REQUIREMENTS

The Global Studies Center offers an Undergraduate Certificate program, a Graduate Certificate program, and a Bachelor of Philosophy in International and Area Studies (BPhil-IAS), Global Studies Track.

Students choose from one of five Global Concentrations (Ecology and Sustainability; Politics and Economy; Cultural Dynamics; Peace, Conflict and Security; Health and Well-Being), and study a world language. Students entering the program of as 8/2017 should use this booklet to select courses.

UNDERGRADUATE CERTIFICATE REQUIREMENTS

- Core course, Introduction to Global Studies (PS 0550)
- Five courses in one global concentration
- Three of the five courses must be taken in at least two departments other than the student's major (interdisciplinary requirement)
- Language proficiency: two years college-level language proficiency
- Capstone Research Paper uniting global concentration with transnational analysis, written as part of a course and approved by a Global Studies advisor
- Grades of C or higher
- Submission of Global Studies Digital Portfolio

BPHIL-IAS, GLOBAL STUDIES TRACK

- Three core courses: Introduction to Global Studies (PS 0550); Capstone Seminar; and One Methodology course suitable to the student's Honors Thesis topic
- Seven courses in one global concentration
- Four of the seven global concentration courses must be taken in at least two departments other than the student's major (interdisciplinary requirement)
- Language proficiency: three years college-level language proficiency
- Honors Thesis
- Approved study abroad
- Minimum grade average of 3.5/4.00
- Submission of Global Studies Digital Portfolio

GRADUATE CERTIFICATE REQUIREMENTS (Varies per school)

- Six courses in one global concentration
- Three of the six courses must be taken in at least two departments other than the student's major (interdisciplinary requirement). If student is enrolled in a professional school, at least one course must be taken outside the school, and two outside of their department. Students are required to have a minimum of 3 credits over the required number of credits for their degree program. This may include language courses.
- Language proficiency: three years college-level language proficiency or student can obtain proficiency at 2nd college year of a commonly taught language and one year less commonly taught language.
- Capstone Research Paper uniting global concentration with transnational analysis, written as part of a course and approved by a Global Studies advisor
- Grades of B or higher
- Submission of Global Studies Capstone Paper

COURSE SCHEDULE FALL 2018 (2191)

This course schedule pertains to Core Course and Global Concentration course requirements using the 5 new concentrations introduced in August 2017. Courses are offered by many departments and schools across the University of Pittsburgh, which may update course information as needed. This course list is valid as of March 22, 2018. To verify the most current information for courses of interest to you, consult Peoplesoft.

GLOBAL CONCENTRATION COURSES

1. Ecology and Sustainability

ANTH 1541 CULTURAL RESOURCE MANAGEMENT 11351 ANTH M, 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM WWPH 3300 ARTSC 3 Credits Zinn, Timothy G This course will cover in an introductory way all aspects of Cultural Resource Management and Historic Preservation. Major topics include federal historic preservation legislation, cultural resources (historic and prehistoric archaeology, historic structures), the National Register of Historic Places, Section 106 and 110 of the NHPA, The National Environmental Policy Act, historic preservation planning, and state historic preservation plans. The course will utilize historic architectural examples as well as prehistoric and historic archaeological sites. It is expected that students will have some specific interest in historic preservation and/or cultural resource management, although the interest may be based in history, anthropology, architecture, law, or administration. No specific prerequisites are required. ANTH ANTH 1750 UNDERGRADUATE SEMINAR: CLIMATE AND MW, 4:30:00 PM to 5:45:00 PM CULTURE 3 Credits Barton, Loukas William Undergraduate Seminar. This course is about the interactions between humans and the environment. Observations of contemporary environmental change, and projections about how change in the future might affect human society, globally and locally, feature prominently in political discourse, social and environmental movements, contemporary literature and popular culture. In large part, these projections for the future have been informed by patterns of change in the past. In this course we will evaluate these patterns of change in the environment, and in human history, and interrogate the correlations and interactions between them. Is human culture (technology, society, language, or identity) 'determined' by the environment? How has environmental change affected biological and cultural evolution? To what extent did human groups modify their environments in the past? How have these modifications promoted or complicated the survival and persistence of individuals, groups, organizations, behaviors and traditions? Our goal with this exploration will be a better understanding of the scale and scope of these interactions, the feedbacks between them, and the promise and perils of using the archives of climate and culture to generate predictions about the future. 29728 ANTH 1750 UNDERGRADUATE SEMINAR: Health and Body TTh. 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM in Pittsburgh ARTSC 3 Credits Wanderer, Emily Mannix WWPH 3300 Undergraduate Seminar. This course examines the relationship between environment and health, with a special focus on the city of Pittsburgh and the surrounding environs as a case study. We will use medical anthropology to systematically investigate the effect of the environment on health and the interplay of natural and human systems. Drawing on research in political ecology, this class will consider the social, political, and economic systems that shaped Pittsburgh and its inhabitants. We will pay particular attention to the way changing industrial and environmental conditions changed incidence of disease, and how exposure to risk and disease are shaped by race, gender, and class. We will examine issues like the history of air pollution, considering the impact of the 1948 Donora Smog, an environmental disaster which killed 18 people and reshaped understandings of the dangers of pollution. We will consider the history of resource extraction such as coal mining and oil and gas drilling and their impacts on the environment and health. The course will examine how knowledge about health is produced and the development of new forms of citizen science that enlist local residents in projects to monitor issues like air quality. ANTH 1762 29730 ANTH HUMAN ECOLOGY TTh, 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits WWPH 3301 Strathern, Andrew J Undergraduate Seminar. This course focuses on a number of vital and significant historical and contemporary issues that can be illustrated by incorporating a human ecology focus into a cultural anthropology perspective. Ecology is concerned with the place of human habitats in the wider life-world and how humans create and adapt to the landscapes they live in. Today, as in the past, these landscapes and the biosphere in which they belong, are threatened by environmental disasters, climate change, and ideologies of development that strain the overall capacities of the world to sustain an adaptive coexistence. The course incorporates the new subfield of 'disaster anthropology'. It also includes a focus on the anthropology of the body and the intersection of cultural and biological factors that constitutes human lifeways. Ethnographic cases from around the world are drawn on with especial reference to Europe and the Asia-Pacific region. A further theme has to do with the effects of conflict and the displacement of people, causing a global problem of migrants, refugees, and asylum seekers. 10706 BIOSC BIOSC 370 ECOLOGY TTh, 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Carson, Walter Page LANGY A221 The objective of the course is to provide a broad introduction to the study of ecology at the undergraduate level, through the presentation of lectures dealing with organismal, population, community, and ecosystem levels of hierarchical organization. The contributions of laboratory and field investigations to the development of ecological knowledge will be considered. Lecture material will be supplemented with required readings from an assigned textbook. BIOSC ECOLOGY TTh, 8:00:00 AM to 9:15:00 AM BIOSC 370 19166 LANGY A221 ARTSC Roberts, Laurel B 3 Credits The objective of the course is to provide a broad introduction to the study of ecology at the undergraduate level, through the presentation of lectures dealing with organismal, population, community, and ecosystem levels of hierarchical organization. The contributions of laboratory and field investigations to the development of ecological knowledge will be considered. Lecture material will be supplemented with required readings from an assigned textbook. 26891 BIOSC BIOSC 2540 SEMINAR IN ECOLOGY TBA, 12:00:00 AM to 12:00:00 AM Barr, Cathleen M Ashman, Tia-Lynn ARTSC 2 Credits TBATBA

Students will participate in the critical review of the current literature relating to a topic in ecology. Specific topic is to be selected later.

THE ATMOSPHERE, OCEANS & CLMTE 24993 GEOL-PL GEOL 1030 TTh, 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM Abbott, Mark Bunker BENDM 226 ARTSC 3 Credits This course will examine the atmospheric and oceanic interactions that determine the nature of the global climate system. Specifically, the course will explore the origin, evolution, and structure of the earth's oceans and atmosphere, the earth's energy balance, atmospheric circulation patterns, and surface and deep ocean currents. The course will also consider records of past climate, evidence for recent warming, climate change projections, and climate change policy. MGT ENVIRONMENTAL NPRF ORGS M. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM 19738 GEOL-PL GEOL 1332 ARTSC 3 Credits Allebach.Randall Ward THAW B09 Enthusiasm goes a long way in the nonprofit environmental world, but volunteers and professionals alike increasingly need more and more skills in order to make a lasting impact. It can be overwhelming even to those who already know what to expect. This course covers the "inner workings" of environmental organizations. We'll go beyond the slogans, junk mail, and big events to study what's behind the nonprofit world, what it takes to succeed, and why advocacy is so important... and so difficult! Speakers from the environmental community will share their experiences and perspectives each week, and a wide range of readings and assignments are designed to have students take a deep look and to experience some of this world, too. SUSTAINABILITY Th. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM 26461 GEOL-PL GEOL 1333 ARTSC 3 Credits Allebach, Randall Ward THAW 203 Sustainability is a term that has many meanings, depending on who's using it, and we will cover most of them in this class, from green campuses to green-washing. The class features guest speakers from the academic, governmental, nonprofit and business sectors to offer as many perspectives as possible on sustainability topics. The real focus of the class, though, is the development of sustainability projects on campus and in the Pittsburgh community. Students also participate in sustainabilityrelated events and field trips with the opportunity to present their work to a larger audience at the end of the semester. No previous computer classes are required. Students will be graded on the basis of approximately 5 computer assignments, in-class exercises, a project, and final exam. This course is a core course for the GIS Certificate. ECOSYSTEM ECOLOGY GEOL-PL GFOI 1641 TTh. 9:30:00 AM to 10:45:00 AM 27692 ARTSC 4 Credits Elliott, Emily M THAW 203 This course will provide students with an introduction to the principles of ecosystem ecology and associated applications to environmental change. This course is a core course for the GIS Certificate. 18978 WORLD HISTORY T, 6:00:00 PM to 7:50:00 PM HIST HIST 700 ARTSC 3 Credits Holstein, Diego LAWRN 104 This course is an introductory survey of world history starting from the human global migration out of Africa and up to the current global age. The course presents developments that impacted on humanity as a whole, such as climate changes, environmental issues, and plagues; patterns of development recurrent in different places of the world, including the emergence of agriculture, cities, and states; processes that brought different societies in contact, for example trade, migration, conquest, and cultural diffusion; and emphasizes the processes through which the entire world became interconnected resulting in a globalized world as we know it today. 28450 HIST 700 WORLD HISTORY TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM HIST 3 Credits ARTSC TBA This course is an introductory survey of world history, by which is meant an overview of major processes and interactions in the development of human society since the development of agriculture some 10,000 years ago. It is a selective overview, emphasizing large-scale patterns and connections in political, social, cultural, technological, and environmental history, yet it also provides balance among regions of the world. It encourages students to apply historical techniques to issues of their own interest.

It encourages students to apply historical techniques to issues of their own interest. 27225 PS PS 1538 POLIT OF OIL & NATRL RESORCS TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM Rukhadze, Vasili ARTSC 3 Credits WWPH 1502 Nature endowed some countries with abundant oil resources. As modern history proved, that may not always be such exciting news as it sounds at first. This course studies various countries in the Middle East, Latin America, Europe, Asia, and Africa with largest oil resources. It examines how oil resources impacted the formation of their respective domestic political systems and how politics of oil influenced and still influence general dynamics of international relations. Furthermore, the course will delve deep into 'the resource curse theory' and in comparative perspective will examine its impact on oil-rich countries' national economies. 11784 SOC 317 GLOBALIZATION MWF. 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits McDermott.Joshua Lew WWPH 2200 The aim of this course is to introduce students to the broad spectrum of histories and theories of global civilization. This includes examining processes of expansion and interconnections in social, economic, political, and cultural life across various societies. In this respect, today's globalization is approached as a process with deep roots in the comparative history of civilizations, and not simply as a contemporary phenomenon. Parallels to contemporary processes of globalization can be seen in the spread of trade routes, world religions, common languages, habits, manners, fashions, lifestyles, ideas and ideologies. These have foundations in migrations, conquests ancient world systems, discoveries, travels, and economic networks no less profound in the past than in the present. T. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM 26471 SOC SOC 444 URBAN SOCIOLOGY ARTSC LAWRN 232 3 Credits Howell, Junia Most Americans now live in urban areas -- cities and their suburbs. Around the world, more and more of the population are living in cities. Residents of big cities increasingly have more in common with the residents of cities halfway around the globe than with their rural countrymen just a few miles away. As human civilization becomes primarily an urban civilization we need to understand cities as distinct social entities. In this class we will study the development of the city from small mercantile enclaves to the modern sprawl of activity. We will look at urban polities, social ills, environmental issues, and consider those factors that make a city good, enjoyable, and pleasant. As we do, we will use the city and region of Pittsburgh as our living example. T. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM SOC SOC 473 SOC OF GLOBALIZATION & HEALTH 26197 VICTO 229 ARTSC 3 Credits Smith, Jacquelyn Geryl A description is not available at this time. 27472 SOC 1319 IMMIGRATION W. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM SOC WWPH 2200 ARTSC 3 Credits Moss.Dana Marie This course will examine the causes and consequences of migration, the experiences of populations who undergo displacement and resettlement, and common myths and debates surrounding this topic. While migration encompasses intra-state movement, this class will focus on border crossing between nation states. As a writingintensive course, students will be required to write and revise analytical papers; become versed in contemporary current events within and outside of the US context; and conduct a fieldsite visit exploring past or present immigration issues in Pittsburgh. The course will cover the social construction of borders, identities, and citizenship; differences in the categories distinguishing migrants from one another; the factors fueling migration and the consequences of cross-border movement; labor exploitation; women's issues; impacts on health; institutional responses and contexts of reception; generational and cultural issues; the criminalization of migrants and refugees; and how immigrant groups mobilize to contest their oppression. Grades will be based on attendance, evidence of reading and participation, and writing assignments and revision. 17862 SOC SOC 1445 SOCIETY AND ENVIRONMENT M, 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM ARTSC WWPH 2800 3 Credits Paterson, Mark William David This course aims to introduce students to several currents of thought within environmental sociology. We will address our lifestyles of disposability that are depleting our natural resources, jeopardizing our ecological sustainability, and cultural diversity. This necessarily will have us employ political economy and political ecology frameworks that link human societies with the environment. By doing so we, will also examine how various "green" and environmental social movements have emerged around the world in opposition to many of the deleterious aspects of neo-liberal "globalization." By the end of the term, students should be able to engage in discussions on the links between human societies, social movements, neo-liberal policies, and contemporary ecological problems in informed, critical ways. The principles of sustainability, nonviolence, inclusion, and peace will be examined and serve as our guiding criteria when evaluating the society - environment link. 29768 SOC SOC 1446 CONSUMPTION & EVERYDAY LIFE TTh, 1:00:00 PM to 2:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Paterson, Mark William David WWPH 2200 The global economy is premised on an increasingly globalized consumer society. This is nothing new. Marx and Engels in 1848 had noted how the bourgeoisie had 'given a cosmopolitan character to production and consumption in every country'. The exchange of goods in pre-industrial societies forms the basis for establishing identities and kinship networks. Similarly, we are socialized early to buy things to express ourselves, to help form individual and social identities, or to signal membership within subcultures. Once the preserve only of affluent societies, in markets, stores, and malls around the world, as global citizens we buy things to feel good, and gift things to make others feel better. Increasingly, we need this consumption to be sustainable.

