Students are encouraged to enroll in courses on Latin America/the Caribbean or to participate in the programs of Latin American Studies—Related Concentration, Undergraduate or Graduate Certificate. Many of the undergraduate courses on this list may be used to satisfy the School of Arts and Sciences foreign culture, non-Western culture requirement or other general education requirements. Need advice concerning registration or want information about the certificates or related concentration? Please contact Luis Van Fossen Bravo (email bravo@pitt.edu or phone 412-648-7396).

Students also are welcome to attend CLAS events—lectures, films, workshops, concerts, conferences and the annual Latin American and Caribbean Festival. See the monthly schedule of activities on the CLAS website: http://www.ucis.pitt.edu/clas

Important Information for Students and Advisors

Program Registration: To be officially enrolled in the CLAS certificate program, students must complete an application for admission to CLAS. Admissions are done on a rolling basis. The only prerequisite is interest in Latin American related topics. There are no deadlines, nor is there an application fee. However, the sooner a student enrolls, the sooner they may be eligible for awards, grants, and fellowships from CLAS.

Acceptable Certificate Courses: Courses in this list with titles typed in ALL CAPS are accepted to fulfill Latin American Studies area course requirements. Courses with titles typed in upper and lower case are international courses in which at least 25% of the content is Latin American. To have international courses count towards the certificate, focus your work on Latin America. (If the professor requires a paper or papers, bibliography, readings, etc., you must do all the work on a Latin American topic. You will be asked to present your work for the course to the CLAS academic advisor.)

Other Courses: Students may, with the permission of the CLAS advisor, register for a course with international content, a directed study, independent study or readings course taught by a CLAS faculty member. These courses will count towards the certificate/related concentration only if the student focuses specifically on a Latin American topic for the course.

University of Pittsburgh Course Numbers

Courses numbered from:

- 0001 to 0999 are lower level undergraduate courses; they are not acceptable for graduate credit.
- 1000 to 1999 are upper level undergraduate courses; they are acceptable for both undergraduate and graduate certificates.
- 2000 to 2999 are master's level courses and those in the 3000s are doctoral level courses.

All Latin American courses for the certificate or related concentration will be counted as “inside” or “outside” the student’s major.

Faculty: Please contact Luis Van Fossen Bravo (email bravo@pitt.edu or phone 412-648-7396 if your course contains 25% Latin American content and is missing from this list or if the information given about your course is incorrect. Revisions to this list are made as soon as corrections are received.

When the Spanish conquerors arrived in Mexico and Guatemala they found large cities with impressive temples raised on tall pyramids, lavish palaces for rulers, elaborate markets, and skilled craftsmen working in gold, copper, feathers, stone pottery, and other materials. They were astonished to find a civilization so like their own in some respects and yet so different (so "barbaric" to European eyes) in other ways. In this course we will explore this civilization and then trace its development from its remote roots three thousand years before the arrival of Cortez. Our exploration will center on examining the archaeological and historical evidence left by people in earlier periods and reconstructing the patterns of their lives and thoughts.

Beginning as early as 10,000 years ago human communities of unprecedented scale began to emerge in many regions all around the globe. The process has continued in much more recent times as well. These large communities, numbering at least a few hundred people, and ranging well up into the thousands, usually (but not always) became supra-local in character. Unequal, or hierarchical, relationships usually (but not always) came to occupy an important place in their social organization. The seminar will take a comparative approach to the social dynamics of this process, using the varied trajectories of chiefdom emergence in different parts of the world as an opportunity to increase our understanding of the forces that have driven this process and given the resulting societies such highly varied characteristics.

Latin America hosts some of the most biologically diverse and productive ecosystems on Earth, yet economic and social development are frequently at odds with efforts to conserve and use these ecosystems sustainably. This upper-level seminar focuses on the issues surrounding environmental sustainability in Latin America from a holistic, interdisciplinary perspective. The course will start with a general introduction to the three legs of sustainability and sustainable development theory, as well as the ecology and evolution of Neotropical biodiversity. We will use published primary literature to explore the particular complexities of Latin American sustainable development, and analyze case studies of moments through history in which environmental issues were either championed or de-emphasized. The course will feature several guest lectures, optional seminars for extra credit, and discussions of current sustainability news. Students will be responsible for a final research project and presentation.

