

RELATED CONCENTRATION IN EUROPEAN & EURASIAN STUDIES

Approved Courses for Fall 2017

With their vast geography, population diversity, and history, Europe and Eurasia continue to play central roles in international politics, economics, and social cultural trends. The Related Concentration in European and Eurasian Studies is particularly appealing to pre-professional students who wish to broaden their international experience while minimizing language requirements. The European Studies Center is pleased to provide you with a copy of our course offerings for fall 2017 (2181). Courses not listed in this booklet may count towards the certificate with permission of the ESC or REES advisor.

CERTIFICATES

The Related Concentration in European and Eurasian Studies is crafted to offer comparative study of your intended professional field—pre-medicine, pre-law, business, engineering, and health rehab sciences—while capitalizing on your existing European language credits. This is individualized, interdisciplinary credential provides context for studying abroad and complements most academic plans and majors. For the Related Concentration, we define Eurasia as the Russian Federation, Turkey, Mongolia, and the former Soviet republics.

Undergraduate Related Concentration in European & Eurasian Studies

- a. Language Proficiency: one year (or equivalent) in French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, Irish Gaelic, Swedish, Hungarian, Polish, Slovak, Modern Greek, Russian, Ukrainian, and Turkish.
- b. Five Transatlantic Courses (12 credits):
 - Courses must come from two different departments
 - No courses may overlap with other credentials
 - Students must earn a C or better in classes counting toward the Related Concentration
 - Students must develop a theme for their course work, to be determined in collaboration with the Assistant Director (examples: foreign relations, cultural development, social conflict)
- c. Study abroad in Europe or Eurasia is recommended, but not required.

This course surveys European prehistory from the early peopling of the European landmass until the fall of the Roman Empire and the rise of Vikings and Anglo-Saxons. Geographical coverage will include Western, Central and Eastern Europe and southern areas including parts of the Mediterranean and Aegean. Emphasis will be placed on investigating major changes in social organization, cultural contact and exchange, technology and economy. Key developments covered will include the rise of complex hunter-gatherer-forager communities in the Post-glacial period, the emergence and spread of agriculture and megalith building in the Neolithic, the impact of metallurgy, Iron Age 'Celtic' developments, the expansion, influence and collapse of the Roman Empire, and the rise of the post-Roman World with Viking and Anglo-Saxon migration and colonization processes. This course will provide a foundation for students interested in archaeology, history, ethnic history, art history and classics.

Undergraduate Seminar. The purpose of this course is to develop a framework for examining language as part of social, cultural, and political systems. It will enable you to better understand how language works, to interpret speech and writing in new ways, to collect and analyze ethnographic material, and to write a research paper based on your findings. Specific topics include: relations between language, cognition, and perception; debates about intention and responsibility; storytelling and verbal art; approaches to language in media and design; and the role of language in social and political change. No prior experience with anthropology or linguistics is required.

This course will survey the major achievements of ancient Greek civilization. Arranged on a roughly chronological basis, the readings and lectures will move from the epic poetry of Greece's heroic Bronze Age, through the great intellectual innovations of the Archaic Age, to the Classical era dominated by the contrasting contributions of Sparta and Athens. Although the social and economic background will not be neglected, the chief emphasis will be placed on those aspects of Greek civilization that have retained a perennial significance for Western societies-- its literature, its politics, its historical writing, its philosophy, its art and architecture.

What is literature? Is it meant to educate? Inspire? Heal? Entertain? Transcend or confront? Do the meanings found in a literary work come out of the individual reader's knowledge and experience, the author's intentions, or the structure and style of the work? In this course, we will engage such questions while reading a selection of poetry, fiction, and drama. These readings, from various historical periods and socio-cultural contexts, will be the basis for an exploration into the differences-often blurry and changeable-between "literary" and "non-literary" writing. At the same time, as we consider the uses, qualities, and effects of literature, we will examine, apply, and reflect upon a set of strategies for reading challenging creative works.
24630	CGS Meets Reqs: LIT REG	GER 1502	INDO-EUROPEAN FOLKTALES 12:00 AM to 12:00 AM WEBTBA	Stender,Uwe 3 Credits
Since its publication in 1812, the Grimm Brothers' Children's and Household Tales found a readership that spanned countries, languages, and generations. Its universal appeal can be traced to its origins: it reflects not only the influence of early 19th Century Germany, but also oral folklore traditions that go back thousands of years and range from as far away as Iceland, the Middle-East, and India. This course introduces students to a wide selection of these and other folktales from the Indo-European tradition as well as to numerous perspectives for understanding these folktales. We will examine the aesthetic, social, historical, and psychological values that these tales reflect, and will also discuss significant theoretical and methodological paradigms within folklore studies, including structural, socio-historical, psychoanalytic, and feminist perspectives. Finally, we will discuss the continuing influence of this folk tradition on popular and elite culture of our time. Two mid-terms and a final exam will contribute respectively 25%, 25%, and 35% to the final grade. Participation in recitation is mandatory and constitutes 15% of the final grade.
24673	CGS Meets Reqs: MA COM	HAA 0010	INTRODUCTION TO WORLD ART 12:00 AM to 12:00 AM WEBTBA	Harkness,Kristen Marie 3 Credits
From ancient to modern times, works of art can be understood as significant cultural documents. This introductory course, designed for students with no previous background in art or art history, is intended to demonstrate how to interpret works of art and architecture. The course will focus on selected works of art produced world-wide, relating them to their historical context. The class will be taught through illustrated lectures and class discussions. In the broadest light, the course is designed to demonstrate some of the basic tools of analysis with which to approach works of art as both aesthetic objects and historic documents.

The study of others leads back to ourselves. We learn about men and women from the past in order to compare their experiences to our own, hoping that the comparisons will make us more aware of the opportunities and limitations of present-day life. As an introduction to history, this course tries to suggest the excitement and uncertainties of studying the past. We begin in the ancient world and continue through Renaissance and Reformation to the eve of industrial revolution. Students are trained to pose historical questions, to frame arguments about changes in society, and to recognize the limits of historical knowledge.

In deciding how to act, we frequently guide ourselves by general principles, which forbid or require various kinds of action. Moral philosophy is the attempt to explore systematically a number of questions which arise in connection with such principles. We may ask, for example: What is it for a principle to be a moral principle? Is there one uniquely correct moral code, or is morality a matter of personal preference? What candidates for moral principles can be defended? Why should I be moral? The course will examine several of these questions and the answers suggested by classic moral philosophers such as Kant and Mill. We will also consider discussions of these issues by contemporary philosophers, as well as a concrete moral problem such as abortion. Throughout the course, emphasis will be placed on learning how to criticize and evaluate moral and philosophical claims, as well as developing and deepening one's own views. By examining the nature of morality, we can better decide how to live. Description from a previous instructor.

This course examines the phenomenon of vampirism in verbal and visual texts from different time periods in various cultures (Russia, Poland, France, England, America). Why do vampires capture the imagination especially of Anglophone readers? What qualities does the vampire incarnate? Which historical events and customs have triggered particular enthusiasm for depicting the undead? How have the depictions of the vampire evolved over centuries? Our discussions will address these issues as we analyze stories, novels, and films focusing on vampires from a variety of critical perspectives, contextualizing the works in the cultures that produced them.

The innovations and advances of the Greeks provided the intellectual foundation for western civilization. This undergraduate course surveys the major achievements of the ancient Greek world from its earliest beginnings in the Bronze Age (ca. 3000 BCE) to the age of Alexander and his Hellenistic successors (ca. 100 BCE). In particular, emphasis will be placed on Greek literature, politics, historical writing, religion, philosophy, medicine, architecture, and visual arts. The course will conclude with a discussion of the ways in which ancient Greek culture has remained relevant to Western civilization from antiquity until the modern day.

	Meets Reqs: REG	W	06:00 PM to 08:30 PM CL 363	3 Credits

Beginning as a small farming settlement situated alongside the Tiber river, Rome rose to become one of the greatest civilizations in human history, which spread its influence over much of the western world. In addition to careful investigation into the social, political, military, and economic organization of Rome as it developed from a monarchy through a republic and into an empire, the class will examine the art, architecture, literature, religion, culture, and daily life of the city across the spectrum of social classes. The class will utilize the large body of surviving Roman literature, including histories, poetry, and personal letters (in translation), as well as visual aids, such as slides and films, to create a living picture of whom the Romans were. Class time will be used for lectures as well as student lead discussion.