HISTORY OF CARIBBEAN SLAVERY 29783 AFRCNA AFRCNA 1039 TTh, 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM

WWPH 4165 ARTSC 3 Credits Reid.Michele B

The Atlantic slave trade transported over 4 million Africans to the Caribbean -- 8 times the number that arrived in the United States. How did Africans and their descendants persevere under the colonial slave system? This course explores conceptual and comparative issues of enslavement in the Caribbean, particularly among Cuba, Haiti, and Jamaica. Case study examples address colonialism, the Middle Passage, the system of enslavement, freedom with slavery, maroon communities, resistance, rebellion, and emancipation. Students will analyze personal accounts by men and women of African descent from the 17th through the 19th centuries, as well as articles and films, to gain a deeper understanding of the complex role of enslavement in the Caribbean's historical and cultural development across the region.[General education requirements:International/Foreign Culture and Non-Western Culture]

29784 AFRCNA AFRCNA 1425 CARIBBEAN IDENTITIES TTh, 1:00:00 PM to 2:15:00 PM ARTSC Reid.Michele B CI 119 3 Credits

Caribbean legacies of slavery and colonialism, independence struggles, and international relations have produced unique colonial, national and transnational identities. This upper-level writing intensive undergraduate seminar explores the changes in the development of Caribbean identity over time from the eighteenth century to the present and in comparative national and transnational perspectives. Students will examine politics, social relations, and culture -- particularly through the intersections of race/ethnicity, music, cuisine, literature, religion, sports, and social media.

THE HISTORY OF GOD 27833 ANTH 1703 MW. 3:00:00 PM to 4:15:00 PM ANTH ARTSC 3 Credits Gordon.Beniamin Davis I AWRN 120

God has a history. In the earliest days of that history, god was worshipped as one of a plethora of deities controlling various spheres of cosmic activity or the human world. Students in this course will learn about this ancient pantheon--how gods functioned in society and how their presence was experienced by those devoted to them. They will then trace the evolution of the god of Israel from a mountaintop deity of the southern levant in the late second millennium BCE to a supreme deity worshipped by a small group of absolute monotheists based in Jerusalem in the mid-first millennium BCE. Students will become more sophisticated readers of biblical texts in the process. The sources of the Hebrew bible reflect not a homogeneous monotheism, but rather a diverse set of belief systems tending toward henotheism or even polytheism. By appropriating and reinterpreting the religious myths of their neighbors, the Israelites arrived at a character of the divine that has proven problematic to many contemporary theologians, particularly on issues of LGBT rights, women's rights, and the environment.

Undergraduate Seminar/writing-intensive. How did power and politics work deep in the human past? How did we come to inhabit a world that is fundamentally shaped by huge imbalances of power? This course covers several ways that anthropological archaeologists have thought about and investigated power, inequality, and political competition in past human societies. Central themes include evolutionary political models; the genesis of unequal power relationships and the emergence of early complex societies; political negotiations between rulers and subjects, and between different noble factions; and the roles of ideology, legitimacy, wealth, and coercion. We will also consider the relationship of archaeological discussions to the Western tradition of political thought, and the contemporary politics of archaeology. Course readings include a variety of ethnographic and archaeological case studies as well as programmatic writing in archaeology.

In this course, we will review current theoretical debates and examine how they are used in contemporary anthropology. The theoretical currents we will discuss include political economy and its feminist critics, theories of affect, theories of neoliberalism and neoliberal governmentality, biopower, biopolitics, actor/network theory, and new materialism. The ethnographies selected for the course will represent intersections between anthropology, science and technology studies, gender and sexuality studies, and critical race studies. By discussing contemporary ethnographies, we will consider what makes an anthropological approach to understanding contemporary conditions different from the approaches other disciplines in the social sciences and humanities embrace. Anthropologists increasingly integrate ethnographic fieldwork with analyses of textual sources, while scholars in other disciplines increasingly incorporate ethnographic fieldwork in their methodological repertory. In the context in which both theory and methodology serve as conduits for disciplinary cross-fertilization, we will consider what remains unique about anthropology and what it is that anthropology can offer to other disciplines. Along with introducing students to contemporary theories commonly used in the social sciences and humanities, the course is also designed to help students think about what makes a dissertation project theoretically and methodologically innovative. Prerequisites: This course is for 2nd or 3rd year Anthropology graduate students and others interested.

Pharmaceuticals

ARTSC 3 Credits Wanderer, Emily Mannix WWPH03301

This course examines pharmaceuticals as cultural and social phenomena, following their development, production, marketing, and use around the globe. We will investigate a number of issues, including the growing number of drugs prescribed to Americans each year, the lack of access some populations have to essential medicines, the increasingly global nature of clinical trials, and the role of pharmaceutical companies in the opioid crisis. We will use the study of drugs and medicines to analyze the production of medical knowledge, changing perceptions of health and illness, and the role of the state and the market in the development and distribution of therapeutics. Pharmaceuticals bring together science, clinical practice, marketing, and consumerism, and this course will draw on anthropological research to trace the role they play in global flows of knowledge, capital, commodities, and people

WORLD POLITICS 24036 CGS PS 500 Sa, 9:30:00 AM to 12:30:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits TBA

This course aims to increase students' knowledge of the history of the modern state system and, in particular, political developments during the past few decades. It introduces students to basic concepts and analytic frameworks that political scientists employ to understand world politics enhancing students' knowledge of international institutions that play important roles in world politics and exploring current issues in world affairs relating to human welfare and security. Depending on the interests, area of expertise, and inclinations of the particular instructor, some of these may be emphasized more heavily than others.

27761 CLASS CLASS 400 ANCIENT EMPIRES T. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Weis.H Anne FKART 204 Successful empires are seldom planned; they evolve. They typically have charismatic founders, able successors, and well-organized systems of administration. They satisfy core constituencies by ensuring supplies of staples or, for elites, luxuries and status symbols. They ward off potential unrest by various means, from moving populations to the cooptation of local elites, who control capital and production. The course looks at the phenomenon of the (ancient) empire from various points of view-the biographies of selected 'founder figures' and the mechanisms created to ensure the survival of selected regimes, with less emphasis placed on bureaucratic structures and detail and more on the creation and maintenance of an ideology appropriate to the regime. A sense of tradition, for example, is essential to empire but only if combined with a sense of 'modernity'--the projection of an ability to mobilize the latest in science and technology to preserve the benefits of empire for those who profit from it. Empires are, in this sense, 'history-conscious'--they compare themselves with earlier empires and seek to surpass them. Empires examined include: Middle Bronze Age Akkad, late Bronze Age Egypt, Early Iron age Assyria and Persia, Classical Athens, Macedon, and early Imperial Rome. This is not a writing course per se, but it attempts, through feedback on a series of short, focused essays, to be written in class and/or out of class, and a Research Paper, to work with students' ability to pose problems, work toward a solution, and articulate that process in writing. Why are some countries exceedingly rich while others are exceedingly poor? Why are there fluctuations in aggregate economic activity? What are the effects of fiscal policies on interest ratesand GDP growth? What are the e¤ects of monetary policy on in‡ation and unemployment? Whatare the origins and consequences of financial crisis? Macroeconomics, as a field, seeks to provideanswers to these and related questions using analytical models and data. It deals with the economicbehavior of large collections of consumers and firms, their interactions through labor, goods, andasset markets, and with the role of governments and institutions in such markets. The goal of this course is to provide students with an understanding of the basic macroeconomicconcepts and tools. Specifically, by the end of the course, students will: Have a good understanding of the main macroeconomic aggregates (GDP, investment, con-sumption, imports, exports, etc.) and of how they are interrelated. Be able to think critically about the causes of economiesÂ'long-run economic performance. Be able to analyze the determinants and implications of short-run ‡uctuations in the level ofeconomic activity. Be able to visualize and analyze macroeconomic data. Have a good understanding of the challenges and current issues faced by policy-makers in thearea of monetary and fiscal policy. Comment critically on global economic events and trends.

The main goal of this course is to understand credit markets and monetary policy. Whyare credit markets organized in a particular way? What forces shape financial contractsand the behaviour of asset markets? Why do we need financial regulation? What is therole of central banks? How do they conduct monetary policy? How does monetarypolicy affect financial markets and the real economy? More specifically, we will study how monetary policy influences interest rates and assetmarkets, such as the bond market and the stock market. We will analyze the effect ofasymmetric information in corporate finance, and on the design of financial contracts. We will then turn to the role of financial intermediaries, such as banks, in the economicsystem and study the economic rationale behind domestic and international bankingregulation. Finally, we will discuss monetary policy. We will first review evidence andtheory on how monetary policy affects real economic activity and financial markets. Wewill then study the instruments and goals of monetary policy, focussing in particular oncredibility and expectations management for central banks, the connection with fiscalpolicy and international cooperation in monetary policy.

Covers approaches to and theories of development; dualistic models of the development process; the impact of the international economy; and development planning. Both major theoretical literature and empirical findings in each area are covered. Primary focus will be on the analytical techniques and literature, though some time will be spent on discussion of researchable topics in the area. TOPICS IN MACROECONOMICS ECON ECON 2713 TTh, 12:30:00 PM to 1:45:00 PM 29554 ARTSC 3 Credits Hur, Sewon Hanley, Douglas B WWPH 4716 The gap between rich and poor countries has increased dramatically in the postwar period. Between 1960 and 2000, per capita income in the poorest countries has remained stagnant, while per capita income for the 5 or 10 richest countries has been multiplied by a factor of around 3. For instance, per capita income in the United States was around 70 times higher than in Tanzania in 2000. Understanding the sources of such wide cross-country income inequality is an essential task in modern economics. This class explores frontier research on economic growth and development. Topics include: technology adoption, human capital, fertility, disease, legal institutions, urbanization, trade and growth, agricultural development, sectoral productivity, financial development, and provision of infrastructure. By the end of the class, students are expected to submit a research project in one of these topics. Special attention will be paid to imperial powers of the ancient world, in particular those of the Near East, Greece and Rome, but the course will also cover the Carolingian and Ottoman Empires, as well as 19th century European imperialism and Nazi Germany. Spain underwent a series of radical transformations in the period from about 1200-1700 CE. The peninsula was first the center of Muslim empire that controlled much of the Mediterranean. This gave way to a Catholic empire that then expanded across the Atlantic Ocean to encompass most of the New World. This succession of ambitious kingdoms gave rise to some of the most unique artistic expressions at the time. This class will examine the art produced in Spain and Spanish realms in this period. Because of the unique interreligious history of Spain, its art tends to sit uncomfortably with the art produced elsewhere in Europe and its empires. This course will recuperate some of the fascinating strangeness of Spanish images by focusing on the frictions created by the enhanced flow of peoples and the cultures with which they came into contact during the early modern period. As Iberian powers expanded into Latin American and south Asia, European cultures increasingly came into tension with indigenous cultures and forms of image production. Rather than leading to 'imperfect' or 'deformed' art, though, this friction led to the creation of novel images that show how cultural hybridity was both a coping mechanism and a productive artistic strategy. This course will examine works produced by some major artists in Spain. However, we will also look at how the concept of 'the artist' evolved in Spain during the period in question. This we be supplemented by looking at how local modes of artistic production developed in the New World came into tension with Spanish ideas about art and aesthetics during the period of colonization. These cultures often lacked a strong notion of 'the artist,' and we will consider how differing modes of creation helped produce a hybrid style of art the forces a reconsideration of the how we define colonial European art within a global context.

ARTSC 3 Credits TBA CL 317

This course introduces students to the cultural history of the Hispanic World. Starting with the study of Pre-Colombian civilizations and the controversial politics of the Spanish Conquest we will discuss the conflicts involved in the transformation of Latin America. Through a broad variety of texts; chronicles, documentaries, films, fiction and novels, students will learn about the Spanish-speaking world and also explore the complex interactions implied in the process of colonization, in the foundation of national identities and in the creation of cultural traditions. We will stress the importance that these social and political tensions have in order to understand the past but also we will analyze its impact in the present.Prerequisite(s): PREQ: SPAN 0020 or 0025 (Min Grade C); PLAN: SPAN BA or BPHCheck with the department on how often this course is offered.

29639 HIST HIST 301 RUSSIA TO 1917 TTh, 12:00:00 PM to 12:50:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Pickett, James R CHVRN 150

The Russian Empire was among the largest in world history, spanning the entire Eurasian continent. This course explores the factors that made Russia so powerful at its height, only to collapse into the world's first socialist revolution — one that shaped the twentieth century and reverberates through global politics still today. Coverage is comprehensive, beginning in the eighteenth century, but focusing on the latter half of the nineteenth century and early twentieth. Geographically, the course ranges far beyond the capitals of Moscow and St. Petersburg to consider questions of colonialism, ethnicity, and religious pluralism, from Poland to Siberia. Considerable attention will also be given to ideology, literature, serfdom, and underground revolutionary movements.