This special section of Imagining Social Justice will be held at a prison: the State Correctional Institution Laurel Highlands. Pitt students and incarcerated students will take the course together, following the Inside-Out pedagogy model (http://insideoutcenter.org/about-inside-out.html). Inside-Out has been in existence for twenty years, and over 100 universities across the nation have participated.

In literature, visual art, and drama, point of view is a key element of artistic craft. The premise of this course is that point of view is also a key element of learning and interpretation. Thus, the course will be structured through dialogue amongst students with who bring a wide range of different points of view to the class.

The course will study poetry, drama, fiction, and monuments that offer many different ideas about what constitutes justice, how to achieve it, and what a more just and joyful world might look like.
We'll address literature in relation to both history and current events. The range of the course is global:
topics may include artistic explorations of apartheid in South Africa; 9/11; immigration; affordable access to clean water; memorials, representations of liberty and the constraints upon it, and what literature and the arts can do in the world.

Class meetings will be run primarily through discussion. There will be short weekly writing assignments as well as writing in several different creative and academic genres. Near-100% attendance is expected.

Please note that since about 12 of 15 class meetings will be held at the prison, which is about 1.5 hours away from Pitt, you would need to block out Mondays from approx. 11:00 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Transportation will be provided.

This course is a historical introduction to the religious traditions that developed in ancient Near East and the Mediterranean. Our major emphasis is on the history of the religious traditions that emerged in late antiquity in this area and which continue to be major world religions: Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. We will also touch on Zoroastrianism. We focus on key concepts, historical developments, and contemporary issues. Throughout the course, we also examine interactions among these religious traditions. In the last part of the course we examine the issue of globalization and the spread of these religions around the world as well as the presence of "non-Western" religion in the "West." The course also serves as an introduction to the academic study of religion and provides a foundation for further coursework in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. No prior knowledge of any of the religions studied is expected or assumed.

11:00 AM - 11:50 AM Gen Ed Req.: 50 CCA DIV GR
209 Lawrence Hall HA Gotkowitz, Laura

This course is a thematic survey of Latin American history from the early nineteenth-century wars of independence to the present. We will first explore the broad social, economic, and political processes that shaped the formation of Latin American nations in the nineteenth century. Focusing on specific countries, we will then consider the diverse political paths that Latin Americans have taken in the twentieth and twenty-first centuries and the varied ways they have envisioned democracy, social justice, and economic development. Lectures and readings will consider a range of countries including Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, Cuba, Bolivia, and Chile. Course materials include manifestos, speeches, human rights reports, a few film clips, and the news.

This course examines the history of the African diaspora in Spanish America and Brazil from 1500 to the present. It begins with the initial implantation of plantation slavery in the New World, the subsequent expansion of slavery, and the growth of a large free black population during the colonial period (1500-1820). It then looks at the role of slaves and free black people in the region's struggle for independence and in the nineteenth-century republics. The course concludes with an examination of twentieth-century racial issues in the region, focusing on the rise of black political and social movements in Brazil, Colombia, and other countries.

Pre Requisite(s): none

This course is offered in conjunction with HIST 0501, Modern Latin America. It is a supplementary, one-credit Spanish-language recitation, where issues raised each week in history 0501 will be discussed in greater detail in a Spanish-immersion format. This practicum offers an opportunity for students to utilize, reinforce, and deepen the skills they have acquired in foreign language courses. We will listen to Latin American music, read primary sources from political manifestos to news, and generally enrich our understanding of Latin America's diverse past even as we improve our Spanish-language conversational fluency. This practicum is a great option for students hoping to study abroad in the future.

Pre Requisite(s): none

In this seminar students will develop the critical skills of reading and writing history through a close examination of one fundamental theme in the history of U.S.-Latin American relations: the impact of U.S. intervention in the Caribbean and Central America during the early twentieth century. In the first half of the course, we will explore how historians have analyzed diverse forms of U.S. intervention and nationalist challenges to U.S. imperial rule. This focus will allow us to gain a deeper understanding of the different ways of writing history. In the second half of the course, you will work on a research paper that examines a specific aspect of a U.S. occupation. Rather than simply analyzing the works of other scholars, you will work primarily with historical documents such as U.S. State Department records. Class assignments are designed to guide you through the process of researching and writing the paper. You will learn how to define topics and questions; find, select and analyze primary sources; decide between contradictory pieces of evidence; create clear and well-substantiated arguments; and shape a coherent narrative out of the many possibilities. No Spanish-language skills are required for this course.