29622	CLASS	CLASS 0400	ANCIENT EMPIRES	Weis,H Anne
	Meets Reqs: MA EX HS IFN COM	T	06:00 PM to 08:30 PM FKART 204	3 Credits

Successful empires are seldom planned; they evolve. They typically have charismatic founders, able successors, and well-organized systems of administration. They satisfy core constituencies by ensuring supplies of staples or, for elites, luxuries and status symbols. They ward off potential unrest by various means, from moving populations to the cooptation of local elites, who control capital and production. The course looks at the phenomenon of the (ancient) empire from various points of view--the biographies of selected 'founder figures' and the mechanisms created to ensure the survival of selected regimes, with less emphasis placed on bureaucratic structures and detail and more on the creation and maintenance of an ideology appropriate to the regime. A sense of tradition, for example, is essential to empire but only if combined with a sense of 'modernity'--the projection of an ability to mobilize the latest in science and technology to preserve the benefits of empire for those who profit from it. Empires are, in this sense, 'history-conscious'--they compare themselves with earlier empires and seek to surpass them. Empires examined include: Middle Bronze Age Akkad, late Bronze Age Egypt, Early Iron age Assyria and Persia, Classical Athens, Macedon, and early Imperial Rome. This is not a writing course per se, but it attempts, through feedback on a series of short, focused essays, to be written in class and/or out of class, and a Research Paper, to work with students' ability to pose problems, work toward a solution, and articulate that process in writing.

29624	CLASS	CLASS 0618	DEATH IN THE ANCIENT WORLD	Weaver,Carrie L
	Meets Reqs: MA COM	MW	03:00 PM to 04:15 PM FKART 125	3 Credits

The death of a loved one is an emotional and powerful occurrence that provokes a variety of human responses. In addition to writings describing their funerary practices, the civilizations of the ancient Mediterranean region have left artistic representations of death and dying, built tombs, and objects associated with funerary rituals. The study of these texts, images, structures, and objects allows us to better understand ancient attitudes and reactions to death. This undergraduate lecture course focuses on the visual and material evidence of funerary practices and beliefs in ancient Egyptian, Greek, and Roman societies. The subject will be approached thematically. First, we will explore how archaeologists discover death-related artifacts and how scholars approach the study and reconstruction of ancient death rituals. Ancient practices and beliefs regarding mummification, the funeral, commemorative strategies, visits to the grave, and the afterlife will be explored, and images found on specific media (vases, sculpture, built tombs, paintings) will be discussed in depth. The course will conclude with discussions of the roles that sensational topics, like fear of the undead (zombies, vampires, and ghosts) and spectacles of death (gladiatorial contests and public executions), played in ancient Mediterranean civilizations.

	Meets Reqs: EX REG	TTh	11:00 AM to 12:15 PM CL 349	3 Credits

This course will be taught essentially as a literature course; that is to say, attention will be focused on how various authors of classical (chiefly Greek) antiquity used the traditional figures and stories of their culture's mythology in order to say things of lasting value about the conditions and problems of human life. We shall begin with the emergence of the cosmos as recounted in Hesiod's Theogony and then take up each of the major Olympian deities in turn, studying the ways in which they are depicted in other works of Greek literature, including the Homeric Hymns, various plays by Aeschylus and Euripides, and Homer's Odyssey.

In this course the three main ancient epics, The Iliad of Homer, the Odyssey of Homer, and the Aeneid of Vergil, will be read in English translation. The main goal will be to understand the literary, intellectual, and cultural aspects of the poems. The course will consist mostly of discussions led by the instructor. Attendance will be mandatory and all students will be expected to be well informed about the topics under discussion and to take part in the discussions. Grades will be calculated on the following basis: approximately 20% for each of the two one-hour exams; approximately 40% for the final; approximately 20% for attendance and informed classroom discussion.

	How did the inhabitants of hundreds of small and quarrelsome cities in a poor, Mediterranean peninsula collaborate to produce one of human history's most innovative and influential civilizations? To answer that, we will survey the history of ancient Greece from the Minoan civilization in the second millennium BC to the end of the Classical Period in the 4th century BC. We will investigate the major political, intellectual, economic, and social factors that contributed to the nature and development of Greek history, and consider the many political and cultural institutions that made this age unique. We will focus particularly on the growth and intertwined histories of the Greek city-states (especially Athens and Sparta), their encounters with the Persian Empire, their conflicts with each other, and their efforts to cope with the rising power of Macedon. All readings will be in English

The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the practice of reading intelligently and critically--that is, to help students acquire the skills to interpret texts ('close reading') and to evaluate interpretations offered by others (critical analysis). To this end, students will familiarize themselves with the schools and movements of literary theory and criticism, and understand the important critical debates and issues. But most importantly, they will study texts from various periods as well as critical essays about those texts in order to understand the nature and practice of literary criticism. This is an ambitious and, in some respects, a daunting undertaking: students will be expected to learn how to read texts, at the same time as they learn how to read and evaluate scholarly 'readings' of those texts. Ultimately, this course aims to make the student familiar with what Gramsci calls 'the intense labor of criticism.'The Norton Anthology of Literary Theory and Criticism 2nd edition (Norton 2010) ISBN 978-0-393-932928Charlotte Bronte, Jane Eyre (Norton Critical edition) (Norton 2000; 3rd edition) ISBN 978-0-393975420T.S. This course examines writing for young people from 1600 to the present. We will consider how representations of childhood in literature change over time and in response to specific historical and cultural events, with special focus on themes of innocence, fantasy, and gender. Readings will include children's literature "classics," such as The Secret Garden, Alice in Wonderland, and Peter Pan, as well as contemporary works like Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone, as well as a selection of picture books.
11404	ENGLISH Meets Reqs: LIT HS	ENGLIT 0562 MWF	CHILDHOOD'S BOOKS 01:00 PM to 01:50 PM	CL 221	Gryctko,Mary Gwendolyn 3 Credits
This course examines writing for young people from the 1800s to the present. Our examinations of the texts will involve detailed analysis of their specifically literary qualities, with attention to the historical contexts in which the texts were produced and received. We will spend significant time discussing and deconstructing constructions of childhood in these specific contexts. In this course, we will read texts from the 'Golden Age of Children's Literature,' such as Peter Pan, as well as more contemporary works for young readers such as The Graveyard Book and Goosebumps. "Childhood's Books" is an English Literature course and, as such, requires that students produce a substantial amount of high-quality writing over the course of the semester.

This course will focus on the development of the modern detective and crime novel, primarily in the twentieth century, with a focus on English and American writers. The approach will be historical, beginning with the tradition of ratiocination and then examining in greater detail major British and American writers from the golden age of "hard-boiled" school and look at more recent stories and books by contemporary writers who push the genre in new directions. These works may include comic novels, police procedures, post-modern and experimental work.

Detective fiction is booming: popular worldwide and across media, in traditional forms and a myriad of adaptations. An elegant drawing room full of nervous suspects or a shabby office where there's a bottle of whiskey in a desk drawer is instantly familiar as part of the machinery of detection, and detective genres have developed and expanded this machinery to offer compelling ways of exploring social worlds and psychological states. Not surprisingly, a tradition famous for presenting hardboiled men and femme fatales offers a fascinating field for examining gender and sexuality as well as other axes of power, especially class and race. One of the form's attractions is its potential to explore social worlds that might be unfamiliar to readers and viewers: underworlds such as opium dens and mob networks but also distinctive communities and subcultures that detectives must explore to make sense of crimes committed in them. Another attraction is the likelihood that any official investigation will expose dangerous secrets, including ones unrelated to the crime being investigated. In these ways, works of detection tend to highlight the power relations in families, workplaces, and other networks and communities and the purposes secrets serve for those in and out of power. This section of the course will examine mainly print detective fiction in mainly the US and Great Britain, although we will pay some attention to films and TV and to detective fiction as a world genre. Cross-listed with the Gender, Sexuality, and Women's Studies Program, this section will introduce students to some strategies for analyzing gender and sexuality within the framework of intersectionality.

This course will focus on the development of the modern detective novel, primarily British and American, from the late 19th century into the 21st. Detective and crime fiction is one of the most popular forms of narrative, appealing to writers and readers with diverse interests and ideologies. It can offer intense action, intellectual challenge, access to criminal underworlds, political and social critique, and exploration of the psyche. Our approach will be broadly historical, from the amateur sleuths of Edgar Allan Poe and Conan Doyle, through the American 'hard-boiled' private eye, to the 'police procedural' and work by contemporary writers who push the genre in new directions, including television and film. We will also examine the workings of gender, race, class and sexuality in detective fiction.