27517 HIST HIST 612 ORIGINS OF AMERICAN CAPITALISM MW, 11:00:00 AM to 11:50:00 AM
ARTSC 3 Credits Frykman, Niklas E LAWRN 104

At a moment when the United States is in danger of losing its predominant position in the world, this course asks what propelled it there in the first place. What can possibly explain its most unlikely rise? How was it, after all, that within a mere two centuries a small group of unpromising colonies, divided between witch-hunting Puritans and slave-trading tobacco growers, catapulted themselves to the brink of global capitalist hegemony? Was there perhaps something unique in the country's early history that can help us understand why America for so long was so very good at capitalism? Was it perhaps the famous Protestant work ethic? Or perhaps the colonists' love of liberty? Maybe instead their ruthlessness in dispossessing the native population of their land, and putting Africans to work on it? Perhaps it was the genius of their revolution, or the boundless drive of the immigrants who poured into the country in its aftermath? Or perhaps all of the above, and maybe something else entirely?

This course is an introductory survey of world history starting from the human global migration out of Africa and up to the current global age. The course presents developments that impacted on humanity as a whole, such as climate changes, environmental issues, and plagues; patterns of development recurrent in different places of the world, including the emergence of agriculture, cities, and states; processes that brought different societies in contact, for example trade, migration, conquest, and cultural diffusion; and emphasizes the processes through which the entire world became interconnected resulting in a globalized world as we know it today.

29648 HIST HIST 712 A GLOBAL HISTORY OF TERRORISM MW, 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Hagerty,Bernard George CRAWF 169

This course will acquaint students with the remarkably long, diverse and widespread use of strategies of terror to advance political, economic, religious and social agendas. Our analysis will focus upon terror from below, that is terror by nonstate actors; will range from ancient Greece to the present; and will touch upon every inhabited continent. Using examples from many societies, we will discover that the human motivations for terrorist acts have changed little, but that their expression has changed a great deal, from the days of the Spartacus slave revolt, to the calculated terror of the Algerian revolution, to the media-centered "madmen strategy" of al-Gaeda and ISIS. Our organization will be roughly chronological, and will be combined with a typology of different kinds of terrorism. This inherently comparative approach will enable us to make this a true world history course, moving with ease from place to place, movement to movement, while still having a solid temporal and analytical framework to keep the material coherent.

Over the last several centuries, Eurasia's domination by successive nomadic steppe empires (stretching from Europe to China) was displaced by new imperial challengers from the periphery (notably Russia, China, and Britain). This course examines the nature of that transition by charting the history of Eurasian empires, beginning with the Mongols in the thirteenth century and proceeding through the present day. From Ghenghis Khan to Tamerlane to Stalin; between Russian spies, Chinese armies, and the Taliban; spanning silk roads, great games, and more. The empires of the steppe were truly vast in scale, integrating territories usually studied in isolation from one another, and so this course provides important context for separate courses on Russia, Eastern Europe, China, and the Middle East. The chronological scope of this course is similarly epic, spanning over seven centuries, and thus placing in relief recurring themes related to empires in world history. The thematic emphasis is on geopolitical strategies for imperial rule, but the course will also examine culture, religion, and political economy.

29888 HIST HIST 756 INTRO TO ISLAMIC CIVILIZATION TTh, 9:30:00 AM to 10:45:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Jouili, Jeanette Selma Lotte LAWRN 107

This course aims to introduce students to Islamic and Middle Eastern History from the time of the Prophet (ca. 600 C.E.) to the Iranian Revolution in 1979. We will proceed chronologically, focusing mainly on political events. However, a special emphasis will be given to the formation of the Islamic tradition, its evolution across different regions and cultures in time, and its interaction with other traditions. In the modern era, we will particularly explore the Islamic societies' political, cultural, and military encounter with the rising power of the West in the Middle East. In addition to the several historical processes and developments such as modernization, nation-building, Islamic fundamentalism and globalization, which have shaped the history of the Middle East in the last two centuries, our class discussions will also touch on the main theoretical perspectives that have stamped the studies of Islam and the Middle East. Here, concepts such as orientalism, defensive development, and modernity will constitute our main focus.

17444 HIST HIST 1000 CAPSTONE SEMINAR: US Latin American T, 3:30:00 PM to 5:55:00 PM Relations

ARTSC 3 Credits Gobat, Michel Charles WWPH 3701

In this seminar students will develop the critical skills of reading and writing history through a close examination of one fundamental theme in the history of U.S.-Latin American relations: the impact of U.S. intervention in the Caribbean and Central America during the early twentieth century. In the first half of the course, we will explore how historians have analyzed diverse forms of U.S. intervention and nationalist challenges to U.S. imperial rule. This focus will allow us to gain a deeper understanding of the different ways of writing history. In the second half of the course, you will work on a research paper that examines a specific aspect of a U.S. occupation. Rather than simply analyzing the works of other scholars, you will work primarily with historical documents such as U.S. State Department records. Class assignments are designed to guide you through the process of researching and writing the paper. You will learn how to define topics and questions; find, select and analyze primary sources; decide between contradictory pieces of evidence; create clear and well-substantiated arguments; and shape a coherent narrative out of the many possibilities. No Spanish-language skills are required for this course.

30485 HIST HIST 1044 TWO CENTURIES DEMOCRATIZATION TTh, 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Markoff, John VICTO 229

Today democracy is in trouble in many countries. A generation ago, many people thought democracy was triumphing all over the world. Now things look a lot less certain. How can we understand the problems of the current moment, not just in the US but on every continent? Over the past several centuries people refashioned their political institutions, often in bitter conflict with champions of older systems and sometimes in equally bitter conflict against champions of other kinds of change. Social movements played major roles in these big developments. This happened in several big waves involving many places at the same time. The latest such wave began in western Europe in the mid-1970's, picked up steam in South America in the 1980's, included the overthrow of Communist regimes in Eastern Europe at the end of that decade, and embraced Asian and African countries as well. After past democratic waves, powerful antidemocratic forces emerged and pushed back, only to be pushed back in turn by renewed democratic advances. We will look closely at these large struggles of democratic and antidemocratic forces to give us new perspectives on the processes, prospects and perils of the current moment.

This course examines the history of nationalism, the making of ethnicity, and the nation-state. The course provides an overview of theoretical approaches, applicable both to historical and to more recent nationalist challenges in Europe. We will place particular emphasis on changing national and regional identities in Europe, comparing the development of nationalism in Western European countries such as France or Germany with Eastern European developments in the Russian and Habsburg Empires and its successor states. The course examines the wave of ethnic nationalism in Eastern Europe after the dissolution of Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union. Finally, we will explore new trends of populist nationalism and the rise of right-wing nationalist extremism in the wake of the refugee crisis and Brexit.'Pre-knowledge in European history is advantageous but not required. This class can be taken by students of all levels, including First-Year students.'

This course is an exploration of the global history of piracy. Using primary historical documents (written by and about pirates) as well as the accounts of modern historians, we will discuss a range of topics such as the role of piracy in the building of empires, the struggles of merchants and their allies to eradicate piracy through bloody campaigns of capital punishment, and the meanings of the pirate as represented in popular culture through the ages.

27529 HIST HIST 1585 US-LATIN AMERICAN RELATIONS MW. 3:00:00 PM to 4:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits CL 352 Andrews.George Reid This course is a survey of US-Latin American relations from 1800 to the present. It has several goals. The first is to understand the long-term trajectory of relations and interactions between the two regions. Second, we will try to identify the impacts of those relations on the peoples and countries involved. How have actions by the United States affected Latin Americans? In turn, how has the United States' relationship with Latin America affected politics, economy, society, and culture in our own country? Finally, as we try to chart that long-term trajectory, we will listen to voices both from the United States and from Latin America, and try to reconstruct the dialogues that have (or should have) taken place over time between the two regions. HIST 1610 UNITED STATES COLONIAL TTh, 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM 27530 HIST ARTSC 3 Credits Frykman, Niklas E WWPH 3415 This course will survey approximately 250 years of American history, from the fateful first attempts to establish a permanent European presence in the late fifteenth century Caribbean to the early rumblings of North American independence in the mid-seventeen-hundreds. While the focus will most often return to those geographic regions that eventually would be claimed by the United States, our perspective throughout will be much broader. Most importantly, we will place the history of colonial North America in both Atlantic and continental contexts, seeking to understand how its development was critically shaped through the complex interactions of many different peoples, Native American, European, and African. COLD WAR AMERICA IN THE WORLD MW. 3:00:00 PM to 4:15:00 PM 24992 HIST HIST 1653 ARTSC 3 Credits Smith.Randy Scott WWPH 3415 This course explores the impact of the Cold War on American society. (1945-1990] It will explore how the division of the world into two hostile and well-armed ideological camps shaped American post-war politics and culture Post-war America was a world full of paradox. America's economic and military dominance allowed it to be a land of expanding home ownership, a booming consumer culture, shopping malls, housing tracts, the land of the automobile: an upwardly mobile society, where want and hardship seemed to have been finally vanquished. These same optimistic people, however, lived under the threat of nuclear annihilation and communist infiltration. Fear, not only tore at the social fabric, but also created an alphabet soup of surveillance, control and suspicion of fellow Americans: the N.S.A, C.I.A. the F.B.I. and municipal police 'Red Squads'. African Americans fought a long struggle for civil rights that embraced movements from the peaceful civil disobedience of Martin Luther King Jr. to the Black Nationalist Marxism of the Black Panthers. The pivotal event that slowly drained American confidence and optimism was the long, brutal war in Southeast Asia. The Vietnam War and how Americans experienced it in different Cold War periods will be at the center of the course. Popular culture also underwent a sea change as it expressed both the anxiety and optimism of Cold War America. Black and white artists crossed the color line to create rock and roll. Anxious parents watched as their children crossed this cultural line with their new idols. Noir films and novels expressed the deep moral ambivalence of the era. The birth of the antihero, so popular in 21st century culture, was born of Cold War angst, fear and a rejection of the post-war status quo. Most importantly, black power, civil rights legislation, youth culture, feminism and the quagmire of the Vietnam War also created a powerful conservative backlash. Despite their decades in the political wilderness, the forces of Goldwater conservatism created a powerful antidote to the 'sixties' and that culminate in a victory that ushered in the final Cold War era: the Reagan Revolution. This course will try to give students some insight into current American politics by showing how this backlash was able to put conservatism back on the map and end the liberal dreams of the New Deal era. GENDER IN GLOBAL HISTORY TTh. 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM 27537 HIST HIST 1707 ARTSC 3 Credits CI 242 This course examines world history from 1500 through the present from the perspective of gender. It provides an introduction to modern world historical patterns and processes, with a focus on issues of women, gender, and sexuality. The course considers the construction of gender in pre-feminist and post-feminist contexts, and explores how global historical developments have shaped ideologies and politics of gender. The course emphasizes topics including slavery, colonialism, imperialism, industrialization, nationalism, and environmentalism, through the lens of gender. 29675 HIST HIST 2025 TEACHING WORLD HISTORY W, 1:00:00 PM to 3:25:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Holstein, Diego CL 312 This course provides training for teaching world history surveys. Simultaneously, an ongoing dialogue between the existing survey, the analysis of the teaching resources, and the student's own ideas will result in the formulation of new world history surveys by each student based on their evolving understanding of the field, strengths, and preferences. History and education students are warmly welcome to join this workshop. GENDER IN HISTORICAL PERSP T, 6:00:00 PM to 8:25:00 PM 29676 HIST 2130 HIST WWPH 3701 ARTSC 3 Credits Livezeanu, Irina Starting from the classic formulation of historian Joan Scott 'gender [as] a useful category of historical analysis' this seminar will look at topics in 19th and 20th century history through the lens of gender, and explore the intersection of sexuality with politics. The class will read and discuss recent works that focus on gender, sexuality, and masculinity in the modern world. Students will be encouraged to apply these concepts to their own research agendas. They will write short reviews of books & articles and a 15-page research or readings paper.

29674 HISTH HIST 1725 DISEASE & HEALTH IN MOD AFRICA TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Webel.Mari Kathrvn CL 302 This course explores the history and present of health and healing in sub-Saharan Africa from the era of the trans-Atlantic slave trade to the present day. We will consider disease, illness, and treatment from diverse perspectives, including the international organizations and state institutions promoting improvements in global public health, the African states and communities coping with illness and health interventions, and the individuals whose personal histories and experiences shed light on the day-to-day impact of the interest of so many different stakeholders. Taking a continent-wide approach to broad trends that have impacted health, we will also examine specific cases in their regional and national contexts. Ranging from pre-colonial healing traditions to livestock epidemics in the late 19th century to the battles against polio and Ebola in the early 21st century, we will pursue the social, political, and economic meanings of health and healing in Africa and examine how they have changed over time. In seeking to understand both change and continuity in Africans' experiences of illness and misfortune, we will pursue several lines of inquiry, including: within what different social, political, economic, and cultural contexts can health interventions be understood? How have historical processes shaped understandings of disease, misfortune, and illness in African societies, as well as the remedies developed to alleviate suffering or restore wellness? What are the historical causes of health disparities between different regions of the globe, and within different populations in Africa? How and when did health in Africa become a global issue?We will also consider how and why emerging diseases were understood as 'new' or 'old.' placing international attention in the context of local experience in Africa. We will engage with the goals of public health, particularly ideas about eradication, vaccination, and prevention as they lead us to think about how people, environments, and causes of illness are perceived, understood, and defined, both n Africa and the wider world. We will also explore the continuing challenges posed by chronic diseases and non-infectious sources of illness. What is it for a society to be oppressive? What is social revolution? Needless to say, its romantic allure is irresistible. Armies of ideological zealots storming cities and government buildings and overthrowing repressive rulers, long captivated public imagination. However, as everything else in politics, revolutions also have two sides: positive and negative. This course studies not only the process of various revolutions from our modern history, but also historical context of these revolutions, how they were prepared, and very importantly, what happens after revolutions actually take place. Political actors also matter. As philosopher

Thomas Carlyle once observed, 'Revolutions are often initiated by idealists, carried out by fanatics, and hijacked by scoundrels.' Subsequently, in order to better understand revolutions, the course locates their main actors and examines their impact on the development of revolutionary and post-revolutionary processes.