This course ranges widely over the past two hundred years of Latin American history to explore the lives of women in all their complexity and diversity, from nineteenth-century enslaved wet nurses to indigenous marketwomen to modern ballet stars. Women's lives in Latin America have embodied a series of contradictions that make us rethink U.S.-based assumptions about gender, sexuality, and power. This is a region where traditional gender roles coexist with a spectrum of sexual identities; where devout Catholicism and motherhood have at times fueled radical political action by women. We will draw on films, documentaries, and autobiographies as well as the writings of historians and anthropologists. Our goal will be to map the range and complexity of Latin American women's lives and track how they have changed over time. Along the way we examine the major political, economic, and social trends in Latin American history and explore urgent current topics like migration, environmental activism, and organized crime.

This seminar explores the complex dynamics of black internationalism, focusing on the global visions; transnational activities; and transracial political alliances of people of African descent in the United States and in other parts of the globe. Highlighting the writings, speeches, activism, and overseas travel of a diverse group of men and women, this course employs a gender analysis and moves black women from the margins to the center of the black internationalist story. The seminar examines varied expressions of black internationalism in the United States and abroad from the late 19th century to the Civil Rights-Black Power era. It engages two key questions: how was black women's engagement in internationalism similar to and/or different from their male counterparts? And to what extent did black women merge internationalism with issues of women's rights and/or feminist concerns? Course readings will represent a combination of primary and secondary sources that reflect the geographical breadth of the African Diaspora including Africa, the Americas, and Europe.

An introduction to the historical and social science literature on Brazil, from 1500 to the present. In that literature, several questions recur: What have been the long-term legacies of Portuguese colonialism and African slavery in Brazil? How have Brazilians thought, talked, and acted about their multiracial, multicultural society? How have they struggled to resolve the contradictions between formal political equality (democratic citizenship) and extreme social and economic inequality? We will explore these and other questions in works drawn from the fields of history, anthropology, political science, and sociology.

Because of civil wars in several parts of the world, especially in Sub-Saharan Africa, the international organizations have reshaped their development agenda by emphasizing the importance of security and peace as preconditions for development. This approach was explicitly included among the aims of the United Nations by then Secretary-General Kofi Annan in his roadmap for the implementation of the UN Millennium Summit. In parallel, the concept of human security has been promoted by several Western governments, NGOs and independent commissions in order to take into account the need to address not only state security needs but also the vulnerability of individual humans in crisis situations. Aid policies have taken into account these evolutions, though the concept of human security itself has been discussed in a controversial way. The European Union is progressively integrating it into its security agenda and has started securitizing its development agenda and African policy, including instruments like the Cotonou convention with African, Caribbean and Pacific states. This 1.5-credit course explores the reasons for the merging of security and development policies in the European Union and its Member States and the emergence of a European human security agenda within the wider context of the United Nations, World Bank and the OECD. The focus will be European policies towards crisis areas (Balkans, Caucasus, Middle East, Great Lakes Africa, and South and Southeast Asia) and peace building activities like: regulations about antipersonnel landmines, small arms and light weapons, conflict timber and conflict diamonds, policies of conditionality and sanctions, assistance to transitional justice, peace building, security governance, and security sector/system reform in fragile states. NOTE: For credit in the CLAS certificate all work must be concentrated on Latin America and/or The Caribbean.

Pre Requisite(s): PLAN: Political Science (MA or PHD)

The course is a readings seminar designed to introduce graduate students to the basic international literature on political questions and problems in the Latin American context. The course will focus primarily on the topic of "regime transition" in Latin America.

This course introduces graduate students to the study of gender and politics. Students will be exposed to theories and empirical research in the field. The course will also encourage students to refine and extend their thinking on a series of important topics in the recent literature. NOTE: For credit in the CLAS certificate all work must be concentrated on Latin America and/or The Caribbean.