This course introduces students to science fiction as a realm of literary study. Students will engage with sci-fi's major writers, ideas, themes, and forms in order to explore how science fiction developed (and continues to grow) as a genre. Class discussions will help students to understand and use critical methods for the analysis of science fiction. While examining this mode of "popular literature," students will contend with questions of categorization, canonization, and community. "Science Fiction" offers students the chance to consider how an imaginative genre re-presents and extrapolates social, political, scientific, and technological elements of reality.

What lies beyond 'The Final Frontier'? Why does it matter if androids dream of electric sheep? What will our future look like and who will be there to enjoy it? What role does technology, ethics and/or politics play in imagining our future? Why has science fiction become such a central metaphor for our daily, lived experiences? Introduction to Science Fiction discusses them all! This course is designed to expose students to broad spectrum of science fiction. We will examine representative texts from each of the modern, roughly defined as the twentieth and twenty-first centuries, 'periods' of the genre. The class will discuss the ongoing debate surrounding the 'work' performed by the genre, as well as its themes, and stylistic movements. Reading World Literature as Translation. (No knowledge of a foreign language is required). This course introduces students to the study of world literature as translated texts. We examine different English versions of literary texts (including the new Google Translator version) and also films dealing with translation: Villeneuve's Arrival (2017) and Coppola's Lost in Translation (2003). You will learn about how gender shapes the rendering of texts into English, including controversial versions of sexuality and of the US: Kafka's Amerika, Beauvoir's America Day by Day and The Second Sex, as well as Anzaldua's Borderlands and Char's and Vallejo's poems. We read theories of translation from Spain, Mexico, Argentina, Russia, Africa, the US, and other cultures. You can choose your own world lit./film topic or write your own short story on translation for a major assignment. The course satisfies GEC Writing (pending approval), 2nd Lit/Arts/Creative Expression; Engl. Medieval Europe was a cultural cross-roads, sometimes peaceably borrowing, sometimes forced to adapt ideas, forms, religious and social practices not only from near neighbors but also from the older cultures of the Mediterranean. Such cultural volatility is evident not only in religious writings, but also in romance and works of social critique (both comic and visionary). We will read across a range of genres, including medieval lyrics, mystical writings and selections from The Canterbury Tales and Piers Plowman.

We will also discuss such topics as cross-gender disguise and the intersections of gender with race and class. This course will examine the complex interactions between diverse forms of "high" literary culture and the reading and writing practices of newly literate social groups. We will investigate a number of interrelated topics: the rise of women writers and readers; the self-conscious construction of a national literature and its relationship to empire; the emergence of new genres, publication practices, and forms or occasions of instruction in the uses of reading; and various social, cultural and literary "revolutions" that opposed or extended quests for "enlightenment." We will read a range of diverse texts written in England, Ireland, and the American colonies during the long eighteenth century. As we read and discuss these texts, we will reflect on the values and problems of literary culture and on the possible contemporary uses of literary historical study.

The seminal works of Michel Foucault, The History of Sexuality, The Birth of Biopolitics, Discipline and Punish, and I, Pierre Rivière, having slaughtered my mother, my sister, and my brother: A Case of Parricide in the 19th Century , will form a foundation from which we will consider both their theoretical implications and the real-world milieu they attempt to describe. This seminar brings critical theory into close dialogue with forms of medical knowledge. To that end, we will also read Foucault, The Birth of the Clinic along with successor texts such as Achille Mbembe, 'Necropolitics,' and Paul B. Preciado, Testo Junkie . We will read some high literature by authors such as Kafka and Mann along with a variety of texts constructing the body vis-à-vis drugs (licit and il-), disease, treatment, medicalized gender and sexuality, and the discourses and practices of medicine upon 'pathologies.' We will deploy these texts to interrogate and alienate each other as well as our own conceptions of medicine and its ambitions for the human.

			This course will focus on the construction of girlhood--as it takes shape in children's literature, in educational and advice books, in periodicals and other media, and in texts that articulate the status of females and children. We'll consider emerging distinctions about girlhood in English and American texts from the 18th and 19th -centuries. We'll then move to the present, exploring how girlhood persists as a gendered category in today's media, in cultural and educational institutions. How are girls positioned in relationship to boys or to women? How are girls constructed as readers, viewers, bodies, students, agents, consumers? Students will have a chance to work with rich collections of archival materials (for example, 19th-century literacy books for children, children's periodicals and literature, advice books). We will explore how contemporary scholarship, media, books, and images challenge (or perpetuate) this complex history. This course should be of particular interest to those preparing to teach or work with girls, or those with interest in children's literature or gender studies.

We will read drama, poetry, fiction, and nonfiction works from the Renaissance to the present, with a focus on literature from the romantics to the twentieth century; readings will include a Shakespeare play, lyric poetry, canonical short fictions, and speculative fiction. We will examine these texts in conjunction with works of literary criticism as well as works in the meteorological humanities, which brings together such disciplines as art history, environmental studies, geology, history, and philosophy. Throughout, we will be attentive both to the literary qualities of writings about weather and climate and to the historical and political contexts of those writings.

Airships. Steam engines. Clockwork machinery. Corsets. Top hats. Dark streets by gaslight. Victorian London. Industrial Revolution. Tinkerers. Mad scientists. In the sky. Underwater. In space. In some mirror dimension powered by steam and machine. Steampunk is often described as a sub-genre of science fiction and fantasy in which the past--usually the Victorian past--is rewritten in fictional works that portray the world as it might have been, given alternative scientific and political events. We might imagine Steampunk as a cheeky thought experiment in alternative history, a fantasy interrogation of concepts of technocracy, justice, and cultural power, or a veiled critique of contemporary dilemmas about identity and resilience in a technology-driven world. Steampunk is a subculture, a fashion sensibility, and a cos-play environment. In this course, we will examine the development of Steampunk as an influential genre in popular culture, and consider how the special parameters of this purpose-built world offer us space and license to reconsider our present.

General content, purposes and methods: The course centers on classic texts of world literature, from Homer, to the Koran, to Emerson and Woolf. This course is meant for all students who have an intellectual interest in the complex resources of some of our shared traditions as well as a healthy curiosity about the history of our present. In other words, this seminar is intended to make available a demanding, but still selective encounter with works of high aesthetic, intellectual, and indeed even political importance. We will conduct this course as a seminar using the Socratic Method. Each class, one or two students will give an introduction to that day's reading in order to enable conversation and debate. We will not rely on secondary materials, except in so far as they are essential to placing our authors and texts in their contexts. In order to enrich this course as much as possible, we will arrange related events outside of class time. These events might include showing films, arranging for expert visitors from our campus and other universities, and holding reading or discussion groups in the honors college facilities. Before registering for a UHC course, students must obtain special permission from the University Honors College, 3600 Cathedral of Learning.

It is no easy thing to explain why the thirty-seven plays of a particular Elizabethan playwright have become the paragon of English letters. However it may be, the works of William Shakespeare have become something of a measure of intellectual credibility. At the very center of HBO's recent Westworld series is the cryptic quotation from Romeo and Juliet, 'These violent delights have violent ends.' This course will be a general introduction to the work of Shakespeare, both in historical context, and in its critical and popular reception. We will explore questions of dramatic representation, history and anachronism, and the strange interminglings of the comic and tragic forms. Works examined will include The Taming of the Shrew, Richard II, The First Part of Henry IV, Titus Andronicus, and Hamlet. A particular interest of this course will be the nature of dramatic character: how the persons of the stage were understood in an iconoclastic age that had otherwise turned away from the visual arts. This University Honors College course is open to students who have an overall GPA of 3.25.

The purpose of this course is to illustrate ways of looking at literary texts. We shall examine poems, prose works and plays from France and the francophone world, trying to answer some of the following questions: What are the characteristics of these different genres? What is specifically literary in the text? How can reading such a text make us more able to understand today's world? Considering these questions should make students more familiar with French-language literary production and also help them understand the literary phenomenon in general.

"I pity the French Cinema because it has no money. I pity the American Cinema because it has no ideas." -- Jean-Luc Godard French cinema's enduring reputation has as much to do with the beautiful and unforgettable qualities of many of its films as it does with the French government's fierce efforts in recent years to protect, nurture, and promote its national film industry at home and abroad. However, French cinema's unforgettability is not always associated with positive feelings. For some viewers, especially Americans raised on Hollywood cinema, certain French films challenge the notion that movies should move quickly, focus on action, and end happily. In this course, you'll have the chance to see several of the films that made and continue to make French cinema famous from the arrival of sound in the early 1930s to the present. Along the way, you'll have the opportunity to learn and practice the skills of cinema literacy, that is the basic vocabulary and concepts for thinking, talking, and writing about cinema. These analytical skills will help us grasp what's distinctive about French cinema and how it differs from other national cinemas. Issues we'll consider include how films are produced and distributed, how the camera, lighting, and editing work in concert to create different kinds of film experience, how sound and image relate, how we might distinguish between different kinds of cinema such as narrative, documentary, and animated films, and how films engage with the social, historical, and cultural moments in which they were made. This course assumes no prior exposure to French cinema or film analysis. We'll screen one complete film each week, and we'll work with clips from other films in class. Students will be expected to watch the films, to participate in class, to read about film analysis and the films, to do sequence analyses, and to write short papers. The course will be taught in French.