In several great multi continental waves of change, people refashioned their political institutions, often in bitter conflict with champions of older systems and sometimes in equally bitter conflict against champions of other kinds of change. The latest such wave began in western Europe in the mid-1970s, picked up steam in South America in the 1980s, included the overthrow of Communist regimes in Eastern Europe at the end of that decade, and continues with movements for democratization in Africa in the 1990s. In this course, we want to understand: 1) why it was in particular historical moments that such waves of social transformation took place; 2) the role of particular social movements in democratization; 3) the ways in which the meaning of democracy has been debated since the breakthrough of the late eighteenth century; 4) the role of established elites in democratization, both as reformers and as resisters; and 5) the ways in which democratizing processes in some countries have powerfully effected political processes elsewhere. However, the Cold War turned out anything but cold. Although, the two contending superpowers never directly fought each other, the wars, involving either of two superpowers or their proxies, never stopped. This half a century long ideological conflict inflicted untold sufferings on hundreds of millions of people around the globe. It claimed the lives of millions, devastated the economies of many countries, and brought the world on the brink of a nuclear war at least on one occasion. This course examines the main developments of this global conflict: the wars, covert operations, arms race, diplomatic negotiations, geopolitical doctrines, and the decision-making process of the contending sides. However, the course goes beyond just studying the events. It tries to locate them in historical context and in theoretical perspective, which will help students of international relations to further expand their intellectual horizons in this subfield. 30360 PS PS 1513 FORGN POLICIES--CHANGNG WORLD TTh. 9:30:00 AM to 10:45:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits WWPH 4500 Linden.Ronald H The aim of this course is to explore the nature of the phenomenon known as 'foreign policy,' which refers mainly to the orientation and actions of nation states toward their external environment. This course will focus primarily on the world's major powers but will intersperse a discussion of these states' foreign policies with consideration of how the nature of their power, as well as the milieu within which they act, has changed. At the same time, we will also look at the way in which foreign policy can be studied in an attempt to expand our ability to deal analytically with this form of international behavior. EASTRN EURP IN WORLD POLITICS PS 1521 TTh, 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM 27222 PS ARTSC 3 Credits Linden, Ronald H WWPH 4500 Eastern Europe has now seen more than fifteen years of dramatic changes encompassing a movement away from one-party dictatorship and state-run economies to democratic politics and market economies. As modern history proved, that may not always be such exciting news as it sounds at first. This course studies various countries in the Middle East. Latin America, Europe, Asia, and Africa with largest oil resources. It examines how oil resources impacted the formation of their respective domestic political systems and how politics of oil influenced and still influence general dynamics of international relations. Furthermore, the course will delve deep into 'the resource curse theory' and in comparative perspective will examine its impact on oil-rich countries' national economies. FEMINIST POLITICAL THOUGHT TTh, 2:30:00 PM to 3:45:00 PM 27786 PS 1622 ARTSC CL 252 3 Credits Malloy, Tamar A This course traces the theoretical development of feminist political thought and considers how feminist theory applies to the real political world. It will proceed in four parts: the history of feminist thought; theorizing intersecting identities with attention to sex and gender, race, sexuality, and nationality; feminist organizing; and feminist analyses of the state with a focus on citizenship, political representation, and debates about rights. The course will conclude with a policy project in which students use analytical lenses from the course to critique and suggest improvements to a governmental or institutional policy or program that plays a role in gender inequality.

'Big data', 'analytics', 'data science', 'computational science': these are all words used to describe sets of tools that help sift and summarize massive volumes of information that are particularly important for understanding social relations today. This class is meant to be a gentle introduction to the opportunities and challenges with both collecting and exploring digitally available political and social information such as text, geo-locations and social media connections. We begin by going back to basics, exploring the reasons and ways we use and misuse data. We then turn our focus to flexible computational tools for data collection and visualization and how they can provide unique help in answering important questions such as what causes war and violence, who represses human rights, and what parties are likely to win elections. By the end of the class, students will be exposed to coding and computer languages that are often used in data analytics in industry, government and academia, including bash, Python and R.

This seminar will cover the basic approaches and methods in the study of comparative politics. By the end of the course you will be familiar with some of the most prominent works in the field and will be able to bring new analytical tools into your design of comparative research. In the first part of the course we will address some of the most prominent theoretical perspectives in the field: historical sociology, the study of civil society, and different approaches to understand political institutions. This will not be an exhaustive theoretical exploration. Time limitations will prevent us from discussing some classical traditions (e.g., structural functionalism, modernization theory, Marxist interpretations) and some current trends that you will be able to cover in other courses (like the political economy approach). Most of the books selected for this section of the seminar are exemplars models of research that have inspired later scholarly work in our field. I have made a conscious choice of selecting books over journal articles, since you will read a large number of articles in more specialized courses. The second part of the course will deal with methodological questions. How do we select cases for comparative research? How do we build analytical categories in order to make comparisons across societies? How should we structure a comparison in order to draw causal inferences? What is the relationship between small-N comparison and large-N statistical work? Since the 1970s, a significant literature in the field has addressed those questions, but over the last decade the methodological debate in comparative politics has grown enormously.

This course introduces students to the major theories of international relations(IR). The course will provide students with an understanding of the history of IR, focusing on the often intense theoretical and methodological debates that have shaped the field. It will also provide students with a critical understanding of key concepts in international relations-including anarchy, power, cooperation and information-and how different understandings of these concepts animate different theoretical perspectives. Students will be challenged to think about how to construct and evaluate theories, as well as methodological questions about the search for causal explanation in international relations. Readings will be drawn from the "classic" works of international relations theory, as well as from more recent research that proposes critiques and refinements of these theories.

This course aims to introduce students to Islamic and Middle Eastern History from the time of the Prophet (ca. 600 C.E.) to the Iranian Revolution in 1979. We will proceed chronologically, focusing mainly on political events. However, a special emphasis will be given to the formation of the Islamic tradition, its evolution across different regions and cultures in time, and its interaction with other traditions. In the modern era, we will particularly explore the Islamic societies' political, cultural, and military encounter with the rising power of the West in the Middle East. In addition to the several historical processes and developments such as modernization, nation-building, Islamic fundamentalism and globalization, which have shaped the history of the Middle East in the last two centuries, our class discussions will also touch on the main theoretical perspectives that have stamped the studies of Islam and the Middle East. Here, concepts such as orientalism, defensive development, and modernity will constitute our main focus.

We will examine this contested term as it circulates in debates about cultural practice since the late 1970s. Course segments are likely to include contrastive models of the concept; their ascripted affinities to Marxist and Weberian traditions; distinctive concepts ('shock doctrine,' thought collective,' Comaroff's 'occult'); key historical figures and institutions (Kojeve, Polanyi, Schumpeter, Hayek, Mont Pelerin); and the term's contradictory symptoms under different ideological systems, such as post-socialist modernity. The intent is to move beyond two tendencies in current debates: 1.) the deployment of the term exclusively as moral judgment; and 2.) its explanatory capacity for All the Things. Core texts will include Morowski, Harvey, and Klein, as well as critiques of Harvey (Abercrombie, Hindess). The course will ask participants to bring their fields of expertise (both regional and disciplinary) to these debates, situating their own departmental investments in relation not only to textual content, but also to production, distribution, and exhibition. While cinema (e.g. Jia Zhangke, Ken Loach, Aleksei Balabanov) may be a core cultural emphasis, the course welcomes contributions from the fields of art history, literature, music, as well as sociology, history, and anthropology.

In this course we discuss the American (US) Criminal Justice System, Drinking on US College Campuses, Media and Hip Hop music. We introduce fundamental, core sociological concepts in examining these three microareas of study. Beyond that we bridge the three thematic areas in subtle ways that weave our sociological analysis with depth and by introducing cross-cultural links. This globalization component is a powerful example of how connected our world is. The format utilizes lectures, recitations, and assignments. We will explore how people organize their social life in different societies, by comparing social behavior and institutions, cultural and political economy in different parts of the world. We will broaden our understanding of people who live in different national, social -cultural environments. SOC 7 SOCIAL PROBLEMS TTh, 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM 17865 SOC ARTSC 3 Credits Banerjee, Tarun D WWPH 2200 By next semester the campaign will be done, a new president chosen, and, on January 20th, sworn into office. The campaigning will be done, but the issues will remain, and the new administration will have to actually do something about them. The War in Iraq, the weak economy, health care, global warming, and more await them and us. In this class we will focus on the social ills and problems that dominated the campaign and will fill the new President's first months in office. We will develop the background knowledge you need to evaluate proposals and follow the debates over them. We will also work on having the skills we need to evaluate evidence and spot when politicians (or corporations or advertising or media) are trying to pull a fast one on us. SOC SOC 317 GLOBALIZATION MWF. 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits McDermott.Joshua Lew WWPH 2200 The aim of this course is to introduce students to the broad spectrum of histories and theories of global civilization. This includes examining processes of expansion and interconnections in social, economic, political, and cultural life across various societies. In this respect, today's globalization is approached as a process with deep roots in the comparative history of civilizations, and not simply as a contemporary phenomenon. Parallels to contemporary processes of globalization can be seen in the spread of trade routes, world religions, common languages, habits, manners, fashions, lifestyles, ideas and ideologies. These have foundations in migrations, conquests, ancient world systems, discoveries, travels, and economic networks no less profound in the past than in the present. In this course, students will learn and apply theories of social change. A special emphasis will be placed on social movements as basic avenues by which social change takes place in societies throughout the world. Students will enter into a dialogue with activists of various political persuasions who seek to uproot social systems and build a better world. 17276 SOC SOC 352 SOCIAL MOVEMENTS MWF. 12:00:00 PM to 12:50:00 PM ARTSC Lazar, Hillary Anne LAWRN 209 3 Credits This course focuses on modern social movements, including the American civil rights movement, the women's movement, the gay and lesbian rights movement, the environmental movement, and the global justice movement. SOC SOC 432 WEALTH AND POWER MWF. 11:00:00 AM to 11:50:00 AM 24270 WWPH 2200 ARTSC 3 Credits McClymonds, Daniel In this course we aim to understand the fundamental structure and workings of modern capitalist society. We will examine the distribution of wealth, income, and power in both the US and globally, and consider the notions of democracy and imperialism in the context of what we broadly call, 'globalization.' Can we have political equality in societies with high degrees of economic inequality? Are corporations too powerful? Whose side does government usually take -- the 'little quy's' or the corporations'? Why? How is it possible that the richest nation in the world also has more poverty than any other 'democratic' country? We will explore these and many other topics from the macro- to the micro- levels of analysis SOC 434 POLITICAL SOCIOLOGY TTh, 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM 17277 SOC ARTSC 3 Credits Hiers, Wesley Jonathan Political sociology's central questions concern the nature of the state, the relationship between state and society, the character and significance of power in political life, and, as Harold Laswell vividly put matters many decades ago: Who gets what, how, when, and why? No political sociology course could answer these questions definitively for one time and place, much less for all times and places. Focusing mainly on the United States, this course pursues these central questions through an engagement with substantive topics such as healthcare policy reform, the development of civil rights, the contours of the American welfare state, and growing political polarization and economic inequality since the 1970s. URBAN SOCIOLOGY 26471 SOC SOC 444 T, 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Howell.Junia I AWRN 232 Most Americans now live in urban areas -- cities and their suburbs. Around the world, more and more of the population are living in cities. Residents of big cities increasingly have more in common with the residents of cities halfway around the globe than with their rural countrymen just a few miles away. As human civilization becomes primarily an urban civilization we need to understand cities as distinct social entities. In this class we will study the development of the city from small mercantile enclaves to the modern sprawl of activity. We will look at urban polities, social ills, environmental issues, and consider those factors that make a city good, enjoyable, and pleasant. As we do, we will use the city and region of Pittsburgh as our living example.

While migration encompasses intra-state movement, this class will focus on border crossing between nation states. As a writingintensive course, students will be required to write and revise analytical papers; become versed in contemporary current events within and outside of the US context; and conduct a fieldsite visit exploring past or present immigration issues in Pittsburgh. The course will cover the social construction of borders, identities, and citizenship; differences in the categories distinguishing migrants from one another; the factors fueling migration and the consequences of cross-border movement; labor exploitation; women's issues; impacts on health; institutional responses and contexts of reception; generational and cultural issues; the criminalization of migrants and refugees; and how immigrant groups mobilize to contest their oppression. Grades will be based on attendance, evidence of reading and participation, and writing assignments and revision. 29766 SOC SOC 1325 TWO CNTURIES DEMOCRATIZATION TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Markoff, John VICTO 229 Today democracy is in trouble in many countries. A generation ago, many people thought democracy was triumphing all over the world. Now things look a lot less certain. How can we understand the problems of the current moment, not just in the US but on every continent? Over the past several centuries people refashioned their political institutions, often in bitter conflict with champions of older systems and sometimes in equally bitter conflict against champions of other kinds of change. Social movements played major roles in these big developments. This happened in several big waves involving many places at the same time. The latest such wave began in western Europe in the mid-1970's, picked up steam in South America in the 1980's, included the overthrow of Communist regimes in Eastern Europe at the end of that decade, and embraced Asian and African countries as well. After past democratic waves, powerful antidemocratic forces emerged and pushed back, only to be pushed back in turn by renewed democratic advances. We will look closely at these large struggles of democratic and antidemocratic forces to give us new perspectives on the processes, prospects and perils of the current moment. 29767 SOC SOC 1365 RACE, CLASS, AND GENDER TTh. 8:00:00 AM to 9:15:00 AM ARTSC WWPH 2200 3 Credits Fields. This is nothing new. Marx and Engels in 1848 had noted how the bourgeoisie had 'given a cosmopolitan character to production and consumption in every country'. The exchange of goods in pre-industrial societies forms the basis for establishing identities and kinship networks. Similarly, we are socialized early to buy things to express ourselves, to help form individual and social identities, or to signal membership within subcultures. Once the preserve only of affluent societies, in markets, stores, and malls around the world, as global citizens we buy things to feel good, and gift things to make others feel better. Increasingly, we need this consumption to be sustainable. This course begins by exploring the causes of urbanization, factors driving urban growth, impacts of globalization, and regional variations in urbanization levels at a variety of scales including the global north and global south. # 3. Cultural Dynamics