Pre Requisite(s): None
Focuses on development theories; classical, neo-classical, Marxian, dualistic (economic and non-economic) as well as models of agricultural development and administration, productivity enhancement, saving and investment and the foreign sector. Students are expected to apply development models to current problems, analyze and construct policy approaches to issues of current importance in less developed countries. NOTE: For credit in the CLAS certificate all work must be concentrated on Latin America and/or The Caribbean.

Pre Requisite(s): PLAN: Political Science (MA or PHD)
This comparative course draws together a multidisciplinary set of readings to examine the intersection of race, gender and social and economic development in Latin America and the USA. In this upper-level course we want to look more closely at the intersection of gender, race and nation in the context of historical colonialism and contemporary globalization as well as in the context of the struggle over feminist and nationalist meanings and claims. Focusing on the historical and structural location and biographical and group experiences of “third world” women in first and third world contexts, we will investigate the following: (a) conceptual paradigms which address questions of “intersectionality” or, broadly speaking, the tension between issues of national and cultural self-determination, oppressive ethno-national and patriarchal practices, the international human rights of women, Western feminism, and third-world/women-of-color standpoints, (b) the social relations of race, class and gender in “development” practices at household, national and global levels, (c) women’s response, resistance and self-organization locally and transnationally. NOTE: For credit in the CLAS certificate all work must be concentrated on Latin America and/or The Caribbean.

This course introduces students to the cultural history of the Hispanic World. Starting with the study of Pre-Columbian civilizations and the controversial politics of the Spanish Conquest we will discuss the conflicts involved in the transformation of Latin America. Through a broad variety of texts; chronicles, documentaries, films, fiction and novels, students will learn about the Spanish-speaking world and also explore the complex interactions implied in the process of colonization, in the foundation of national identities and in the creation of cultural traditions. We will stress the importance that these social and political tensions have in order to understand the past but also we will analyze its impact in the present. Beginning with Sor Juana Inés de la Cruz, this course will insist in the dynamics and strategies followed and invented by women poets in order to survive as writers in a man’s world. From Ranging from Colonial times until nowadays, poetry has always been considered an esoteric genre, devoid of power. We will examine precisely that relation: how women poets and their poethics draw for all readers a way to interact with an aggressive world that marginalizes and excludes their actions and writings within the canon. We will read authors from the Latin American, Caribbean and Spanish literature, concentrating, besides Sor Juana, on Modern and Contemporary poets. From a queer theoretical perspective, as an extension of gender and sexuality studies, this course offers a panoramic view of cultural production in Mexico from 1901 to the present. As a point of departure, several milestones are presented in the sociocultural constructions of masculinity, femininity and sexuality and their respective transformations throughout the 20th century. Similarly, this course examines the themes, dynamics, trends and common sites of sexual diversity in contemporary Mexico. Incorporating a diversity of cultural texts (i.e. novels, essays, newspaper articles, videos, films, art, music, and performance.), this course centers thematically on the gender models that circulated before, during and after the 1910 Revolution, the debates about homosexuality during the decade of the 40s, 50s and 60s, the emergence of activist movement in favor of sexual diversity in the 70s, the cultural production of homosexual themes, the urban space in the development of sexually dissident practices, the HIV/AIDS pandemic, nightlife culture, sexual manifestations in the borderlands and in the indigenous communities of Oaxaca, lesbianism, transsexualism, the debate on queerness, the cultural symbols and practices of the LGBT community in Mexico. This course aims to develop critical thinking skills through the rigorous examination of the assumptions that fix, homogenize and perpetuate the traditional narratives that lead to a dichotomy of sexuality in contemporary Mexico.

This course is designed to introduce students to the concepts of resistance and social activism in Latin American: how social movements and activism are organized, exercised, enacted, and contested. From everyday forms of resistance to organized movements, we will examine some concrete historical and cultural situations in relation to major topics: the legacy of past revolutions, human rights and memory, Neoliberalism and globalization, environmental issues, women and gay activism, and Hispanic immigration to the US. Through critical and fictional texts, films and documentaries, music and visual arts, students will gain a multidimensional understanding of contemporary Hispanic issues and different ways and instances of social resistance.