Introduction to Literary and Cultural Theory. In this course intended for beginning graduate students in the modern languages, students will survey major movements and concepts in literary and cultural theory of the 20th/21st centuries. These theories have provided us important ways to think about how to read and interpret literature, film, and other cultural artifacts, and, as such, are an important aspect of graduate studies in the Humanities. This course is meant to provide students a general background in theory that they can further develop in certain areas as they continue their studies. The course will be taught in English, and all readings will be available in English.

This is the third of a three-term sequence that aims to develop skills and areas of competence acquired in ITAL 0001 and 0002, while teaching students to produce more authentic and more accurate Italian speech, comprehend more sophisticated structures in written and oral form, and broaden their understanding of contemporary Italian culture and society. Instructors incorporate a variety of texts (authentic written materials, songs, film, short stories) to present contemporary Italian culture. Students' progress is evaluated through oral and written exams, homework assignments, participation in class, and portfolio assignments.

The presence of women in the history of Italian culture will be examined in the contexts of fiction and non-fiction short narrative, poetry, theater, opera and film. The readings have been selected so has to present the students with a variety of concrete examples of written literary Italian. Such readings, in combination with the viewing of one film and the attendance of one live opera performance (Puccini's Tosca in the Pittsburgh Opera production scheduled for October), will offer the opportunity for discussion of many different issues related to the central theme. In addition to regular assignments, aimed at reviewing some of the most difficult points of Italian grammar and syntax, students will be asked to complete a series of short 1-2 page papers, mostly critical responses to assigned material, but also detailed summaries or descriptions, and brief creative-writing projects. This course is conducted entirely in Italian, serves as the Italian major mandatory writing practicum and satisfies the School of Arts & Sciences 'W' requirement. Prerequisite: Italian 0004 with B- or better.

The literature, art, and culture of medieval and Renaissance Italy has had a profound impact on Western culture that continues in the present day. This course explores Italian culture during this pivotal period, introducing students to Dante's Inferno and its astonishing account of the author's journey through Hell, as well as works by Petrarch, Boccaccio, and other major Italian authors. The class will investigate connections between Italian literature in this period and developments in painting, sculpture, music, and other art forms. We will reflect critically on the appropriateness of the positive value judgments conventionally linked with the use of the term "Renaissance," with particular attention to the difficulties faced by women and minority groups during this period. No prerequisites. No knowledge of Italian is required. The course satisfies the the School of Arts & Sciences Foreign Culture Requirement.

Teaching French, Italian, and German [for beginning TAs] /Advanced Topics in Foreign Language Learning and Teaching [for advanced TAs] This course supports the concept that instructional expertise is developed in and through teaching. Using a modified "lesson study model" of teacher development, new and experienced foreign language instructors will work together to identify problems of practice, discuss the theory and instructional practices that address these pedagogical concerns, and collaboratively develop a lesson to be taught by a member of the class and later analyzed and refined by the class as a whole. Videotapes of these lessons will be used as the primary source of information for analysis, discussion, and reflection. Four major areas will ground our work: 1) designing lessons to promote a language learning community, 2) teaching culture through language, and language through culture, 3) advancing oral language proficiency, and 4) developing literacy in a foreign language. Assignments include participation in collaborative lesson plan development, reflective reports on videotapes of classroom instruction, written analysis of tutorial work with language learners, and a culminating project developed in stages throughout the course that unifies the four themes in a statement of teaching philosophy. Not language specific, this course is intended for current and future teachers in the modern foreign languages.

German 1000 course provides a general introduction to the reading and comprehension of a variety of texts, including different literary genres (prose, drama, and poetry), reference works (dictionaries and biographies), and secondary literature, as well as internet sites related to the authors and topics covered in the course. Students are taught a variety of strategies to develop extensive and intensive reading skills, contextualized guessing of vocabulary, skimming/scanning, and gisting (i.e., reading for the main ideas). Some assignments lead students through large blocks of text, while others concentrate on shorter segments by emphasizing lexical and grammatical details. It is intended as a vehicle to help participants make a successful transition from language courses to advanced literature/culture courses at the 1200-level which are taught in German. Course assignments are built around a collection of literary texts from the eighteenth to the twentieth centuries.

In this course, students study the socio-political and cultural structures which shape the self-understanding of Austria, Germany and Switzerland today by exploring key issues and challenge these countries are facing today. Topics may include: political and social structures, the educational system and youth culture, gender and sexuality, Euroscepticism, im/migration and the rise of populist movements, the shadow of the Holocaust, and the status of cultural institutions in these societies. Students thus work with current, authentic materials ranging from the printed press to social media, from literature to film. The teaching objectives can be summarized in three equally important categories: a) To gain knowledge of the German-speaking world today; b) To develop tools for analyzing another culture; c) To hone German language skills in all four areas: listening and reading comprehension, speaking and writing. This course is taught entirely in German. Hence, it facilitates the development of a contemporary German vocabulary and includes the practice of advanced grammar structures as necessary. Prerequisite: Successful completion (preferably B-level) of one 1000-level course.

This course introduces students to major developments and figures in German cultural history from the Medieval Period to the Enlightenment. The course utilizes a variety of media (written texts as well as audio-visual materials) and genres (prose, poetry, drama) in order to analyze how the past informs the present. Topics of discussion include: the individual's place in society; the role of women and the notion of love in courtly literature (Minnelyrik, HÄfisches Epos); Martin Luther and the Reformation; the 30 Years War and the Peace of Westphalia as the beginning of a new world order; the radical change of European worldview by the Enlightenment; and more recent reception and interpretation of the Medieval, Renaissance, and Enlightenment periods. This course is conducted entirely in German, and gives students ample opportunity to practice all four language skills (speaking, reading, writing, and listening). All assignments are to be completed in German. Prerequisite: successful completion of at least one German 1000-level course.

This course reviews one of the most famous and exciting periods of German literature: a period of great social and intellectual upheavals, of sentimental novels and revolutionary plays, of classical poems and folk tales, when an admired poet became an influential politician, and rebellious women wrote even though they were not supposed to. Students will read some of the classics of German literature, and learn about the historical context of these works. All primary readings and class discussions are in German.

The Family and the State in German Culture. As a senior capstone seminar this course encourages students to develop their own interests in German culture, language, and history through an intense research seminar. The guiding topic is the relationship between the family and the state as represented in German culture from the Enlightenment to the present. Why do specific configurations of familial relations appear at certain times, how are these challenged and reconfigured, and how do these reflect forces and tendencies that transcend the intimate and familial spheres? Students will study the relationship of the family to the state both in theory (Aristotle, Hegel, Riehl, Engels, and contemporary feminist and queer theorists) and in texts and films from the 18th to the 21st centuries including authors such as Lessing, Kleist, Droste-HÄfshoff, Hauptmann, Schnitzler, Brecht, and Wolf. Students will set their own research emphasis in their capstone project (the topic must be chosen early in the term) and will analyze one cultural object in detail while relating it to at least one perspective on the family or state within a larger historical context. They will present their project publicly during the Spring semester.