AFRCNA AFRCNA 31 10520 INTRODUCTION TO AFRCNA STUDIES TTH, 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Tillotson, Michale This is an introductory survey of the historical, political and socio-cultural experience of the global Africans with particular reference to the African Americans. The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the field of Africana studies. An interdisciplinary approach will be used to examine the eight primary subject areas of Black experience in the US. They include: history, religion, social organization, politics, economics, creative culture, psychology and education. The major strands of Afro-centric social theory and protest thought will also be employed to study the resistance and social change strategies embodied in the works and actions of movements, historical figures and creative cultural productions. 29813 AFRCNA AFRCNA 31 INTRODUCTION TO AFRCNA STUDIES MW, 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Brooks, Robin This is an introductory survey of the historical, political and socio-cultural experience of the global Africans with particular reference to the African Americans. The purpose of this course is to introduce students to the field of Africana studies. An interdisciplinary approach will be used to examine the eight primary subject areas of Black experience in the US. They include: history, religion, social organization, politics, economics, creative culture, psychology and education. Introduction to African Literature MW. 3:00:00 PM to 4:15:00 PM AFRCNA AFRCNA 522 ARTSC TBA Credits Brooks, Robin This course explores male and female writers from several countries across the continent of Africa and invokes various social, political, historical, and theoretical particularities associated with the region and its literature. It introduces students to several of the major authors in the African literary canon, and the fiction in the course (written or translated into English) is from the late twentieth century to the present. We connect the literature to contemporary pop culture and sociopolitical conditions." BLACK CONSCIOUSNESS MW. 1:00:00 PM to 2:15:00 PM AFRCNA AFRCNA 787 29808 WWPH 4165 ARTSC 3 Credits Germain.Felix Fernand This course is designed to examine the concept of "Black Consciousness" within a multi-faceted context, covering its historical, philosophical, sociological, cultural and political roots as well as its various manifestations in Africa and its Diaspora. Leading exponents of the concept including Edward Wilmot Blyden, Martin Delaney, Marcus Garvey, Frantz Fanon, Aime Cesaire, Leopold Senghor, Steve Biko, Malcolm X, and music artists such as James Brown, Bob Marley, Peter Tosh and "Culture," among others will be discussed and analyzed. The concept evokes a wide range of reactions from adherents of the dominant Eurocentric paradigms as well as from emerging adherents of Afrocentric and related paradigms. Students will be provided with a rich array of constructs, debates, events and analyses, utilizing multi-media channels such as academic texts, popular magazines, video and audio tapes as well as music in its various formats, so as to further their research and learning interests, and to make real life connections to both the abstract and pragmatic dimensions of the concept. AFRCNA 1201 GLOBAL DIASPORAS MWF. 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM AFRCNA ARTSC Germain.Felix Fernand 3 Credits What to Akon and Rihanna have in common? They are both part of recent diasporas from Africa and the Caribbean. This course focuses on the issues and experiences of people of African descent in contemporary (20th and 21st centuries) migratory diasporas from both Africa and the Caribbean. The course draws on extensive literature on migration, transnationalism, racial and ethnic identity formation, health and other topics to illuminate the causes for the migration and the experiences that migrants have in different host countries. What experiences do migrants from Africa and the Caribbean share? How do their experiences differ? How do migrants define themselves in new host countries? How do they stay connected to their homelands? CARIBBEAN IDENTITIES TTh, 1:00:00 PM to 2:15:00 PM 29784 AFRCNA AFRCNA 1425 ARTSC 3 Credits Reid, Michele B CI 119 Caribbean legacies of slavery and colonialism, independence struggles, and international relations have produced unique colonial, national and transnational identities. This upper-level writing intensive undergraduate seminar explores the changes in the development of Caribbean identity over time from the eighteenth century to the present and in comparative national and transnational perspectives. Students will examine politics, social relations, and culture -- particularly through the intersections of race/ethnicity, music, cuisine, literature, religion, sports, and social media. AFRO CARIBBEAN DANCE MW, 10:00:00 AM to 11:15:00 AM 11030 AFRCNA AFRCNA 1555 ARTSC 3 Credits Sharif, Oronde S. TREES MPRL This course is designed to examine, at a higher level, dance influences of West Africa on the islands in the Caribbean and parts of Latin America. In this course, students will examine 3 aspects of dance in the Caribbean -- Historical, Religious, and Sociological. In addition, students will develop an understanding of and participate in techniques devised by Katherine Dunham. INTRO TO CULTURAL ANTHROPOLOGY 10151 ANTH 780 MW. 11:00:00 AM to 11:50:00 AM ANTH 3 Credits Brown.Laura C This course is designed to introduce students to cultural anthropological methods and concepts that are useful for gaining a better understanding of human diversity. We will examine such topics as family systems, economic and political change, religion and ritual in order to encourage students to question commonly held assumptions about what is "normal" and "natural" in human experience. Films, videos and slide presentations will supplement texts and lectures. Evaluation of the recitation sections will be determined by the recitation instructor. Attendance, class participation, projects and short quizzes will form the basis of the recitation grade. 27833 ANTH ANTH 1703 THE HISTORY OF GOD MW, 3:00:00 PM to 4:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Gordon,Beniamin Davis LAWRN 120

God has a history. In the earliest days of that history, god was worshipped as one of a plethora of deities controlling various spheres of cosmic activity or the human world. Students in this course will learn about this ancient pantheon—how gods functioned in society and how their presence was experienced by those devoted to them. They will then trace the evolution of the god of Israel from a mountaintop deity of the southern levant in the late second millennium BCE to a supreme deity worshipped by a small group of absolute monotheists based in Jerusalem in the mid-first millennium BCE. Students will become more sophisticated readers of biblical texts in the process. The sources of the Hebrew bible reflect not a homogeneous monotheism, but rather a diverse set of belief systems tending toward henotheism or even polytheism. By appropriating and reinterpreting the religious myths of their neighbors, the Israelites arrived at a character of the divine that has proven problematic to many contemporary theologians, particularly on issues of LGBT rights, women's rights, and the environment.

30039 ANTH ANTH 1716 POLITICS OF GENDER AND FOOD W, 12:00:00 PM to 2:25:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Cohen,Frayda N CL 402

Food is sustenance and absolutely essential to life. But food is never simply about nutrition. Because it is fundamental to the human experience, food is also a medium for the expression of culture and social identity. Moreover, food relays complex social messages about gender, sexuality, and family. Consequently, food is also a means of expressing the social and symbolic use of power and control in which social inequalities are expressed in culinary forms. This course will examine regional food cultures (such as the United States, China, Japan, Italy, Cuba, and Greece) as we consider food from the vantage point of gendered systems of production, distribution, and consumption as we consider questions such as: What is "fair trade" coffee; Why is it primarily women who receive chocolates on Valentine's Day; How did sushi "go global" and What do "real" men eat? This seminar examines popular sources, films, and anthropological and feminist studies of food, gender, and power as we explore the intersections of food and foodways, with themes such as sex and childbirth, identity, ritual, and globalization and sustainability.

25039 ANTH ANTH 1752 ANTHROPOLOGY OF FOOD MW, 4:30:00 PM to 5:45:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Musante, Kathleen WWPH 3301

Undergraduate seminar. This course will examine the social ecology of human nutrition using an evolutionary perspective. It will apply the concepts and principles of anthropology to the study of human nutrition and diet. It asks the questions: 'Where do cuisines come from? Discussions will focus on the origins of the human diet; human dietary adaptation to diverse ecological and technological situations; Social, cultural, behavioral and ecological factors that influence diet in technologically simple, modernizing and contemporary societies; the globalization of food supply and food security; and methodological issues in studying food habits and assessing nutritional status. Prerequisites: Intro to Cult Anth 0780

25378 ANTH ANTH 1761 PATNTS & HEALERS: MEDCL ANTH 1 TTh, 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Neidich, Deborah Lyn Alter, Joseph CHVRN 154

This course provides an introduction to the broad sub-field of medical anthropology, including the study of ethnomedicine, ethnopsychiatry, disease and ecology, epidemiology, demography and population growth, development, and the political economy of health care. Our focus will be on the relationship between health and culture in various social contexts, with primary attention given to questions of power and inequality on the one hand, and personhood and emotion on the other. In exploring one or two case studies of ritual healing, we will look at the ways in which medical systems are integrated with larger systems of cultural meaning. We will also look at various medical systems in a cross-cultural comparative framework. Following on a consideration of so-called traditional medicine in the non-Western world, we will question the 'objectivity' of Western biomedical science and its various discourses. Extending this critique we will analyze the important relationship between poverty, and the political economy of public health in international development.

29737 ANTH ANTH 2750 CONTEM ANTHROPOLOGICAL THEORY W, 12:00:00 PM to 2:30:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Lukacs, Gabriella WWPH 3300

In this course, we will review current theoretical debates and examine how they are used in contemporary anthropology. The theoretical currents we will discuss include political economy and its feminist critics, theories of affect, theories of neoliberalism and neoliberal governmentality, biopower, biopolitics, actor/network theory, and new materialism. The ethnographies selected for the course will represent intersections between anthropology, science and technology studies, gender and sexuality studies, and critical race studies. By discussing contemporary ethnographies, we will consider what makes an anthropological approach to understanding contemporary conditions different from the approaches other disciplines in the social sciences and humanities embrace. Anthropologists increasingly integrate ethnographic fieldwork with analyses of textual sources, while scholars in other disciplines increasingly incorporate ethnographic fieldwork in their methodological repertory. In the context in which both theory and methodology serve as conduits for disciplinary cross-fertilization, we will consider what remains unique about anthropology and what it is that anthropology can offer to other disciplines. Along with introducing students to contemporary theories commonly used in the social sciences and humanities, the course is also designed to help students think about what makes a dissertation project theoretically and methodologically innovative. Prerequisites: This course is for 2nd or 3rd year Anthropology graduate students and others interested.

27278 ANTH ANTH 2789 CULTURAL ANTHRO CORE COURSE MW, 9:00:00 AM to 11:00:00 AM
ARTSC 4 Credits Matza,Tomas A WWPH 3301

This course is an introduction to the varied facets of the field of cultural anthropology. Emphasis will be placed on the various theories, concepts and research figures that have organized this field at different historical periods. The theories and concepts will be critically analyzed and evaluated. The course will combine both lectures and discussion. Reading will include both monographs and journal articles. Since the core course reflects a departmental orientation, there may be lectures from other faculty members.

26247 CGS AFRCNA 1334 MUSIC IN AFRICA T, 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM
ARTSC 3 Credits Beeko,Eric LANGY A221

This course examines the historical, social, and cultural background of music in Africa with particular reference to the social context of music, music in Islamic culture, kingship music, music in ritual and theater, musical instruments and ensemble practice, stylistic elements of traditional music, music in the Church, popular music and neo-African art music. The lectures will be illustrated with audio and video recordings.

29908 CGS ANTH 780 INTRO TO CULTURAL ANTHROPOLOGY M. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits CL G13 This course is designed to introduce students to cultural anthropological methods and concepts that are useful for gaining a better understanding of human diversity. We will examine such topics as family systems, economic and political change, religion and ritual in order to encourage students to guestion commonly held assumptions about what is "normal" and "natural" in human experience. Films, videos and slide presentations will supplement texts and lectures. Evaluation of the recitation sections will be determined by the recitation instructor. Attendance, class participation, projects and short guizzes will form the basis of the recitation grade. INDO-EUROPEAN FOLKTALES TBA, 12:00:00 AM to 12:00:00 AM 24026 CGS GER 1502 ARTSC 3 Credits Stender, Uwe WEBTBA Since its publication in 1812, the Grimm Brothers' Children's and Household Tales found a readership that spanned countries, languages, and generations. Its universal appeal can be traced to its origins: it reflects not only the influence of early 19th Century Germany, but also oral folklore traditions thatgo back thousands of years and range from as far away as Iceland, the Middle-East, and India. This course introduces students to a wide selection of these and other folktales from the Indo-European tradition as well as to numerous perspectives for understanding these folktales. We will examine the aesthetic, social, historical, and psychological values that these tales reflect, and will also discuss significant theoretical and methodological paradigms within folklore studies, including structural, socio-historical, psychoanalytic, and feminist perspectives. Finally, we will discuss the continuing influence of this folk tradition on popular and elite culture of our time. Two mid-terms and a final exam will contribute respectively 25%, 25%, and 35% to the final grade. Participation in recitation is mandatory and constitutes 15% of the final grade. HIST 1083 HISTORY OF SPORTS W. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM 29901 CGS ARTSC 3 Credits CL 142 This course surveys the history of sport, focusing primarily on the twentieth century. Its emphasis is on the changing nature and meaning of sport. It tackles several questions, including why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. We will look at sport in settings that range from baseball in the Caribbean to basketball among the Crow on the reservations of Montana, as well as focus on the role of sport in Pittsburgh. VAMPIRE: BLOOD AND EMPIRE 24038 CGS SLAV 880 Sa, 1:00:00 PM to 4:00:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits CL G18 This course examines the phenomenon of vampirism in verbal and visual texts from different time periods in various cultures (Russia, Poland, France, England, America). Why do vampires capture the imagination especially of Anglophone readers? What qualities does the vampire incarnate? Which historical events and customs have triggered particular enthusiasm for depicting the undead? How have the depictions of the vampire evolved over centuries? Our discussions will address these issues as we analyze stories, novels, and films focusing on vampires from a variety of critical perspectives, contextualizing the works in the cultures that produced them. CLASS 330 MYTH AND SCIENCE W, 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM 27826 CLASS ARTSC 3 Credits Novick, Aaron Michael CL 332 How can we understand our world? In western culture, science dominates all our answers to this question. But there are other ways. They can be found in the mythologies of ancient and modern peoples. This course will compare the scientific and mythological ways of seeing the world and their more subtle connections. In particular, we will turn to the remarkable events in Ancient Greece of 800-400 B.C. and discover how the scientific approach actually grew slowly out of mythological thought itself. CLASS CLASS 400 ANCIENT EMPIRES T. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM 27761 ARTSC 3 Credits Weis.H Anne FKART 204 Successful empires are seldom planned; they evolve. They typically have charismatic founders, able successors, and well-organized systems of administration. They satisfy core constituencies by ensuring supplies of staples or, for elites, luxuries and status symbols. They ward off potential unrest by various means, from moving populations to the cooptation of local elites, who control capital and production. The course looks at the phenomenon of the (ancient) empire from various points of view-the biographies of selected 'founder figures' and the mechanisms created to ensure the survival of selected regimes, with less emphasis placed on bureaucratic structures and detail and more on the creation and maintenance of an ideology appropriate to the regime. A sense of tradition, for example, is essential to empire but only if combined with a sense of 'modernity'-the projection of an ability to mobilize the latest in science and technology to preserve the benefits of empire for those who profit from it. Empires are, in this sense, 'history-conscious'--they compare themselves with earlier empires and seek to surpass them. Empires examined include: Middle Bronze Age Akkad, late Bronze Age Egypt, Early Iron age Assyria and Persia, Classical Athens, Macedon, and early Imperial Rome. This is not a writing course per se, but it attempts, through feedback on a series of short, focused essays, to be written in class and/or out of class, and a Research Paper, to work with students' ability to pose problems, work toward a solution, and articulate that process in writing. MEDIA CRITICISM 27268 COMM COMMRC 1122 MW, 4:30:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Fursich, Elfriede Maria CL 230 This course introduces students to a variety of critical approaches to media analysis. Students will learn how to examine the ways in which meanings are created in the content, structure, and context of mediated communication. The main focus of the class is on media representations of 'Others' and the role of media in enabling cultural diversity. Specific sessions will highlight media portrayals of ethnicity, race, gender, class and representations of people across borders. The course places current forms of media content in social and historical perspective and considers how we can respond with constructive criticism. 24236 COMM COMMRC 1143 KNOWLEDGE, POWER, & DESIRE TTh. 2:30:00 PM to 3:45:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Johnson.Paul Elliott CL 135

Bird, Katherine Elizabeth This course will explore the contemporary moment in international cinema in terms of film styles, movements, production, distribution, and reception through the related (but different) concepts of globalization, transnationalism, and postmodernism. The films we will study include mainstream blockbusters, 'independent' films, international co-productions, activist or subcultural films, diasporic and exile cinemas, digital and video production, and local productions. We will also look at specific institutional contexts in which contemporary world cinema circulates, such as film festivals, youtube and the Internet, academia, the museum, mail order distributors such as netflix, and commercial theaters.