The primary goal of this course is to examine the complex relationships between the indigenous peoples of the Andean region (mainly Peru and Bolivia, but also Ecuador, the south of Colombia and the north of Chile and Argentina) and the different practices and institutions of Spanish colonialism. The course begins with an overview of Andean politics and societies under Inca rule, to then focus on the colonial period. The two main historical processes/periods studied are the long and protracted negotiations that went from the moment of contact between Incas and conquistadors to the establishment of the colonial regime in the 16th century, and the massive rebellions that took place all over the Andes toward the end of Spanish colonial rule, in the latter half of the 18th century. In both cases, we will study the interaction of political, artistic, religious, and racial dynamics, and the resulting historical transformations, using a multidisciplinary approach that will include anything from current scholarly debates to colonial paintings and primary sources. The course satisfies the following GERs: Historical Analysis, Cross-Cultural Awareness, and Course in a Specific Geographic Region

The goal of this seminar is to do an in-depth reading of indigenous critical thinking in the colonial Andes, focusing on the work of Guaman Poma de Ayala and Garcilaso de la Vega. It will be about creatively examining problems their texts pose still today, making sense of things that are ineludible but have been largely ignored. Some of the broader ideas this seminar invites you to ponder are: the ways in religion, race and knowledge intertwined in the 16th and early 17th centuries; the relations between Andeanism (lo andino) and the colonial past; the impact of the Western dualist thinking both in the 16th century and today; the problem of the interplay of difference and similitude between Europeans and Indians, and their impact on colonial and contemporary agendas. In addition to Guaman Poma's and Garcilaso's works and critical studies of them, course material includes 16th- and 17th-century colonialist texts, and studies of cultural, social, and political dynamics in the colonial Andes. Class discussion and assignments can be in either Spanish or English, but you must understand well both languages. Final papers can be about anything related to what is discussed during the semester; they do not have to be necessarily about colonialism or the Andes.

The Caribbean summarizes the successive colonizations it has endured. This palimpsest has been studied by several scholars such as Sarduy, Glissant, Sylvia Winter, and many others. This course will emphasize on the women producers of the Caribbean text. The rhizomatic texture of their production will help us focus on three main topics and their global repercussions: literature, painting and music from the XX-XXI. Some of the authors to be read are Gerty Dambury, Marta Aponte, Maryse Condé, Jamaica Kincaid, Ana Lydia Vega, Marlene Nourbese Philip, Mayra Montero, Myrna Báez, Rita Indiana Hernandez, Edwidge Danticat, Julia Alvarez, Marie Vieux-Chauvet, and some male authors. History and politics play an important part in the conceptual and global dimensions of this dialogue.

This course will combine two approaches: A) It will be based on the hypothesis that the relational continuum that engages fiction and nonfiction also enacts the relational continuum of the normal and the pathological inasmuch as both sets of relationships may be conceived as open fields of experimentation with antinomies such as nature and culture, fantasy and reality, lack and excess, presence and absence, life and death, and so on; B) It will assume Gilles Deleuze's thesis that most poignant literary works are addressed to a people that will never read them. This entails that many literary works may be read as ethnography and vice versa, which endows ethnoliterature with an impressively broad spectrum. Obviously, the fact that the colonial and postcolonial history of Latin America conditions the particular convergence of these two approaches will be a point of departure. Reading list will include recent fiction by Mónica Ojeda, Larraquy, Quirós, Cabiya and others; fiction from the French speaking Caribbean, by Chamoiseaux, from the English speaking Caribbean, by Harris; ethnographies by Clastres and Wilbert, ethnoliterary fiction by Döblin, and proper mythographies by indigenous authors.

This course is designed to examine the history of organized crime not only within the United States, but from an International perspective as well. The emergence of "non-traditional" groups which are competing for power and profits will be examined, as well as the alliances between various criminal groups that have evolved, resulting in the phenomenon of "transnational" organized crime. Those "non-traditional" groups include, but are not necessarily limited to, domestic and international terrorist organizations, the reasons for their development as well as the perceived risk to American citizens both in a domestic environment and abroad. Neither organized crime nor a terrorist organization can be effectively discussed without integrating the evolution of U.S. Drug Policy, which will be included.
Finally, the various government tactics implemented to counter the threats mentioned herein as well as the impact on the private sector will be integrated into lectures throughout the program.