This course introduces students to a wide selection of Indo-European folktales as well as to perspectives and the cultural background that help understand these tales. We will examine the aesthetic, social, historical, and psychological values that these tales reflect. We will discuss theoretical and methodological models in the field of folklore studies, including formalist, socio-historical, psychoanalytic, and stylistic perspectives. We will also analyze the continuing influence of this folk tradition on popular and high culture. Upon completion of this course, students should be familiar with a wide variety of Indo-European folktales, be able to discuss several approaches to studying them, be able to identify the most important motifs of these tales, be familiar with some of the most influential folklorists, writers, and editors of the tales, and be able to assess the significance of folktales for contemporary western culture. The course grade will be calculated as follows: Attendance/Participation in recitation: 20%, Quizzes: 20%, 3 in-class examinations: 60% (20% each)

The visit of German Chancellor Angela Merkel in the United States has attracted major public attention. For Germany is a powerful and reliable European ally of the United States as well as a key representative of the EU. Germany also plays a crucial part in promoting peace and stability in the world. If you wish to find out more about contemporary Germany in its global and European context join "GERMANY TODAY." This course gives students an insight into the development of German society from the postwar period to the present time. Through lectures, readings, film viewings, and group discussions, the course explores key concerns in German culture: 1. the contemporary political, cultural, and economic situation in Germany; 2. the German parliamentary system and the upcoming elections; 3. contemporary political populism in Europe and Germany versus Germany's attempt to cope with its past: the Nazi dictatorship versus the GDR dictatorship; 4. multiculturalism in German society, in particular a fascinating generation of writers and poets who came from different countries, settled in Germany, and write their works in German. Among these authors are Herta MÄller (Romania), Emine Åzdamar (Turkey), Rafik Schami (Syria), Yoko Tawada (Japan) and many others; and, last but not least: GERMAN SOCCER! GER 1522 will be taught in English. It fulfills the Foreign Culture (International/Regional) requirement. It also counts towards the Western European Studies certificate. Foundations in Art History offers an introduction to the history of the art historical discipline and its research and interpretive methods. Other courses in the art history department introduce students to the 'what' of art history--major works and histories of the arts in specific time periods and geographic locations around the globe. This course, by contrast, is devoted to the 'how' of what the art historian does--how she or he interprets the work of art according to its specific characteristics, the place and time period in which the artwork was created, and the changing nature of viewers' responses to it. Readings for Foundations span the history of art in East Asia and the West and from the ancient world to the present. Weekly discussions of these texts will invite us to explore a wide array of interpretive perspectives, to understand where and when such perspectives emerged within the discipline, and how they continue to be used today. Our engagement with these perspectives will be geared toward understanding how each plays a role in the art historian's central task, namely deciphering the meaning and significance of the work of art. Short writing assignments and a term paper will require analysis of a specific artwork chosen from the Carnegie Museum in light of different interpretative issues and methodologies.

The Mediterranean Sea is a lake and its shores have produced many important cultures and artistic traditions. The course will survey the artistic and cultural traditions of the Near East (Mesopotamia, Egypt, Turkey, Iran) and the Aegean, from the Neolithic to the Persian Empire. Special attention will be paid to: 1) the relationship between the artistic traditions of these areas and the societies which produced them, and 2) the way in which influences from one culture were transformed by another.

Transformations in the status, appearance, and meaning of artworks during the European Renaissance have profoundly affected Western visual culture. This course explores the extraordinary experiments of competitive, innovative artists and patrons, going beyond stylistic change to focus on the role of artistic invention in shaping Renaissance society. It considers the shifting functions of the visual arts in Europe between 1250 and 1600. Artists to be discussed include Giotto, Brunelleschi, Donatello, van Eyck, Botticelli, Mantegna, Leonardo, Durer, Michelangelo, Raphael, and Titian. Students will be asked to write short papers on thematic issues throughout the term and, at the end of the semester, they will undertake a more substantial project that engages the research methods of art history.

This undergraduate seminar explores the cultural politics that surround the acquisition of ancient art and related antiquities. The subject will be approached thematically: issues of ownership, commodification, museum acquisition, private collecting, repatriation, and reburial, as well as the nationalist and religious appropriation of archaeological sites, will be discussed, with special emphasis placed on the social and economic impacts of the illicit trade in antiquities. Diverse high-profile case studies, such as the Dead Sea Scrolls, the treasures of Troy, Stonehenge, the Parthenon, and the recent destruction of cultural heritage in the Middle East, will be used to illustrate key problems and present possible solutions. This class is a designated W-course, so considerable attention will be paid to developing critical reading, writing, and oral presentation skills. Over the course of the semester, students will work closely with each other and the instructor to plan, write, revise, and present an individual fifteen-page research paper on a topic that bridges the course material and their specific interests within the history of art, architecture, and/or the built environment.

Architecture: Image, Text, Theory is an upper level writing intensive [W] course required for all students wishing to graduate from the University of Pittsburgh with a major in Architectural Studies. The objectives are to acquaint students with architectural themes in various literary genres, to examine the emergence and development of core ideas in the Western architectural tradition, and to understand the relationship between architectural ideas and the contexts in which they were articulated. Texts examined in the course will include classic architectural treatises, texts on landscape, urbanism and aesthetics. Drawings, engravings, photography, and illustrations will be considered as important components of architectural theory; the format and composition of architectural books will be considered as integral to the ideas they contain.

Centrally located within the Mediterranean, Italy was rich in natural resources, under the firm control of civic elites who managed contacts with other cultural groups. Roman 'art', therefore, was an art of advertisement and consumption--one that served to identify the wealthiest and most influential members of the community and to further their interests. The course will follow the development of Rome from an aggressively expansive, aristocratic city-state to a socially innovative political conglomerate with control over the Mediterranean world. This development fostered 1) unprecedented economic stability and prosperity across a wide region, allowing objects and styles that were once limited to the elite to 'filter down' to a broader range of consumers, and 2) the need for an art that communicated the achievements and goals of the imperial government to different regions and cultures. This is not a writing course per se, but it attempts, through feedback on a series of short, focused essays, to be written in class and out of class, and a Research Paper, to work with students' ability to pose problems, work toward a solution, and articulate that process in writing.

W 03:00 PM to 05:50 PM CL 136 3 Credits

Coloniality, Visuality, Race, Laughter Overview This course is an invitation to think questions of subalternity, coloniality and modernity, with a particular emphasis on the productive projects that emerge as responses to the former. For instance, how should relations between the West and its others be conceived? Should they be thought as dynamics of repression and imposition done by one party over the other, or are there commonalities and denials of them, active acts of copying and appropriating and projecting? Are we talking about conscious acts and/or about complex mechanisms of self-denial, veiling and projection? In what conditions can marginalized voices de-center Western racialized taxonomies that determine who can legitimately speak and about what, and effectively propose new articulations of culture, power and identity? How are these Other thinkings to be understood? Are they the expression of a pre-existing, essential difference? Are they spaces from which to produce a difference that makes a difference, unrelated to the non-western? What roles do epistemology, race, vision and laughter play? We will search for answers scrutinizing a plurality of materials in terms of disciplines, areas and perspectives, and examine --among others-- the notions of border thinking, mimesis, survivance, subalternity, double consciousness, and the third eye. Material and class discussion will be in English.

	Meets Reqs: HS	T	06:00 PM to 08:30 PM CL 130	3 Credits

This course is a partial survey of some important strands in the Western intellectual history. We will start with ancient Greek speculations in cosmology, philosophy, and medicine. Then we will look at some important subsequent developments in these areas and how they were influenced by the Greek tradition. These include, among other topics, the magical tradition that flourished during the Renaissance period. The latter half of the course will focus on the profound intellectual transformations in the 17th century which constitute what we often call The Scientific Revolution. The great scientific achievements of figures such as Descartes, Kepler, Galileo, and Newton will be discussed in detail. Overall, this course is meant to provide a broad picture of some of the most important elements in the Western intellectual tradition and their interactions in history.

This course examines cultural transformations from the ancient world through the 17th century. Drawing on a broad range of sources in order to examine social, political, economic, religious, artistic, and intellectual developments, we will consider the interpretation of historic materials and the role of the historian.

10002	HIST	HIST 0101	WESTERN CIVILIZATION 2	Hammond, Leslie Ann
	Meets Reqs: HS REG	TTh	11:00 AM to 11:50 AM CL G24	3 Credits

This course will introduce students to the general trends and issues of Western European history from the Scientific Revolution to the Cold War. It will be organized around such broad questions as, what is civilization?, what is the role of the individual in society and politics?, what is human nature?, and, is there progress in history? The readings will be geared toward primary sources from Hobbes and Locke through Marx, Mill, Conrad and Kennan. As students explore, interpret, discuss and write about these sources, they will become familiar with the task of the historian. The course grade is based on class participation, quizzes, a midterm and the final.

	Meets Reqs: HS COM	TTh	09:30 AM to 10:45 AM CL 239	3 Credits

This course is a historical introduction to the religious traditions that developed in ancient Near East and the Mediterranean. Our major emphasis is on the history of the religious traditions that emerged in late antiquity in this area and which continue to be major world religions: Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and Zoroastrianism. We focus on key concepts, historical developments, and contemporary issues. Throughout the course, we also examine interactions among these religious traditions. In the last part of the course we examine the issue of globalization and the spread of these religions around the world as well as the presence of "non-Western" religion in the "West." The course also serves as an introduction to the academic study of religion and provides a foundation for further coursework in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. No prior knowledge of any of the religions studied is expected or assumed.

