Introduction to Comparative Law
Professor Kirk W. Junker of the University of Cologne teaches Comparative Legal Education, Training and Practice: Germany and the U.S. Every country educates and trains its lawyers differently. Comparative law stresses not only the ideas of the foreign system, but provides a new basis from which one understands his or her own legal education, training and practices.

Site Visits
In addition to the classroom program and visits to important EU judicial and governmental sites in Luxembourg and Strasbourg, a number of cultural excursions in Germany are included such as a Rhine River cruise through the World Heritage site of wine valleys and more than 40 hilltop castles; the birth house museum of Beethoven in Bonn; a guided tour of the Augustusburg Palace at Brühl; and visits to the local courts and city hall.

Optional Externship (1 Credit)
Upon successful completion of the three-week course of study, a student may choose to do practical training under the tutelage of a practicing lawyer in an international law office that uses the English language to practice international law or American law, and to demonstrate to the student the possibilities for employment in international and foreign legal settings. As native English speakers and students of the common law, students provide valuable service in reviewing and drafting legal documents, attending meetings with clients, and developing transactional and litigation strategies. Externships may include law firms, industry, or judicial chambers.

Credits earned in the Europe Externship Program count towards the required six (6) credits of experiential learning necessary for graduation for Duquesne Law students.
