the films we will read two kinds of documents: on the one hand, a selection of film criticism and scholarship; on the other hand, a set of essays on Mexican cultural politics relevant to the themes engaged in the cinematic work. Students may choose to write a series of short papers or one long paper. Comparative work is encouraged. The language of instruction will be English. Undergraduate students taking this course for credit toward the Spanish Major or Minor are required to complete all assignments in Spanish. Prerequisite(s): none.

Language Course Descriptions

SPAN – Spanish

SPAN 0001  Elementary Spanish 1  5 cr.
This course is designed to develop the students’ communicative proficiency through the teaching of all four language skills: listening, speaking, reading, and writing. Grammatical structures, vocabulary and readings are presented as tools for developing good communications skills. The course also aims to foster cultural awareness of the Spanish-speaking world.
Prerequisite(s): none  No recitation.  Enrollment Limit: 20

SPAN 0002  Elementary Spanish 2  5 cr.
A continuation of Spanish 0001, the course builds on the skills acquired in the first course, as students continue to develop their communicative language skills in Spanish.
Prerequisite(s): Before registering for this course, students must have completed SPAN 0001 with a grade of C or better.  No recitation.  Enrollment Limit: 20

SPAN 0003  Intermediate Spanish 3  L  3 cr.
This course builds on the skills acquired during the elementary sequence. It includes a functional review of the basic language structures and introduces more complex structures. The course has a strong cultural component.
Prerequisite(s): Before registering for this course, students must have completed SPAN 0002 with a grade of C or better.
No recitation.  Enrollment Limit: 20

SPAN 0004  Intermediate Spanish 4  3 cr.
A continuation of Spanish 0003. Students continue to refine their language abilities and enhance their vocabulary. The course has a strong cultural component.
Prerequisite(s): Before registering for this course, students must have completed SPAN 0003 with a grade of C or better
No recitation.  Enrollment Limit: 20

SPAN 0008  Intermediate Spanish Readings  L  3 cr.
This course is a continuation of Spanish 0007 and is designed to teach students, as quickly as possible, the basic vocabulary and grammar of Spanish. The student advances through meaningful readings and, by the end of the course, will have concentrated on topical materials of his/her own interest. The course is intended for students who have a basic knowledge of elementary Spanish. It is not intended for pure beginners.
Prerequisite(s): SPAN 0007 or SPAN 0001  No recitation.  Enrollment Limit: 15

SPAN 0020  Conversation  3 cr.
The goal of this fifth-semester course is to enhance fluency and the development of oral proficiency in Spanish. Although the emphasis is on speaking and listening skills, reading and writing assignments are an important part of the syllabus. Certain grammar points are reviewed (ser/estar, preterite/imperfect, etc.), but communicative competence is not measured by grammatical competence alone. This course helps students to improve their fluency, pronunciation, and strategic competence such as paraphrasing skills, and increases their vocabulary through readings, films, digital recordings and other authentic materials. This course is offered every term, and counts toward the Spanish major.
Prerequisite(s): SPAN 0004 or equivalent with a grade of B+ or better, or placement by exam. This course is offered every term.