24205	HIST	HIST 0150	HISTORY OF MODERN IRELAND	Novosel,Anthony Stephen
	Meets Reqs: HS REG	Th	06:00 PM to 08:25 PM	LAWRN 104 3 Credits

A good friend once told me, 'People here [Ireland] don't know history. They know their 'inherited histories.' These 'inherited histories' present us with either a morality play between the native Irish and 'perfidious Albion' (England), while another tells us that this is a conflict between the Protestants who settled in Ireland in the 17th Century and the native Irish. Or sometimes the tale told combines elements of both. Which of these 'histories' is correct? Is one and not the other right two? Are they all true? Is Irish history a 'tragedy' because, as William Money Penny wrote (1911) it is a conflict 'between two rights?' Confused? Well, you are not alone! Therefore, your task, should you choose to accept it, will be to analyze and critique the 'inherited histories' that exist in Ireland concerning the period from Cromwell to 1916. In particular, you will delve into a relatively new area of study in Irish history that claims Cromwell was not simply a 'genocidal maniac' bent on destroying the Irish. Instead, you will investigate the claim that Cromwell's invasion of Ireland in the 17th century set in motion the development of Irish republicanism that eventually led to the Easter Rising of 1916 and the many contentious issues that still plague Ireland today. There are no prerequisites for this class. All majors from freshmen to seniors welcome! Just come armed with curiosity and a spirit of adventure!

	Meets Reqs: HS REG	TTh	09:00 AM to 09:50 AM	CL 324 3 Credits

The course will open with a detailed consideration of the context and causes of World War II, including World War I, the Versailles Treaty, and the Great Depression. We will discuss the determinants of Hitler's rise to power and of German expansionism in the 1930's. We will examine the military struggle of World War II, but such topics as economic mobilization, propaganda, occupation policies, resistance movements and the Holocaust also receive significant attention. The course concludes with an analysis of war-time diplomacy, the postwar settlement, and the onset of the Cold War.

	Meets Reqs: HS	TTh	01:00 PM to 02:15 PM	CL 252 3 Credits

In recent years more and more attention has been focused on the Nazi regime and its policy of mass murder. Along with that interest, there has come a spate of questions regarding the perception and response of the Allies to Hitler. This course is an attempt to look at the situation on this side of the Atlantic before, during and after WWII. We shall explore the Holocaust in Europe, but pay attention to American policy and American policy makers such as Franklin Roosevelt in the 1930's and 40's and look at those factors which influenced America's reaction. There will be an opportunity to explore some of the issues and questions that the Holocaust raises for Americans today. In addition to selected films, there will be an opportunity to meet a survivor or child of a survivor of the camps.

This seminar will be an exercise in comparative history--in particular, an examination of the "special relationship" between Britain and the United States. We will look at political, diplomatic and cultural ties between the two nations in the 20' century, ranging from the American "occupation" of Britain during World War Two to the Beatles and the British Invasion of the 1960s to popular and journalistic impressions held of each country in the other. We will read some primary sources, especially newspapers, speeches and memoirs, but mostly will read several of the very good books published on the subject.

One of the most familiar, but least understood, groups in American history are the Puritans who settled New England in the 17th century. This course introduces students to the ways historians work by allowing them to address key questions regarding the unique identity of the New England Puritans. Students will be encouraged to develop their own assessment of the Puritan social, political, economic and religious legacy. Due to their intellectual sophistication and commitment to creating a godly society in the North American wilderness, New England's Puritans were almost constantly engaged in theological, social, political and economic controversies. These controversies, their commitment to scripture, and their high level of literacy, created a substantial paper trail. Due to both their stature in American history, and this wealth of documentation, the Puritan legacy has been hotly contested since the earliest generation of American historians. Through primary documents and secondary literature students will analyze not only the nature of Puritan New England, but also how it has been perceived by various generations of historians. Students will become part of this historical debate by writing several short analytical papers using primary and secondary documents and discussing their findings in class discussions and debates.

	Meets Reqs: HS REG	MW	11:00 AM to 11:50 AM	CL 332	3 Credits
This course examines the history of nationalism, ethnicity, and the nation-state. The course provides an overview of nationalism theories, the history of nationalism, and current nationalist challenges in Europe. Particular emphasis is placed on national and regional identities in Europe, comparing the development of nationalism in western countries such as France or Germany with East European nationalism politics in the Russian and Habsburg Empires, and the new wave of ethnic nationalism in Eastern Europe after the dissolution of Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union. Finally, new trends of populist nationalism and the rise of right-wing nationalist extremism in the wake of the refugee crisis and Brexit will also be explored.

This course will explore topics in West European Intellectual History, 1850-1950. It will be conducted as a seminar driven by student discussion. For this reason, students will be expected to read and engage the assigned sources before class. These sources will include readings in Mill, Durkheim, Mannheim, Freud and Existentialism as well as sources in visual, literary and other art forms. Some of our organizing questions will concern the nature of industrial and post-industrial society. We will ask about the nature of social coherence and civil society, and whether their structures are developing or devolving in the modern world. We will ask what these developments mean for the state of our political and economic systems. Student interests and concerns will determine multiple other paths of enquiry as well. Course grades will be based on class participation and presentations, quizzes, papers, a midterm and a final.
23242	HIST	HIST 1190	MEDIEVAL GOVERNMENT & SOCIETY		Greenberg, Janelle
	Meets Reqs: HS REG	W	02:00 PM to 04:25 PM	CL 142	3 Credits
In this class we study the origins of constitutionalism in the Western world, in particular, due process, limited government, the rule of law, representative institutions, and individual rights. As unlikely as it sounds, we will find these origins, along with the basic tenets of the modern democratic polity, in the decidedly undemocratic Middle Ages. Our story begins with the emergence of the three bodies of law upon which the Western legal tradition was built, namely, Roman law, canon law, and English common law. The narrative includes forays into cultural history, for example, the emergence of universities where Roman law and canon law were taught and studied; political history, such as the emergence of the medieval 'state,' the quarrels between popes and kings and their nobility; and finally intellectual history, in particular, the political and legal ideas that constitute 'the mental furniture of the mind,' those notions of justice, law, and reason that were axiomatic and against which sovereigns and subjects were measured. Readings will include excerpts from law codes, the writings of theorists such as Thomas Aquinas, and works such as Magna Carta. Our work will go forward on the basis of discussions and lectures. Much class time will be spent in small groups, where students are divided up and assigned a particular primary source to dissect and present to the class. In this way we will constitute a community of scholars who work together in a common intellectual endeavor, one that introduces us to some of the most significant texts in the history of Western constitutionalism. There are no course requirements for Medieval Law and Government.

	Meets Reqs: HS REG	TTh	02:30 PM to 03:45 PM	CL 337	3 Credits
This course examines the origins and development of English law and legal institutions from c. 1000 to c. 1700, with a view toward understanding the foundations of the American legal system. Keeping in mind that law is shaped by social, economic, religious and political considerations, we attempt to answer the vital question, "How, and by what processes, did English society solve certain problems with which all societies must eventually cope?" In answering this question we will be concerned with the various mechanisms for resolving legal disputes (e.g., trial by jury, the common law writ system, proof and evidence); rights in land and personal property; and legal relationships between people (e.g., contract, marriage). In addition, we will deal with certain issues in English constitutional law (e.g., the rule of law, ideas of legal sovereignty). Prerequisite(s): No prerequisites, though Peter Karsten's American legal history is good preparation. Students are expected to read assigned material and to attend lectures.

23254	HIST Meets Reqs: HS REG	HIST 1775 TTh	ORIGINS OF CHRISTIANITY 02:30 PM to 03:45 PM CL 232	Denova,Rebecca I 3 Credits
This course presents an historical-critical investigation of Christian origins. Special attention is paid to varieties of 1st century Hellenistic and Palestinian Judaism within the Greco-Roman world. Primary readings include selected Biblical passages and apocrypha, 1st century historians and philosophers (Josephus, Tacitus, Suetonius, and Philo), the New Testament corpus (including Paul and the Pastorals), and selected readings from the Dead Sea Scrolls. In addition there will be assignments from various modern New Testament critics, historians, and theologians.