29455 ENGLISH ENGFLM 1485 FILM AND POLITICS W. 6:00:00 PM to 9:50:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Patterson.Alison L CL 244B This course examines film production, economics and forms of representation as reflections of political attitudes. We will study a variety of narrative and non-fiction films which reveal differing political points of view, ranging from those that legitimize the dominant culture to those which criticize, if not challenge, dominant attitudes. We will screen European, U.S., Soviet and Third World cinema. ENGLISH ENGLIT 365 IMAGINING SOCIAL JUSTICE MWF. 11:00:00 AM to 11:50:00 AM 11286 ARTSC 3 Credits Rim.Jiwon CL 330 This course takes up the problem of the contemporary, which here means thinking about the relation of the present to the past. In order to explore some of the ways in which past and present come together in our own time, we will read some recent and historical works of literature. For our purposes, the contemporary has two meanings: the first, belonging to the same age or period, and the second, related to along with its notions of change and progress ideas or texts that belong of the "modern," or having a quality of the present period. Our focus this semester will be on two questions: the construction of history and the value of memory as they become visible through slavery, colonization, love and war. Another of our principal tasks this semester will be to take up a cluster of questions about representation, namely: How is "reality" represented in literary texts, but also how do texts function to produce notions of reality? ENGLISH ENGLIT 365 IMAGINING SOCIAL JUSTICE MWF, 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM 11287 Quintanilla, Alyssa Cristina ARTSC 3 Credits CL 327 This course takes up the problem of the contemporary, which here means thinking about the relation of the present to the past.  CL 121

This seminar will support exploratory forays into the 'great unread,' the vast reservoir of literature from the past produced by writers now largely forgotten or entirely unknown. Our investigations will start from a few case studies of little studied British and American texts from the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, including volumes of anti-slavery poetry and song, feminist novels, and writings for children or young adults. Both individual and collective research projects will branch out from these works to recover other texts of interest. We will attend, in part, to the material practices and forms of evaluation that elevate a few works to high cultural status and that largely ignore the rest. But most of the seminar will be devoted to exploring in various print and digital archives what was once widely read and often highly valued but is now rarely if ever examined closely. How might we best search the literature of the past to discover works that are still compelling today? What challenges and opportunities do such works pose for the ways we currently study, appreciate, and evaluate literature? The goal of the seminar is to expand our sense of the varieties of literary practices and the uses and pleasures they can afford while also helping members of the class to develop informed positions about questions of literary value, canon formation, the uses of literary history, and the cultural significance of authors and texts. The seminar will support students in developing and writing a long essay based on original research.

From kissing to wild sexual encounters, from Paris to the Riviera, from Tahiti to Casablanca, France and the Francophone world have a highly recognizable profile in matters of sex and love. In this class, we adopt a historical lens to retrace the cultural transformations of sex and love in the French cultural and social landscape. How does sex, an integral part of human life, build expectations for our lives? What is considered a 'French' approach to this issue in other countries? To what extent does France define itself through its way of living and representing sexuality and related social questions? We will study visual, textual and historical documents from the Middle Ages to the present day. Attention will also be devoted to the colonial and post-colonial French context. Some of the issues that will come into play may be virginity, adultery, same-sex relationships, women's sexual agency, gender definitions through sexuality and loving attachments, and the shifting boundaries of pornography.

This course is a study of the history of French colonization of the 'New World' of the Americas from the sixteenth to mid-twentieth centuries, just after the second World War. By adopting an 'Atlantic' approach, we will examine Europe, Africa and the Americas as interconnected regions. The course explores several themes: Voyages et Rencontres; les Français en Amérique du Nord; la Traite des Noirs; les Lumieres et le Nouveau Monde; et Révolution à Saint-Domingue. Although each theme treats a different region and highlights a different time period, our approach will allow us to follow the writings of explorers, philosophers, administrators, generals, merchants, and former slaves around the Atlantic, from the coasts of France and West Africa, to the eastern United States, and south to the Caribbean and South American mainland. The course will be conducted in French.

This course is an in-depth study of francophone Haitian literature of the 20th and 21st centuries. It is organized around two central themes, migration and refuge, that evoke the major historical events of the last one hundred years in Haiti and the greater Caribbean. These include the sugar trade of the early 20th century; the U.S. occupation of Haiti (1915-1934); the 1937 massacre of Haitians at the border of the Dominican Republic; the Duvalier dictatorship (1957-1986); the plight of Haitian 'boat-people' and U.S. policy on refugees during the Reagan presidency; and the 2010 earthquake and the influx of international humanitarian organizations. Students will explore the ways that literature evokes colonial and imperial legacies of political exploitation and environmental degradation. By reading a range of fiction and non-fiction, including canonical and less well-known texts, students will learn about the diversity of Haitian culture and the different forms and paths of migration and refuge within Haiti and around the Americas.

What is an author? What is a text? What is a sign? What is reading? What is interpretation? What is power? What is gender? What is race? What is a nation? And what does all this have to do with literary and cultural texts anyway? In this course for beginning graduate students in the modern languages, we will survey major movements and concepts in literary and cultural theory of the 20th/21st centuries. These theories have provided us important ways to think about how to read and interpret literature, film, and other cultural artifacts, and, as such, are an important aspect of graduate studies in the Humanities. Seemingly basic questions such as "what is an author?" or "what is literature?" are in fact hugely complicated questions that demand that we think about them if we are to think in sophisticated terms about literature and culture. This course is meant to provide students with a general background in literary and cultural theory. After a one-week introduction to the concept of theory, we will read about key movements (Eagleton) at the same time as we conduct careful close readings of key theoretical texts (including Bakhtin, Foucault, Derrida, Lacan, Butler, Sedgwick, Bhabha, and others). Assignments will focus on regular responses to the readings and on sustained contributions to class discussion as we work as a team to process these sometimes difficult texts. The course will be taught in English, and all readings will be available in English (though those able to read the texts in the original are encouraged to do so).

Since its publication in 1812, the Grimm Brothers' Children's and Household Tales found a readership that spanned countries, languages, and generations. Its broad appeal can be traced to its origins: it reflects not only the influence of early 19th Century Germany, but also oral folklore traditions that go back thousands of years and range from as far away as Iceland, the Middle-East, and India. This course introduces students to a wide selection of these and other folktales from the Indo-European tradition as well as to numerous perspectives for understanding these folktales. We will examine the aesthetic, social, historical, and psychological values that these tales reflect, and will also discuss significant theoretical and methodological paradigms within folklore studies, including structural, socio-historical, psychoanalytic, and feminist perspectives. Finally, we will discuss the continuing influence of this folk tradition on popular and elite culture of our time. All readings, lectures, discussions, and written coursework will be in English.

What is art? This introductory course, designed for students with no previous background in art or art history, is intended to probe this question -- and challenge traditional assumptions -- while providing students with the skills to interpret works of art and architecture from a diversity of world cultures. The course is designed to demonstrate some of the basic tools of analysis with which to approach works of art as material and aesthetic objects while also examining them as productions that negotiate with historical and cultural contexts. The course also thinks pointedly about cultural difference and the ways in which art has been employed to define communities as radically particular while also answering basic human needs that connect people living in different times and places.

ARTSC 3 Credits Ellenbogen. Joshua Martin FKART 204

Foundations in Art History is a course designed specifically for students planning to pursue further study in art history. It offers an introduction to the history of the art historical discipline and its research and interpretive methods. Other courses in the art history department introduce students to the what of art history—major works and histories of the arts in specific time periods and geographic locations around the globe. This course, by contrast, is devoted to the how of what the art historian does—how she or he interprets the work of art according to its specific characteristics, the place and time in which the artwork is created, and the changing nature of viewers' responses to it. Through readings spanning art history in East Asia and the West and from the ancient world to the present, weekly discussions will invite us to explore a wide array of interpretive perspectives, to understand where and when such perspectives emerged within the discipline, and how they continue to be used today. Our engagement with these perspectives will be geared toward understanding how each plays a role in the art historian's central task, namely deciphering the meaning of the work of art. Short writing assignments throughout the term will require analysis of a specific artwork chosen from a local art collection such as the Carnegie Museum in light of different interpretative issues and methodologies.

This course is an introductory survey of the art and architecture of historic imperial powers. Rather than viewing the phenomenon of empire as it is reconstructed from texts, this survey will emphasize the comparative cultural profiles of these empires as they are known from visual evidence. The course will examine the imagery, artifacts, monument types and architectural sites that were made to advertise the success and promote the continuity of the regime beyond the lifetime of its founder, the use of regional themes to establish continuity with the historical past, and the cultural impact of empires on those who belonged to them and those who did not. Special attention will be paid to imperial powers of the ancient world, in particular those of the Near East, Greece and Rome, but the course will also cover the Carolingian and Ottoman Empires, as well as 19th century European imperialism and Nazi Germany. This course will draw on the expertise of faculty across the History of Art and Architecture department who will provide guest lectures.

 ANCIENT EMPIRES

 FKART 204

Successful empires are seldom planned; they evolve. They typically have charismatic founders, able successors, and well-organized systems of administration. They satisfy core constituencies by ensuring supplies of staples or, for elites, luxuries and status symbols. They ward off potential unrest by various means, from moving populations to the cooptation of local elites, who control capital and production. The course looks at the phenomenon of the (ancient) empire from various points of view-the biographies of selected 'founder figures' and the mechanisms created to ensure the survival of selected regimes, with less emphasis placed on bureaucratic structures and detail and more on the creation and maintenance of an ideology appropriate to the regime. A sense of tradition, for example, is essential to empire but only if combined with a sense of 'modernity'—the projection of an ability to mobilize the latest in science and technology to preserve the benefits of empire for those who profit from it. Empires are, in this sense, 'history-conscious'—they compare themselves with earlier empires and seek to surpass them. Empires examined include:

Middle Bronze Age Akkad, late Bronze Age Egypt, Early Iron age Assyria and Persia, Classical Athens, Macedon, and early Imperial Rome. This is not a writing course per se, but it attempts, through feedback on a series of short, focused essays, to be written in class and/or out of class, and a Research Paper, to work with students' ability to pose problems, work toward a solution, and articulate that process in writing.

Spain underwent a series of radical transformations in the period from about 1200-1700 CE. The peninsula was first the center of Muslim empire that controlled much of the Mediterranean. This gave way to a Catholic empire that then expanded across the Atlantic Ocean to encompass most of the New World. This succession of ambitious kingdoms gave rise to some of the most unique artistic expressions at the time. This class will examine the art produced in Spain and Spanish realms in this period. Because of the unique interreligious history of Spain, its art tends to sit uncomfortably with the art produced elsewhere in Europe and its empires. This course will recuperate some of the fascinating strangeness of Spanish images by focusing on the frictions created by the enhanced flow of peoples and the cultures with which they came into contact during the early modern period. As Iberian powers expanded into Latin American and south Asia, European cultures increasingly came into tension with indigenous cultures and forms of image production. Rather than leading to 'imperfect' or 'deformed' art, though, this friction led to the creation of novel images that show how cultural hybridity was both a coping mechanism and a productive artistic strategy. This course will examine works produced by some major artists in Spain. However, we will also look at how the concept of 'the artist' evolved in Spain during the period in question. This we be supplemented by looking at how local modes of artistic production developed in the New World came into tension with Spanish ideas about art and aesthetics during the period of colonization. These cultures often lacked a strong notion of 'the artist,' and we will consider how differing modes of creation helped produce a hybrid style of art the forces a reconsideration of the how we define colonial European art within a global context.

What is worth collecting? What motivates collectors? Spanning art, archeology and material culture from the ancient world to the present day, this course explores the tensions between private property and public heritage that shape the history of collecting. Subjects will include iconoclasm and the destruction of cultural artefacts, booty and looting in times of war, cabinets of curiosity, private and corporate collectors, deaccessioning, repatriation and the ethics of public collections. Particular attention will be paid to the upheavals of World War II, the aftermath of colonialism and the role of UNESCO in prohibiting the illicit trade in cultural property. Students will encounter historical, anthropological, and art historical approaches to these issues, and gain practical experience with collection management systems and provenance research. Students will engage with the content of an existing world history survey and learn about available resources for the teaching of world history. Simultaneously, an ongoing dialogue between the existing survey, the analysis of the teaching resources, and the student's own ideas will result in the formulation of new world history surveys by each student based on their evolving understanding of the field, strengths, and preferences. History and education students are warmly welcome to join this workshop. The University Honors College History of Sports course focuses on the emergence and evolution of sport during the twentieth and twenty-first centuries. It looks at the changing nature and meaning of sport, tackling why and how sport evolved from a community pastime to today's corporate money ball, what sport has meant to people in different societies and epochs, and what roles race, gender, and the media have played in sport. It will also look at the global consequences of sport's current model—that of global capitalism—on youth, play, and the meaning of sport. It will do so by looking at baseball academies in the Caribbean, football academies in Africa and Europe, junior hockey in Canada, and high school basketball and football in the United States and the South Pacific. The seminar format permits greater student involvement, research opportunities, and participation/discussion. The course asks you to address these questions and topics in seminar sessions as well as in writing about them. No prerequisites but come ready to explore.