Organized crime is no longer confined to a few countries such as Italy, the United States, and Japan.
During the 1980s and 1990s it has become much more pervasive, and has had a major impact in countries such as Russia and other countries in transition, Turkey, Mexico, and South Africa. This course looks at the dynamics of organized crime, explains why it develops in particular countries, the various forms it takes, and the responses of law enforcement agencies and international institutions.

This seminar explores contemporary issues of social and public policy in Latin America through complexity, systems, gonadal, policy diffusion, comparative, and case-study approaches. In the first section participants review general policy concepts and theories, to be followed by the historical, economic and political context of public and social policy in the region. The second section examines several policy areas such as education, employment, poverty alleviation, public administration, social security, health, minorities, and violence. Using complexity and systems perspectives it is possible to understand how social and public policy influences the development and practice of fields like education and it could be also influenced by those fields. Disciplines such as economics, history, health, political science, anthropology, and sociology shape and help to make sense of educational issues and vice versa. This seminar is an opportunity for students in education and other disciplines to engage in interdisciplinary deliberation on policy issues in this region and fulfills the requirements for certificates in Latin American studies. Materials for the class include current news, scholarly publications, videos and other material published in English, Spanish, and possibly Portuguese (students must be able to read at least basic Spanish).

student does not complete the second semester the student shall receive a w for the course (for both semesters), thus nullifying the grade for the prior semester. Students will receive 3 credits per semester. In the immigration clinic students represent immigrants requesting asylum, facing removal from the United States, and seeking special protection under the violence against women act. In representing clients under the supervision of the clinical professor, students perform all aspects of case preparation including interviewing clients, writing pleadings, appearing in immigration court, appearing before administrative agencies and managing post-relief issues. Clinic students also assist their clients in overcoming linguistic and cultural barriers that could impede their clients' success in the U.S. Legal system. Clients may include refugees, immigrant women and children survivors of domestic violence applying to change their status, persons with criminal convictions who seek relief from removal from the United States and other immigrant populations. Students are also expected to collaborate with community based organizations that serve the foreign born population in the city.

This course introduces the core concepts of human security, examines the institutions that promote them, and probes the advantages and limitations of human security as a means of addressing difficult policy issues. Human security treats individuals and communities, rather than states and institutions, as the fundamental units of analysis. It calls for an integration of individuals' security and integrity with state security and sovereignty. Analyzing security at the level of individuals instead of states raises important challenges and opportunities for observers and practitioners of development, conflict and peace, human security, and investigate substantive policy agendas affecting human security on a range of global issues. We grapple with both direct and structural violence especially among vulnerable populations, and with debates about prioritizing or narrowing human security threats and referents. And we explore how a diverse set of actors develop global public policy responses by articulating new policy agendas and defining policy recommendations. Throughout the term we assess the advantages and drawbacks of the human security. NOTE: For credit in the CLAS certificate all work must be concentrated on Latin America and/or The Caribbean.