This course will survey the history of ancient Greece from the Minoan civilization in the second millennium BC to the end of the Classical Period in the 4th century BC. We will investigate the major political, intellectual, economic and social factors that contributed to the nature and development of Greek history. We will pay particular attention to the Golden Age of Athens in the 5th century BC and its relations with the Persian Empire, Sparta and the other Greek city-states. Also, we will look at the many political and cultural institutions that combined to make this age unique. Finally, the course will close with the Greek's efforts to cope with the rising power of Macedon.
25665	HISTH Meets Reqs: HS	HIST 1083 TTh	HISTORY OF SPORTS 09:30 AM to 10:45 AM VICTO 117	Ruck,Robert 3 Credits
The University Honors College History of Sports course focuses on the emergence and evolution of sport during the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. It looks at the changing nature and meaning of sport, tackling why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. It will also look at the global consequences of sport's current model--that of global capitalism--on youth, play, and the meaning of sport. It will do so by looking at baseball academies in the Caribbean, football academies in Africa and Europe, junior hockey in Canada, and high school basketball and football in the United States and the South Pacific. The seminar format permits greater student involvement, research opportunities, and participation/discussion. The course asks you to address these questions and topics in seminar sessions as well as in writing about them. No prerequisites but come ready to explore.
10758	HISTH Meets Reqs: HS	HIST 1090 MWF	HISTORY MEDICINE & HEALTH CARE 01:00 PM to 02:15 PM CL 206	Erlen,Jonathon 3 Credits
This course examines the origins and evolution of both traditional medical systems and alternative health care patterns in Western civilization, from the earliest societies to the present. Particular attention is placed on the impact of religion, warfare, and other societal factors on the development of medicine. Emphasis is placed on the changing theories of disease causation. The majority of this course deals with the history of the American health care system, discussing the regular medical community, irregular medical sects and health fads, home health care, and the various forms of health carequackery. Emphasis is placed on how changes in American society impacted the evolution of public health, health care facilities, medical education and the emerging role of the government in health care issues.Prerequisite(s): No prerequisites: students are required to do book reviews, exams that include out of class essays, and to attend all class sessions and two evening lectures. There will be a mandatory discussion session following each lecture. Formal English writing style is required of all out of class book reviews. There will be ample time to discuss course materials, both following all class sessions and in office hours every week. This course is co-taught by Kristen Erhenberger M.D., Ph.D. who will answer any technical medical issues that may come up in this course.
10771	HPS Meets Reqs: REG	HPS 0427 W	MYTH AND SCIENCE 06:00 PM to 08:30 PM CL 304	Novick,Aaron Michael 3 Credits
How can we understand our world? In western culture, science dominates all our answers to this question. But there are other ways. They can be found in the mythologies of ancient and modern peoples. This course will compare the scientific and mythological ways of seeing the world and their more subtle connections. In particular, we will turn to the remarkable events in Ancient Greece of 800-400 B.C. and discover how the scientific approach actually grew slowly out of mythological thought itself.

The Italian physicist and astronomer Galileo Galilei (1564-1642) was the decisive figure in the rise of modern science. First, he ushered in a new era in astronomy when he aimed a 30-powered telescope at the sky in 1610. Second, he revolutionized the concept of science when he argued that the book of nature is written in the language of mathematics. Finally, he astounded the theologians, who eventually condemned him to life imprisonment, when he claimed that the scientist's search for the truth cannot be constrained by religious authority. This course will study Galileo in the broader intellectual, social, and religious context of early modern Europe.
23484	HPS Meets Reqs: HS	HPS 0515 T	MAGIC, MEDICINE AND SCIENCE 06:00 PM to 08:30 PM CL 130	3 Credits
This course is a partial survey of some important strands in the Western intellectual history. We will start with ancient Greek speculations in cosmology, philosophy, and medicine. Then we will look at some important subsequent developments in these areas and how they were influenced by the Greek tradition. These include, among other topics, the magical tradition that flourished during the Renaissance period. The latter half of the course will focus on the profound intellectual transformations in the 17th century which constitute what we often call The Scientific Revolution. The great scientific achievements of figures such as Descartes, Kepler, Galileo, and Newton will be discussed in detail. Overall, this course is meant to provide a broad picture of some of the most important elements in the Western intellectual tradition and their interactions in history.

This seminar explores scientific models of knowledge and humanistic models of knowledge in Plotinus and the intellectual movement known as Neoplatonism. We will study Plotinus's Enneads and other sources by focusing on a variety of philosophical, cultural, and historical aspects, such as methods of inquiry, patterns of antagonism with Christianity, the definition of disciplinary boundaries, the notion of the self, the production and transmission of texts in the school, first principles, the conception of matter, nature, soul, and the categories of being that Western science appropriated from this enormously influential cultural tradition.

Recently philosophers engaged in inquiry in ethics, metaphysics, and philosophy of science have been explicit in acknowledging inspiration from Aristotle and the Aristotelian tradition, often identifying their projects as 'Neo-Aristotelian'. In this seminar we will do a selective examination of work in this genre, focused not only on the merits and shortcomings of that work itself, but also on its connections with Aristotle's philosophical inquiries into the same or related topics. It is hoped that a clear (or clearer) answer will emerge to the question, 'What is it to be an Aristotelian (or 'Neo-Aristotelian') in the 21st century?'

Along with that interest, there has come a spate of questions regarding the perception and response of the Allies to Hitler. This course is an attempt to look at the situation on this side of the Atlantic before, during and after WWII. We shall explore the Holocaust in Europe, but focus on American policy and American policy makers such as F.D.R. in the 30's and 40's and look at those factors which influenced our reaction. There will be an opportunity to explore some of the issues and questions that the Holocaust raises for Americans today. In addition to selected films, there will be an opportunity to meet survivors of the camps.

	Meets Reqs: PH MW
	In this course we will examine a handful of classic works tackling the central questions of philosophy. In particular, we will be concerned with the questions: is there any certain method for acquiring knowledge, or are all of our beliefs just guesses? Is there such a thing as objective knowledge? Are there facts about who is right and who is wrong in moral disputes -- or just differences of opinion? We will examine a handful of the most influential works ever written about these questions. This course aims both to familiarize students with philosophical disputes and to develop skills for recognizing, understanding, and evaluating arguments in some difficult texts.

	Meets Reqs: PH	TTh	12:00 PM to 12:50 PM	CL 324	3 Credits
This course is an introduction to some of the main figures and problems in Ancient Greek Philosophy. We will read texts spanning from the Pre-Socratics through Hellenistic philosophers, but the majority of our attention will be given to Socrates, Plato and Aristotle. Our goal will be to understand not only what the views these thinkers held were, but also why they held them and how they argued for them. When we engage in this activity, we are doing philosophy. So, this course is also an introduction to philosophy itself.

10420	PHIL	PHIL 0300	INTRODUCTION TO ETHICS
	Meets Reqs: PH	MW	01:00 PM to 01:50 PM	CL G24	3 Credits
In deciding how to act, we frequently guide ourselves by general principles, which forbid or require various kinds of action. Moral philosophy is the attempt to explore systematically a number of questions which arise in connection with such principles. We may ask, for example: What is it for a principle to be a moral principle? Is there one uniquely correct moral code, or is morality a matter of personal preference? What candidates for moral principles can be defended? Why should I be moral? The course will examine several of these questions and the answers suggested by classic moral philosophers such as Kant and Mill. We will also consider discussions of these issues by contemporary philosophers, as well as a concrete moral problem such as abortion. Throughout the course, emphasis will be placed on learning how to criticize and evaluate moral and philosophical claims, as well as developing and deepening one's own views. By examining the nature of morality, we can better decide how to live. Description from a previous instructor.

Oil and other natural resources have played a crucial role in shaping the politics, development, and foreign relations of countries in all regions of the world. While experts originally believed that natural resource wealth would be a blessing for endowed countries, we now know they often impede economic growth, reinforce authoritarianism, exacerbate corruption, and cause conflict. This course will examine the political economy of oil, natural gas, minerals, and other natural resources to gain insight into why they can be a blessing or a curse. We will explore the role of governments, oil companies, OPEC, the demand for energy security, and environmental concerns in shaping the effects of natural resources.

This course considers George R.R. Martin's popular 'Song of Fire and Ice'/'Game of Thrones' series in a political context. The class will consider the way that the series speaks to and shapes political attitudes and beliefs, as well as the way that Martin's creative vision was formed by reference to history and politics. The course will begin with reading Martin's own writing: the book Game of Thrones. Then it will explore the historical inspiration of the series, the Wars of the Roses, and some of the political theory that was created in reaction to that period. Following that, it will cover a few critical political theorists whose works focus on narratives about power, deception, and authority (the core themes of the series). Students in the class will gain exposure to Machiavelli, Locke, de Montesquieu, and Arendt in the course of this consideration, while also getting a chance to understand and discuss the popular books and television show in academic and sustained fashion. As a note, prior reading or viewing of the series is not required, nor necessary, though it will be helpful (and a spoiler policy will be given before the start of the term to minimize concern for those at various points of encountering the series). Grading will be primarily focused on short reaction papers, in-class writing and recall exercises, and a final argumentative research paper.