As a field of research, language and gender studies is interdisciplinary and relatively new. These studies seem to discover the nature of gender-related differences in language and their causes and effects. Gender here refers to social categories based on sex but encompassing behavior, roles and images that, although not biologically determined, are regarded by a society as appropriate to its male or female members. What is seen as appropriate to each gender thus differs in different societies and eras. Explanations for gender thus differ in different societies and eras. Explanations for almost all observed male/female language differences are to be found less in the biological constitution of the human body and more in the social and psychological formation of the human subject. These are the issues we will be concerned with in this course. Is women's language use in systematic ways different from that of men? If it is different, how is it different? Why is it different, what sorts of explanations are there? And maybe most important, does a difference of language use matter? Requirements: Assigned readings. Weekly journals. Midterm exam. Final exam. Presentation of research proposal and written research report. Fulfills General Education requirement.

This course will deal with word structure and morphological processes in natural language (inflection, agreement, derivation, compounding, incorporation, cliticization, reduplication). The data to be analyzed will be drawn from a wide range of the world's languages. The relationship between morphology and other components of the grammar (syntax, phonology, the lexicon, pragmatics) will occupy a central place in the syllabus. Finally, considerations of typology, change, processing, and acquisition will be addressed. By and large, the approaches followed will be those of generative linguistics (Lexical Morphology, Prosodic Morphology, Distributed Morphology, etc.). The course presupposes a general linguistics course.

The course concentrates on two main questions: (1) how do languages differ from one another (in sound, semantics, and syntax); (2) what are some of the linguistic and sociopolitical results of situations in which two or more languages come into contact? The context for these investigations will be a study of selected language families. In addition to the families discussed in the text and in class, each student will select one other language family to investigate on his/her own in a series of weekly assignments. These assignments allow the student to apply the concepts learned in class in a creative an more personally meaningful way. Fulfills International Culture, Global/Non-Western requirement.

We will explore the ways in which contemporary scholars study culture as social practice, the social relations of knowledge, and the roles of symbolic, subjective, and expressive practices in constituting as well as reflecting social relations. At the same time, we will examine the ways in which contemporary scholars connect cultural texts to social and historical contexts, trace the orgins and evolution of cultural practices as social forces, and relate the aesthetic properties and the uses and effects of culture to social structures. Finally, we will address global displacements of social relations in the present era to examine how they affect the past, present, and future of ethnomusicological scholarship. FEMINIST POLITICAL THOUGHT PS PS 1622 TTh. 2:30:00 PM to 3:45:00 PM 27786 ARTSC 3 Credits Malloy, Tamar A CL 252 This course traces the theoretical development of feminist political thought and considers how feminist theory applies to the real political world. It will proceed in four parts: the history of feminist thought; theorizing intersecting identities with attention to sex and gender, race, sexuality, and nationality; feminist organizing; and feminist analyses of the state with a focus on citizenship, political representation, and debates about rights. The course will conclude with a policy project in which students use analytical lenses from the course to critique and suggest improvements to a governmental or institutional policy or program that plays a role in gender inequality. We will proceed chronologically, focusing mainly on political events. However, a special emphasis will be given to the formation of the Islamic tradition, its evolution across different regions and cultures in time, and its interaction with other traditions. In the modern era, we will particularly explore the Islamic societies' political, cultural, and military encounter with the rising power of the West in the Middle East. In addition to the several historical processes and developments such as modernization, nationbuilding, Islamic fundamentalism and globalization, which have shaped the history of the Middle East in the last two centuries, our class discussions will also touch on the main theoretical perspectives that have stamped the studies of Islam and the Middle East. Here, concepts such as orientalism, defensive development, and modernity will constitute our main focus. 11784 SOC SOC 317 GLOBALIZATION MWF. 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits McDermott.Joshua Lew WWPH 2200 The aim of this course is to introduce students to the broad spectrum of histories and theories of global civilization. This includes examining processes of expansion and interconnections in social, economic, political, and cultural life across various societies. In this respect, today's globalization is approached as a process with deep roots in the comparative history of civilizations, and not simply as a contemporary phenomenon. Parallels to contemporary processes of globalization can be seen in the spread of trade routes, world religions, common languages, habits, manners, fashions, lifestyles, ideas and ideologies. These have foundations in migrations, conquests, ancient world systems, discoveries, travels, and economic networks no less profound in the past than in the present. 29756 SOC SOC 351 SOCIAL CHANGE MWF, 11:00:00 AM to 11:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits A'Hearn, Thomas CI 144 Social change is the significant alteration of social structure and cultural patterns through time. In this course, students will learn and apply theories of social change. A special emphasis will be placed on social movements as basic avenues by which social change takes place in societies throughout the world. Students will enter into a dialogue with activists of various political persuasions who seek to uproot social systems and build a better world. 27472 SOC SOC 1319 IMMIGRATION W. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Moss, Dana Marie WWPH 2200 This course will examine the causes and consequences of migration, the experiences of populations who undergo displacement and resettlement, and common myths and debates surrounding this topic. While migration encompasses intra-state movement, this class will focus on border crossing between nation states. As a writingintensive course, students will be required to write and revise analytical papers; become versed in contemporary current events within and outside of the US context; and conduct a fieldsite visit exploring past or present immigration issues in Pittsburgh. The course will cover the social construction of borders, identities, and citizenship; differences in the categories distinguishing migrants from one another; the factors fueling migration and the consequences of cross-border movement; labor exploitation; women's issues; impacts on health; institutional responses and contexts of reception; generational and cultural issues; the criminalization of migrants and refugees; and how immigrant groups mobilize to contest their oppression. This is nothing new. Marx and Engels in 1848 had noted how the bourgeoisie had 'given a cosmopolitan character to production and consumption in every country'. The exchange of goods in pre-industrial societies forms the basis for establishing identities and kinship networks. Similarly, we are socialized early to buy things to express ourselves, to help form individual and social identities, or to signal membership within subcultures. Once the preserve only of affluent societies, in markets, stores, and malls around the world, as global citizens we buy things to feel good, and gift things to make others feel better. Increasingly, we need this consumption to be sustainable. In order to explore some of the ways in which past and present come together in our own time, we will read some recent and historical works of literature. For our purposes, the contemporary has two meanings: the first, belonging to the same age or period, and the second, related to along with its notions of change and progress ideas or texts that belong of the "modern," or having a quality of the present period. Our focus this semester will be on two questions: the construction of history and the value of memory as they become visible through slavery, colonization, love and war. Another of our principal tasks this semester will be to take up a cluster of questions about representation, namely: How is "reality" represented in literary texts, but also how do texts function to produce notions of reality? In order to explore some of the ways in which past and present come together in our own time, we will read some recent and historical works of literature. For our purposes, the contemporary has two meanings: the first, belonging to the same age or period, and the second, related to along with its notions of change and progress ideas or texts that belong of the "modern," or having a quality of the present period. It is organized around two central themes, migration and refuge, that evoke the major historical events of the last one hundred years in Haiti and the greater Caribbean. These include the sugar trade of the early 20th century; the U.S. occupation of Haiti (1915-1934); the 1937 massacre of Haitians at the border of the Dominican Republic; the Duvalier dictatorship (1957-1986); the plight of Haitian 'boat-people' and U.S. policy on refugees during the Reagan presidency; and the 2010 earthquake and the influx of international humanitarian organizations. Students will explore the ways that literature evokes colonial and imperial legacies of political exploitation and environmental degradation. By reading a range of fiction and nonfiction, including canonical and less well-known texts, students will learn about the diversity of Haitian culture and the different forms and paths of migration and refuge within Haiti and around the Americas. 29648 HIST HIST 712 A GLOBAL HISTORY OF TERRORISM MW, 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Hagerty,Bernard George CRAWF 169

This course will acquaint students with the remarkably long, diverse and widespread use of strategies of terror to advance political, economic, religious and social agendas. Our analysis will focus upon terror from below, that is terror by nonstate actors; will range from ancient Greece to the present; and will touch upon every inhabited continent. Using examples from many societies, we will discover that the human motivations for terrorist acts have changed little, but that their expression has changed a great deal, from the days of the Spartacus slave revolt, to the calculated terror of the Algerian revolution, to the media-centered "madmen strategy" of al-Gaeda and ISIS. Our organization will be roughly chronological, and will be combined with a typology of different kinds of terrorism. This inherently comparative approach will enable us to make this a true world history course, moving with ease from place to place, movement to movement, while still having a solid temporal and analytical framework to keep the material coherent.

29888 HIST HIST 756 INTRO TO ISLAMIC CIVILIZATION TTh, 9:30:00 AM to 10:45:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Jouili, Jeanette Selma Lotte LAWRN 107

This course aims to introduce students to Islamic and Middle Eastern History from the time of the Prophet (ca. 600 C.E.) to the Iranian Revolution in 1979. We will proceed chronologically, focusing mainly on political events. However, a special emphasis will be given to the formation of the Islamic tradition, its evolution across different regions and cultures in time, and its interaction with other traditions. In the modern era, we will particularly explore the Islamic societies' political, cultural, and military encounter with the rising power of the West in the Middle East. In addition to the several historical processes and developments such as modernization, nation-building, Islamic fundamentalism and globalization, which have shaped the history of the Middle East in the last two centuries, our class discussions will also touch on the main theoretical perspectives that have stamped the studies of Islam and the Middle East. Here, concepts such as orientalism, defensive development, and modernity will constitute our main focus.

17444 HIST HIST 1000 CAPSTONE SEMINAR: US Latin American T, 3:30:00 PM to 5:55:00 PM Relations

ARTSC 3 Credits Gobat, Michel Charles WWPH 3701

In this seminar students will develop the critical skills of reading and writing history through a close examination of one fundamental theme in the history of U.S.-Latin American relations: the impact of U.S. intervention in the Caribbean and Central America during the early twentieth century. In the first half of the course, we will explore how historians have analyzed diverse forms of U.S. intervention and nationalist challenges to U.S. imperial rule. This focus will allow us to gain a deeper understanding of the different ways of writing history. In the second half of the course, you will work on a research paper that examines a specific aspect of a U.S. occupation. Rather than simply analyzing the works of other scholars, you will work primarily with historical documents such as U.S. State Department records. Class assignments are designed to guide you through the process of researching and writing the paper. You will learn how to define topics and questions; find, select and analyze primary sources; decide between contradictory pieces of evidence; create clear and well-substantiated arguments; and shape a coherent narrative out of the many possibilities. No Spanish-language skills are required for this course.

30485 HIST HIST 1044 TWO CENTURIES DEMOCRATIZATION TTh, 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Markoff, John VICTO 229

Today democracy is in trouble in many countries. A generation ago, many people thought democracy was triumphing all over the world. Now things look a lot less certain. How can we understand the problems of the current moment, not just in the US but on every continent? Over the past several centuries people refashioned their political institutions, often in bitter conflict with champions of older systems and sometimes in equally bitter conflict against champions of other kinds of change. Social movements played major roles in these big developments. This happened in several big waves involving many places at the same time. The latest such wave began in western Europe in the mid-1970's, picked up steam in South America in the 1980's, included the overthrow of Communist regimes in Eastern Europe at the end of that decade, and embraced Asian and African countries as well. After past democratic waves, powerful antidemocratic forces emerged and pushed back, only to be pushed back in turn by renewed democratic advances. We will look closely at these large struggles of democratic and antidemocratic forces to give us new perspectives on the processes, prospects and perils of the current moment.

30524 HIST HIST 1046 NATIONALISM TTh, 1:00:00 PM to 2:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits TBA OEH 300

This course examines the history of nationalism, the making of ethnicity, and the nation-state. The course provides an overview of theoretical approaches, applicable both to historical and to more recent nationalist challenges in Europe. We will place particular emphasis on changing national and regional identities in Europe, comparing the development of nationalism in Western European countries such as France or Germany with Eastern European developments in the Russian and Habsburg Empires and its successor states. The course examines the wave of ethnic nationalism in Eastern Europea after the dissolution of Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union. Finally, we will explore new trends of populist nationalism and the rise of right-wing nationalist extremism in the wake of the refugee crisis and Brexit.'Pre-knowledge in European history is advantageous but not required. This class can be taken by students of all levels, including First-Year students.'

27529 HIST HIST 1585 US-LATIN AMERICAN RELATIONS MW, 3:00:00 PM to 4:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Andrews, George Reid CL 352

This course is a survey of US-Latin American relations from 1800 to the present. It has several goals. The first is to understand the long-term trajectory of relations and interactions between the two regions. Second, we will try to identify the impacts of those relations on the peoples and countries involved. How have actions by the United States affected Latin Americans? In turn, how has the United States' relationship with Latin America affected politics, economy, society, and culture in our own country? Finally, as we try to chart that long-term trajectory, we will listen to voices both from the United States and from Latin America, and try to reconstruct the dialogues that have (or should have) taken place over time between the two regions.

