	Session: 6W1	MWF	1:30:00 PM to 3:45:00 PM	CL 302

Since its publication in 1812, the Grimm Brothers' Children's and Household Tales found a readership that spanned countries, languages, and generations. Its universal appeal can be traced to its origins: it reflects not only the influence of early 19th Century Germany, but also oral folklore traditions that go back thousands of years and range from as far away as Iceland, the Middle-East, and India. This course introduces students to a wide selection of these and other folktales from the Indo-European tradition as well as to numerous perspectives for understanding these folktales. We will examine the aesthetic, social, historical, and psychological values that these tales reflect, and will also discuss significant theoretical and methodological paradigms within folklore studies, including structural, socio-historical, psychoanalytic, and feminist perspectives. Finally, we will discuss the continuing influence of this folk tradition on popular and elite culture of our time. Prerequisite(s): none

The course will open with a detailed consideration of the context and causes of World War II, including World War I, the Versailles Treaty, and the Great Depression. We will discuss the determinants of Hitler's rise to power and of German expansionism in the 1930's. We will examine the military struggle of World War II, but such topics as economic mobilization, propaganda, occupation policies, resistance movements and the Holocaust also receive significant attention. The course concludes with an analysis of war-time diplomacy, the postwar settlement, and the onset of the Cold War.

This course is a historical introduction to the religious traditions that developed in ancient Near East and the Mediterranean. Our major emphasis is on the history of the religious traditions that emerged in late antiquity in this area and which continue to be major world religions: Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and Zoroastrianism. We focus on key concepts, historical developments, and contemporary issues. Throughout the course, we also examine interactions among these religious traditions. In the last part of the course we examine the issue of globalization and the spread of these religions around the world as well as the presence of "non-Western" religion in the "West." The course also serves as an introduction to the academic study of religion and provides a foundation for further coursework in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. No prior knowledge of any of the religions studied is expected or assumed.

This course introduces students to Russian fairy tales, a fascinating and productive genre of folklore that reveals a great deal about Russian traditions and modes of thought. Taking a psychological approach to the materials, the course examines not only the tales, but also the beliefs informing the magic world of these narratives. Since the humans, spirits, and beasts populating this world are richly portrayed in Russian art, a significant component of the course will consist of visual and audio representations of figures and scenes from fairy tales. We shall examine slides of posters, paintings, book illustrations, postcards, etc., and shall listen to music based on characters, situations, and narratives drawn from the tales (e.g., extracts from Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakov, Chaikovsky, and Mussorgsky).

Project GO Intermediate Russian in Narva: 8 credits: This intensive eight-week ROTC second-year language course will take place in Narva, Estonia. Narva, located on Estonia's border with Russia, is a Russian-speaking city with a sizable Russian population. The course has three components. The first, intensive language classes based on the communicative-functional approach to language learning, will develop linguistic proficiency in the four skills of listening, speaking, reading, and writing and will use authentic texts and media materials to help students acquire lingual-cultural competence encompassing both high and popular culture. Students will work extensively to acquire advanced-level Russian grammar, syntax, vocabulary, and conversation and writing skills. The second component, a lecture series, will introduce students to topics in contemporary Russian and Baltic culture and politics. Third, excursions in and around Narva will showcase this unique region that is rarely visited by US students. Course objectives are to develop an active vocabulary in practical, everyday topics, particularly those topics which will prepare students for military service related to the Russian-speaking world, and to refine composition skills. Readings culled from Russian-language mass media are also a part of this course. Classes in Narva meet from 9:00 a.m. through 3:00 p.m. daily Monday through Friday. Students will also have weekly lectures and excursions. Prerequisite: two years of college-level Russian or equivalent proficiency. Apply at sli.pitt.edu. Project GO Advanced Russian in Narva: 8 credits: This intensive eight-week ROTC third-year language course will take place in Narva, Estonia. Narva, located on Estonia's border with Russia, is a Russian-speaking city with a sizable Russian population. The course has three components. The first, intensive language classes based on the communicative-functional approach to language learning, will develop linguistic proficiency in the four skills of listening, speaking, reading, and writing and will use authentic texts and media materials to help students acquire lingual-cultural competence encompassing both high and popular culture. Students will work extensively to acquire advanced-level Russian grammar, syntax, vocabulary, and conversation and writing skills. The second component, a lecture series, will introduce students to topics in contemporary Russian and Baltic culture and politics. Third, excursions in and around Narva will showcase this unique region that is rarely visited by US students. Course objectives are to develop an active vocabulary in practical, everyday topics, particularly those topics which will prepare students for military service related to the Russian-speaking world, and to refine composition skills. Readings culled from Russian-language mass media are also a part of this course. Classes in Narva meet from 9:00 a.m. through 3:00 p.m. daily Monday through Friday. Students will also have weekly lectures and excursions. Prerequisite: two years of college-level Russian or equivalent proficiency. Apply at sli.pitt.edu.