This is a survey of development policies, issues, institutions, and resources for professionals working in development. Lectures, discussions, and presentations in class focus on analysis of development policies, and on new and significant policy issues, skills, methodologies, and resources. The course helps students develop the ability to analyze development issues from several perspectives, understand the breadth of international development as a field of professional service and academic study, and clarify their priorities for acquiring skills in preparation for that service. Students completing the course will be able to grasp the history of approaches and experiences with development, identify and critically analyze major institutions involved, assess political and institutional environments of development, employ some key social science and administrative tools, and recognize and understand principles of other significant skills and emerging methodologies in development practice. The course is organized in three parts: 1) dynamics of development and social change; 2) development management: who's in charge; And 3) contemporary issues and skills. Throughout the course we will introduce, discuss, and return to case studies that illuminate key issues and themes: the global HIV/AIDS pandemic, microfinance programs in development, the chad-cameroon oil pipeline project, water system privatization, and the global and local food prices and production. In this course students examine global human rights as an evolving social and political institution, analyze human rights violations and the challenges of human rights practice, and learn how serious threats to human security may be addressed. We examine key human rights concepts, theories and laws, and related controversies that often obstruct international action on human rights (e.g. origins and nature of rights, universality and cultural relativity claims, conflicting rights, state sovereignty, and notions of obligations and accountability). We then examine the field of international action for human rights (e.g. states, inter-governmental actors, non-governmental actors and civil society) and the core dimensions and challenges of human rights work. Throughout the course, human rights target groups (such as women, children, and refugees) and current topics (such as genocide, child soldiering, gender violence, and peacekeeping) are examined as case studies, illustrating key principles and challenges, and providing insight into the range and depth of current human rights and their practice across fields. Students also select a specific human rights topic for major assignments, including a human rights issue brief and a comparative case study of international action on human rights. We use basic conceptual frameworks from economics and quantitative methods to examine economic development issues. We begin by discussing Amartya Sen's concept of 'development as freedom' and measures of development such as the Human Development Index. We examine when the market and government can serve as appropriate mechanisms to allocate resources within the economy. We discuss the institutions that are needed to ensure that markets function well. We study innovations, such as disclosure programs, that reduce corruption. We examine gender-sensitive pro-poor strategies, such as micro-credit programs, the granting of property rights to women, investment into girls' schooling and women's reproductive health. We study World Trade Organization provisions that assist or impede poor countries' access to drugs in combating AIDS and other public health crises. We review the rules of the WTO that attempt to balance free trade and countries' ability to protect public health and the environment. We discuss the role of international trade (e.g., OECD subsidies for agriculture), foreign aid and debt in encouraging or impeding economic development. Students will be graded on policy memos that are well written, based on quantitative and qualitative evidence, and oral briefings that recommend solutions to development challenges faced by governments, international organizations, non-governmental organizations or corporations. We examine various energy sources in the US/EU/developing countries including oil, gas, nuclear, hydro, biofuels, solar and wind. We discuss how market failures and government policies influence the gaps between private and social costs of energy. We examine incentive policies for the adoption of renewable energy and overall benefits from restructuring towards a greener economy. We examine the role of international trade, investment, technology transfer and climate policy in increasing energy efficiency and renewable energy worldwide. NOTE: For credit in the CLAS certificate all work must be concentrated on Latin America and/or The Caribbean.

This course seeks to critically examine how development processes affect women and men and gender relations. By doing so it aims to contribute to an ongoing discussion on the meaning and operationalization of inclusive and equitable development. The course has two sections: the first provides a theoretical and conceptual grounding by reviewing how debates around women/gender and development have evolved. This section surveys leading approaches to gender and development, development theory, and feminist critiques. The second and more applied part of the course explores the gendered impact of development policies and projects by examining substantive issues within the realms of health, work, violence, climate change and globalization. Select development projects are utilized from different regional, institutional and cultural contexts to highlight the diversity of approaches, actors, as well as intended and unintended impacts. After completing this course, the students will have a nuanced understanding of the main perspectives and debates in gender and development; be able to evaluate their strengths and weaknesses; be able to develop a critical awareness of issues facing women and men as actors within national and global development practices; and accumulate professional competence (reading, writing, presenting) in gender based project development and evaluation. NOTE: For credit in the CLAS certificate all work must be concentrated on Latin America and/or The Caribbean.

2809 PIA LATIN AMERICAN POLITICS 3 Credits
31385 Th AT LEC Enroll Limit Ames, Barry
1:00PM – 3:30PM Gen Ed Req.: 15
4801 WWPH

The course is a readings seminar designed to introduce graduate students to the basic international literature on political questions and problems in the Latin American context. The course will focus primarily on the topic of "regime transition" in Latin America.
Pre Requisite(s): None
This course uses strengths-based and social ecological approaches to prepare students for practicing public health with communities. Through in-class activities, discussions, community-based experiences and written assignments students will learn appropriate ways to engage communities and assist them in building their own capacity to identify and address health issues. Students will also learn techniques for conducting community health assessments using both primary and secondary data.

The impact of population growth, distribution, and change on social, economic, environmental, and health relationships is presented with a focus on the sociopolitical responses to population dynamics.