Because of civil wars in several parts of the world, especially in Sub-Saharan Africa, the international organizations have reshaped their development agenda by emphasizing the importance of security and peace as preconditions for development. This approach was explicitly included among the aims of the United Nations by(then) Secretary-General Kofi Annan in his roadmap for the implementation of the UN Millennium Summit. In parallel, the concept of human security has been promoted by several Western governments, NGOs and independent commissions in order to take into account the need to address not only state security needs but also the vulnerability of individual humans in crisis situations. Aid policies have taken into account these evolutions, though the concept of human security itself has been discussed in a controversial way. The European Union is progressively integrating it into its security agenda and has started 'securitizing' its development agenda and African policy, including instruments like the Cotonou convention with African, Caribbean and Pacific states.This 1.5-credit course explores the reasons for the merging of security and development policies in the European Union and its Member States and the emergence of a European human security agenda within the wider context of the United Nations, World Bank and the OECD. The focus will be European policies towards crisis areas (Balkans, Caucasus, Middle East, Great Lakes Africa, and South and Southeast Asia) and peace building activities like: regulations about antipersonnel landmines, smallarms and light weapons, conflict timber and conflict diamonds, policies of conditionality and sanctions, assistance to transitional justice, peace building, security governance, and security sector/system reform in fragile states.

This course is a historical introduction to the religious traditions that developed in ancient Near East and the Mediterranean. Our major emphasis is on the history of the religious traditions that emerged in late antiquity in this area and which continue to be major world religions: Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and Zoroastrianism. We focus on key concepts, historical developments, and contemporary issues. Throughout the course, we also examine interactions among these religious traditions. In the last part of the course we examine the issue of globalization and the spread of these religions around the world as well as the presence of "non-Western" religion in the "West." The course also serves as an introduction to the academic study of religion and provides a foundation for further coursework in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. No prior knowledge of any of the religions studied is expected or assumed.

In recent years more and more attention has been focused on the Nazis regime and its policy of mass murder. Along with that interest, there has come a spate of questions regarding the perception and response of the Allies to Hitler. This course is an attempt to look at the situation on this side of the Atlantic before, during and after WWII. We shall explore the Holocaust in Europe, but pay attention to American policy and American policy makers such as Franklin Roosevelt in the 1930's and 40's and look at those factors which influenced America's reaction. There will be an opportunity to explore some of the issues and questions that the Holocaust raises for Americans today. In addition to selected films, there will be an opportunity to meet a survivor or child of a survivor of the camps.

In this course we will examine several well-known ancient myths through the works of various Greek and Roman authors. We will discuss how each author transforms and interprets the myths in accordance with his own methods to these ancient stories as a mirror of the cultural climate contemporary with him. Topics covered include the creation myth of Hesiod's Theogony and the portrayal of the gods of popular Greek and Roman religion through this and other works such as Homer's Iliad and Odyssey and Vergil's Aeneid. It is the aim of this course to expand the students' understanding of ancient Greek and Roman literary culture and to equip them with a variety of interpretative methodologies.

This course is designed to look at the history of the Jewish community in America up to the present time. While that history is more than 350 years old, we will focus primarily on the 20th and 21st centuries. We will explore not just historical themes and developments, but also contemporary issues and perspectives. In our discussion, we shall touch on aspects of American, European and world Jewish history. There will be a variety of classroom activities including lecture-discussion, oral reports, films and guest speakers. The aim of this course is to make each class provocative, lively and informative and relevant by raising issues and questions regarding the past, present and future of the American Jewish community.

This course examines Slavic and anglophone science fiction comparatively. It assesses how a given culture's dominant values are articulated in a popular genre that enjoys different status in the East (i.e., Eastern Europe) and the West (i.e., England and America). Those values emerge in works that imaginatively posit "fantastic" situations rooted in biological, spatial, and temporal explorations beyond those currently verified by science. On the basis of films (e.g., "The Terminator", "The Fly"), film clips, TV shows, novels (e.g., "Solaris", "The Futurological Congress"), novellas, and stories, we shall discuss such topics as progress, utopia, human perfectibility, the limits of science, and the nature of knowledge.

 Meets Reqs: REG TTh 04:00 PM to 05:15 PM CL 232 3 Credits

This course examines the phenomenon of vampirism in verbal and visual texts from different time periods in various cultures (Russia, Poland, France, England, America). Why do vampires capture the imagination especially of Anglophone readers? What qualities does the vampire incarnate? Which historical events and customs have triggered particular enthusiasm for depicting the undead? How have the depictions of the vampire evolved over centuries? Our discussions will address these issues as we analyze stories, novels, and films focusing on vampires from a variety of critical perspectives, contextualizing the works in the cultures that produced them.

This course examines artistic works produced in prison and artistic works about prison, addressing both the allure of the criminal world as a form of entertainment and the function of art within prison as escapism and survival technique. In structure the course is broken into three parts: the first part concentrates on prison writings and criminal culture in America; the second part focuses on the forced-labor camp system known as the Gulag in the Soviet Union; and the third part examines Europe (Germany and Eastern Europe) during the Holocaust.

11611 SOC SOC 0005 SOCIETIES Epitropoulos, Mike F
 Meets Reqs: GLO MW 01:00 PM to 01:50 PM CL 232 3 Credits

This course examines complex social, economic, political, and cultural issues across societies around the world. In this course we discuss the American (US) Criminal Justice System, Drinking on US College Campuses, and Hip Hop music. We introduce fundamental, core sociological concepts in examining these three micro- areas of study. Beyond that we bridge the three thematic areas in subtle ways that weave our sociological analysis with depth and by introducing cross-cultural links. This globalization component is a powerful example of how connected our world is. The format utilizes lectures, recitations, and assignments.

This course will examine the causes and consequences of migration and its impact on the populations who experience displacement and resettlement. We will discuss issues that include the social and legal construction of borders, boundaries, identities, and citizenship; differences in the legal and social categories distinguishing migrants from one another; diasporas, refugees, and forced migration; issues of gender, race, and social class; exploitation and inequality; the criminalization of migrants and anti-immigration politics in the US and Europe; and migrant movements that contest their oppression. As a writing-intensive class, this course requires students to write and revise several papers; grades will be based on writing assignments, class participation, and exams.

10759 SOCH SOC 1488 HISTORY MEDICINE & HEALTH CARE Erlen, Jonathon
 Meets Reqs: HS MWF 01:00 PM to 02:15 PM CL 206 3 Credits

This course examines the origins and evolution of both traditional medical systems and alternative health care patterns in Western civilization, from the earliest society to the present. Particular attention is placed on the impact of religion, warfare, and other societal factors on the development of medicine. The majority of this course deals with the growth of the American health care system, discussing the regular medical community, irregular medical sects, home health care, and various forms of quackery. Emphasis is placed on how changes in American society impacted on the evolution of public health, health care facilities, and the emerging role of the government in health care issues. No prerequisites, but students are expected to read assigned materials and to attend lectures. There will be a mandatory discussion session following each lecture.

11123 THEA THEA 0810 INTRODUCTION TO DRAMATIC ART
 Meets Reqs: LIT TTh 01:00 PM to 02:15 PM CL 235 3 Credits

This is a course in dramatic literature. Focus is on the form of drama: how drama differs from other story-telling literature. Readings cover periods (and styles) as varied as Greek tragedy and modern absurdist tragic-comedy. The text highlights differences in style, as well as the characteristics of types of plays, i.e. tragedy, comedy, tragic-comedy. Because plays are written to be performed, lectures and discussions often deal with the translation of the written page into performance. Students are required to purchase a semester pass and attend University Theatre productions.

This course is the second in a world theatre history sequence designed to explore the development of dramatic forms and theatre practices from the 5th century B.C.E. to 1970. In World Theatre: 1640 to 1880 we will discuss the history of theatre arts--which includes looking at drama, design, performance traditions and audiences--from the comedies of Restoration England to emerging realism of Buchner, Zola and Ibsen. Framed by questions of documentary interpretation and historical causation, the course will analyze the larger contexts of theatrical events, including social and political history, as well as the development of non-theatrical art forms. Our focus will be on western forms with occasional references to non-western forms of performance and production. In addition, we will discuss some contemporary scholarship examining these theatrical events.
