Important Information for Students and Advisors

Program Registration: To be officially enrolled in the CLAS certificate program, students must complete an application for admission to CLAS. Admissions are done on a rolling basis. The only prerequisite is interest in Latin American related topics. There are no deadlines, nor is there an application fee. However, the sooner a student enrolls, the sooner they may be eligible for awards, grants, and fellowships from CLAS.

Acceptable Certificate Courses: Courses in this list with titles typed in ALL CAPS are accepted to fulfill Latin American Studies area course requirements. Courses with titles typed in upper and lower case are international courses in which at least 25% of the content is Latin American. To have international courses count towards the certificate, focus your work on Latin America. (If the professor requires a paper or papers, bibliography, readings, etc., you must do all the work on a Latin American topic. You will be asked to present your work for the course to the CLAS academic advisor.)

Other Courses: Students may, with the permission of the CLAS advisor, register for a course with international content, a directed study, independent study or readings course taught by a CLAS faculty member. These courses will count towards the certificate/related concentration only if the student focuses specifically on a Latin American topic for the course.

University of Pittsburgh Course Numbers

Courses numbered from:
- 0001 to 0999 are lower level undergraduate courses; they are not acceptable for graduate credit.
- 1000 to 1999 are upper level undergraduate courses; they are acceptable for both undergraduate and graduate certificates.
- 2000 to 2999 are master’s level courses and those in the 3000s are doctoral level courses.

All Latin American courses for the certificate or related concentration will be counted as “inside” or “outside” the student’s major. The primary academic department of the faculty member teaching the course determines how the course will be counted. Examples: A course taught by Prof. Barry Ames that is cross-listed in Political Science and GSPIA will be counted as a course in Political Science (the primary academic department of Prof. Ames) no matter if the student registers for the course under GSPIA or PS. A course taught by Prof. John Beverley that is cross-listed in Spanish, English Literature, and Cultural Studies will be counted as a course in Hispanic Languages and Literatures (the primary academic department of Prof. Beverley).

Faculty: Please contact Julian Asenjo (email juasenjo@pitt.edu, or phone 648-7396 if your course contains 25% Latin American content and is missing from this list or if the information given about your course is incorrect. Revisions to this list are made as soon as corrections are received.

Graduate Course Offerings

PIA 2611: Latin American Policy Seminar (May 22 - 28, 2016): This one-week intensive seminar in Washington provides students with a detailed introduction to the contemporary relationship between the U.S. and Latin America. This seminar offers students the opportunity to discuss current policy issues with experienced practitioners and scholars concentrating on Latin America policy, its formulation, and its execution. (Counts as a major course for IPE, SIS, GPE, DPES, and as a MID Regional Seminar.)

2355 World War II, Cold War and Its Impact on Developing Nations

Mo No Rizzi, Michael
05:45 PM-8:55 PM recitation
3431 Posvar Hall

This is a policy-relevant history course that examines the international relations of the 20th century, as well as the lasting legacy of the cold war today. After discussing the causes, conduct, and consequences of World War II, students study the rise of the Soviet Union and iron curtain, postwar trusteeships, and the process of decolonization by which large swaths of Africa and Asia obtained their independence. Class lectures cover just war theory, the geopolitics of war, the rise of NATO, dictatorship and democratization in Latin America, and the major cold war conflicts in Cuba, Afghanistan, Iran, and Vietnam. Using historical case studies, students learn important practical skills useful for a career in diplomacy, international negotiation, or statecraft, as seen through the eyes of master practitioners.

NOTE: Students must focus their papers on Latin America to have this course count towards the certificate in Latin American Studies.

Prerequisite(s): none
Undergraduate and graduate students are welcome.

Students are encouraged to go to GSPIA, 3601 WWPH to check updates for GSPIA courses.

In this course, we will explore how issues of disease and health have shaped the history of Latin America and the Caribbean. We will also consider how national and international social, political, and economic processes have informed the practice of public health and medicine in the region. From the first encounter between Europeans and indigenous peoples in 1492 to the current migration crisis, disease has held a place of vital importance in Latin American history. The course will interrogate a number of themes, such as medical pluralism; professionalization and state building; international health; the experiences of health and the body; medically-informed ideologies of race and gender; and social movements for better and more equal health care. We will explore this history through lectures, discussions, readings, and a variety of primary source material, including films, medical texts, cartoons, laws and literature.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.

The course will provide an introduction to the past and current state of politics in Latin America. It is designed to help students understand the government and the politics of the region in comparative perspective. It is organized along a core set of themes and political debates about democracy and development in the Americas: political history of the region (XIX century to now), regime change (from authoritarianism to democratization), political institutions (presidents and legislatures, judiciary and federalism) political parties and representation, civil society and social movements, voting and clientelism, the resurgence of the left in Latin American politics and its consequences, economic development and social policies. Depending on the interests, area of expertise, and inclinations of the instructor, some topics might be emphasized more heavily than others. PS: The course does not assume any background in Latin American politics from students.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.

This course seeks to explore three fundamental questions. The first, fundamental question is what is globalization? In answering this question, students will engage in theoretical discussions of globalization, its causes, and its actors. Secondly, students will analyze global societies across social and historical contexts. In examining global societies, students will investigate societies outside of an economic framework, but also focus on diasporic communities, migration, and cosmopolitanism. Finally, students will be asked to consider the prospects of a world beyond globalization. This will mean thinking through the end of globalization, post-globalization, and resistance to globalization.

NOTE: Students taking this course for the Latin American certificate must concentrate their work on Latin America.

Prerequisite(s): none
This course is offered at least once a year.