24992 HIST HIST 1653 COLD WAR AMERICA IN THE WORLD MW, 3:00:00 PM to 4:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Smith.Randy Scott WWPH 3415

This course explores the impact of the Cold War on American society. (1945- 1990] It will explore how the division of the world into two hostile and well-armed ideological camps shaped American post-war politics and culture. Post-war America was a world full of paradox. America's economic and military dominance allowed it to be a land of expanding home ownership, a booming consumer culture, shopping malls, housing tracts, the land of the automobile: an upwardly mobile society, where want and hardship seemed to have been finally vanquished. These same optimistic people, however, lived under the threat of nuclear annihilation and communist infiltration. Fear, not only tore at the social fabric, but also created an alphabet soup of surveillance, control and suspicion of fellow Americans: the N.S.A, C.I.A. the F.B.I. and municipal police 'Red Squads'. African Americans fought a long struggle for civil rights that embraced movements from the peaceful civil disobedience of Martin Luther King Jr. to the Black Nationalist Marxism of the Black Panthers. The pivotal event that slowly drained American confidence and optimism was the long, brutal war in Southeast Asia. The Vietnam War and how Americans experienced it in different Cold War periods will be at the center of the course. Popular culture also underwent a sea change as it expressed both the anxiety and optimism of Cold War America. Black and white artists crossed the color line to create rock and roll. Anxious parents watched as their children crossed this cultural line with their new idols. Noir films and novels expressed the color line to create rock and roll. Anxious parents watched as their children crossed this cultural war also created a powerful conservative backlash. Despite their decades in the political wilderness, the forces of Goldwater conservatism created a powerful antidote to the 'sixties' and that culminate in a victory that ushered in the final Cold War era: the Reagan Revolution. This course will try to give students some insight into current A

	ARTSC	3 Credits	Wehel Mari Kathryn	CL 302

This course explores the history and present of health and healing in sub-Saharan Africa from the era of the trans-Atlantic slave trade to the present day. We will consider disease, illness, and treatment from diverse perspectives, including the international organizations and state institutions promoting improvements in global public health, the African states and communities coping with illness and health interventions, and the individuals whose personal histories and experiences shed light on the day-to-day impact of the interest of so many different stakeholders. Taking a continent-wide approach to broad trends that have impacted health, we will also examine specific cases in their regional and national contexts. Ranging from pre-colonial healing traditions to livestock epidemics in the late 19th century to the battles against polio and Ebola in the early 21st century, we will pursue the social, political, and economic meanings of health and healing in Africa and examine how they have changed over time. In seeking to understand both change and continuity in Africans' experiences of illness and misfortune, we will pursue several lines of inquiry, including: within what different social, political, economic, and cultural contexts can health interventions be understood? How have historical processes shaped understandings of disease, misfortune, and illness in African societies, as well as the remedies developed to alleviate suffering or restore wellness? What are the historical causes of health disparities between different regions of the globe, and within different populations in Africa? How and when did health in Africa become a global issue? We will also consider how and why emerging diseases were understood as 'new' or 'old,' placing international attention in the context of local experience in Africa. We will engage with the goals of public health, particularly ideas about eradication, vaccination, and prevention as they lead us to think about how people, environments, and causes of illness are perceived, PS 1327 POLITICS OF REVOLUTION TTh, 1:00:00 PM to 2:15:00 PM 29707 PS ARTSC 3 Credits Rukhadze.Vasili Revolutions long mesmerized political scientists, historians, and intellectuals of every stride. Needless to say, its romantic allure is irresistible. Armies of ideological zealots storming cities and government buildings and overthrowing repressive rulers, long captivated public imagination. However, as everything else in politics, revolutions also have two sides: positive and negative. This course studies not only the process of various revolutions from our modern history, but also historical context of these revolutions, how they were prepared, and very importantly, what happens after revolutions actually take place. Political actors also matter. As philosopher Thomas Carlyle once observed, 'Revolutions are often initiated by idealists, carried out by fanatics, and hijacked by scoundrels.' Subsequently, in order to better understand revolutions, the course locates their main actors and examines their impact on the development of revolutionary and post-revolutionary processes. BLDG DEMOCRACY AROUND THE WRLD 24982 TTh, 2:30:00 PM to 3:45:00 PM PS 1378 ARTSC 3 Credits Morgenstern, Scott CL 139 In the late eighteenth century, the word Ademocrat began to be widely used to refer to those who sought to create new ways for human societies to govern themselves that would break with the divinely-sanctioned monarchies and the entrenched social hierarchies under which most people lived. In several great multi continental waves of change, people refashioned their political institutions, often in bitter conflict with champions of older systems and sometimes in equally bitter conflict against champions of other kinds of change. The latest such wave began in western Europe in the mid-1970s, picked up steam in South America in the 1980s, included the overthrow of Communist regimes in Eastern Europe at the end of that decade, and continues with movements for democratization in Africa in the 1990s. In this course, we want to understand: 1) why it was in particular historical moments that such waves of social transformation took place; 2) the role of particular social movements in democratization; 3) the ways in which the meaning of democracy has been debated since the breakthrough of the late eighteenth century; 4) the role of established elites in democratization, both as reformers and as resisters; and 5) the ways in which democratizing processes in some countries have powerfully effected political processes elsewhere. After a study of the democratizing moments of the past, we will look at the processes, prospects and perils of the current moment. However, the Cold War turned out anything but cold. Although, the two contending superpowers never directly fought each other, the wars, involving either of two superpowers or their proxies, never stopped. This half a century long ideological conflict inflicted untold sufferings on hundreds of millions of people around the globe. It claimed the lives of millions, devastated the economies of many countries, and brought the world on the brink of a nuclear war at least on one occasion. This course examines the main developments of this global conflict: the wars, covert operations, arms race, diplomatic negotiations, geopolitical doctrines, and the decision-making process of the contending sides. However, the course goes beyond just studying the events. It tries to locate them in historical context and in theoretical perspective, which will help students of international relations to further expand their intellectual horizons in this subfield. In recent years that environment has changed dramatically, posing new challenges for states large and small alike. This course will focus primarily on the world's major powers but will intersperse a discussion of these states' foreign policies with consideration of how the nature of their power, as well as the milieu within which they act, has changed. These changes have affected and been affected by developments in Europe, including Russia, Euro-Atlantic relations and international relations more broadly. The aim of this course is to explore the background and dynamics of the remarkable changes in "the other Europe." The course will move quickly over the history of the region generally referred to as "East Europe" and will focus primarily on contemporary developments. The class aims to prepare students for understanding how story, myth, propaganda, and indoctrination are used by various political actors to build, sustain, and/or destroy regimes. The course begins with a consideration of guintessential cases of states engaging in these practices (Ancient Rome, Fascist Italy, Imperial Japan, and Cambodia under the Khmer Rouge). It then examines parallel examples within United States history and narratives. The second half of the course then focuses on the practice of Propaganda specifically, considering its modern origins in WWI, examining transitions in technique across multiple states, weighing linkages to advertising and public information campaigns, and finally having students construct their own propaganda. The course concludes with a formal content analysis training focused on a particular vein of propaganda, and an assignment that has students blending content analysis consideration with political theory argument construction. 26160 PS PS 1614 THEORIES OF JUSTICE TTh, 9:30:00 AM to 10:45:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Lotz.Andrew Louis This course addresses the key intersection between two important topics in contemporary political theory. The second half of the course will weave in the issue of globalization to questions of justice-again using Rawls' work and various respondents as a vehicle for doing so. The course will conclude with a policy project in which students use analytical lenses from the course to critique and suggest improvements to a governmental or institutional policy or program that plays a role in gender inequality.

This class is meant to be a gentle introduction to the opportunities and challenges with both collecting and exploring digitally available political and social information such as text, geo-locations and social media connections. We begin by going back to basics, exploring the reasons and ways we use and misuse data. We then turn our focus to flexible computational tools for data collection and visualization and how they can provide unique help in answering important questions such as what causes war and violence, who represses human rights, and what parties are likely to win elections. By the end of the class, students will be exposed to coding and computer languages that are often used in data analytics in industry, government and academia, including bash, Python and R. PS 2307 ETHNIC POL CNFLCT COMP PRSPCTV M. 9:30:00 AM to 12:00:00 PM 29739 PS ARTSC WWPH 4430 3 Credits Paler, Laura B This is a Ph.D. course designed for graduate students in the department of political science that explores the causes and consequences of ethnic politics and conflict. The first aim of the course is to understand what ethnic identity is and how it becomes salient to political outcomes. The second goal is to examine the consequences of ethnic identity for outcomes like public goods provision, voting behavior, politics, and conflict. As we progress through the course we will also investigate factors thought to mitigate the adverse effects of ethnic identity and divisions, such as institutional design, increasing the salience of national or cross-cutting identities, and intergroup contact. We will address the core themes of this course in comparative perspective, drawing on analyses from virtually every global region, including Africa, South and Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Latin America, and the United States. HUMAN SECURITY PS 2320 M, 3:00:00 PM to 5:50:00 PM 28322 ARTSC 3 Credits Seybolt, Taylor B WWPH 3911 Because of civil wars in several parts of the world, especially in Sub-Saharan Africa, the international organizations have reshaped their development agenda by emphasizing the importance of security and peace as preconditions for development. Because of civil wars in several parts of the world, especially in Sub-Saharan Africa, the international organizations have reshaped their development agenda by emphasizing the importance of security and peace as preconditions for development. This approach was explicitly included among the aims of the United Nations by(then) Secretary-General Kofi Annan in his roadmap for the implementation of the UN Millennium Summit. In parallel, the concept of human security has been promoted by several Western governments, NGOs and independent commissions in order to take into account the need to address not only state security needs but also the vulnerability of individual humans in crisis situations. Aid policies have taken into account these evolutions, though the concept of human security itself has been discussed in a controversial way. The European Union is progressively integrating it into its security agenda and has started 'securitizing' its development agenda and African policy, including instruments like the Cotonou convention with African, Caribbean and Pacific states. This 1.5-credit course explores the reasons for the merging of security and development policies in the European Union and its Member States and the emergence of a European human security agenda within the wider context of the United Nations, World Bank and the OECD. The focus will be European policies towards crisis areas (Balkans, Caucasus, Middle East, Great Lakes Africa, and South and Southeast Asia) and peace building activities like: regulations about antipersonnel landmines, smallarms and light weapons, conflict timber and conflict diamonds, policies of conditionality and sanctions, assistance to transitional justice, peace building, security governance, and security sector/system reform in fragile states.

 THEORY OF INTRNATNAL RELATION
 Th, 9:30:00 AM to 11:50:00 AM

 ARTSC
 3 Credits
 Gochman.Charles S
 WWPH 4430

This course introduces students to the major theories of international relations(IR). The course will provide students with an understanding of the history of IR, focusing on the often intense theoretical and methodological debates that have shaped the field. It will also provide students with a critical understanding of key concepts in international relations-including anarchy, power, cooperation and information-and how different understandings of these concepts animate different theoretical perspectives. Students will be challenged to think about how to construct and evaluate theories, as well as methodological questions about the search for causal explanation in international relations. Readings will be drawn from the "classic" works of international relations theory, as well as from more recent research that proposes critiques and refinements of these theories.

Please contact them for further details 29781 PS PS 2675 HUMAN RIGHTS M. 2:00:00 PM to 5:00:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Goodhart, Michael E WWPH 4430

This course seeks to understand human rights politically by surveying the vast normative and empirical literature on the topic. It is designed to provide a comprehensive overview of the topic that situates human rights within and beyond the existing political science literature on the subject. We'll read works by international relations scholars (e.g., on treaty ratification and compliance), comparativists (on studying human rights performance and violations), moral and political philosophers (on justifying human rights), lawyers (on the international human rights regime), anthropologists (on the translation of human rights from global to local contexts and on the so-called "social life of human rights,"), sociologists (on human rights and social movements), historians (on the evolution of the human rights regime), and critical theorists (on human rights as neo-imperialism) in trying to make sense of human rights as a political phenomenon. Students will create research proposals and literature reviews for research projects on human rights. Students from all disciplines are welcome.

29435 PSY PSY 1142 CONFLICT RESOLUTION TTh, 1:00:00 PM to 2:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Schumann, Karina Natasha CL 116

This course explores the psychology of conflict and its resolution, with a focus on conflict in our interpersonal relationships. Topics include the nature of conflict, barriers to conflict resolution, the benefits and costs of various responses to conflict (e.g., forgiveness, revenge, apologies), and factors that predict constructive vs. destructive responses to conflict. Classes will include a lecture component but will often follow a seminar format, where students will have an opportunity to discuss ideas, read and comment on relevant research articles, and develop a research proposal on a topic of personal interest.

Along with that interest, there has come a spate of questions regarding the perception and response of the Allies to Hitler. This course is an attempt to look at the situation on this side of the Atlantic before, during and after WWII. We shall explore the Holocaust in Europe, but focus on American policy and American policy makers such as F.D.R. in the 30's and 40's and look at those factors which influenced our reaction. There will be an opportunity to explore some of the issues and questions that the Holocaust raises for Americans today. In addition to selected films, there will be an opportunity to meet survivors of the camps. INTRO TO ISLAMIC CIVILIZATION RELGST RELGST 455 TTh. 9:30:00 AM to 10:45:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Jouili.Jeanette Selma Lotte LAWRN 107 This course aims to introduce students to Islamic and Middle Eastern History from the time of the Prophet (ca. 600 C.E.) to the Iranian Revolution in 1979. We will proceed chronologically, focusing mainly on political events. However, a special emphasis will be given to the formation of the Islamic tradition, its evolution across different regions and cultures in time, and its interaction with other traditions. In the modern era, we will particularly explore the Islamic societies' political, cultural, and military encounter with the rising power of the West in the Middle East. In addition to the several historical processes and developments such as modernization, nationbuilding, Islamic fundamentalism and globalization, which have shaped the history of the Middle East in the last two centuries, our class discussions will also touch on the main theoretical perspectives that have stamped the studies of Islam and the Middle East. Here, concepts such as orientalism, defensive development, and modernity will constitute our main focus. In structure the course is broken into three parts: the first part concentrates on prison writings and criminal culture in America; the second part focuses on the forced-labor camp system known as the Gulag in the Soviet Union; and the third part examines Europe (Germany and Eastern Europe) during the Holocaust. 17865 SOC SOCIAL PROBLEMS TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Baneriee. Tarun D WWPH 2200 By next semester the campaign will be done, a new president chosen, and, on January 20th, sworn into office. The campaigning will be done, but the issues will remain, and the new administration will have to actually do something about them. The War in Irag, the weak economy, health care, global warming, and more await them and us. In this class we will focus on the social ills and problems that dominated the campaign and will fill the new President's first months in office. We will develop the background knowledge you need to evaluate proposals and follow the debates over them. We will also work on having the skills we need to evaluate evidence and spot when politicians (or corporations or advertising or media) are trying to pull a fast one on us. MWF, 10:00:00 AM to 10:50:00 AM GLOBALIZATION 11784 SOC SOC 317 ARTSC 3 Credits McDermott, Joshua Lew WWPH 2200 The aim of this course is to introduce students to the broad spectrum of histories and theories of global civilization. This includes examining processes of expansion and interconnections in social, economic, political, and cultural life across various societies. In this respect, today's globalization is approached as a process with deep roots in the comparative history of civilizations, and not simply as a contemporary phenomenon. Parallels to contemporary processes of globalization can be seen in the spread of trade routes, world religions, common languages, habits, manners, fashions, lifestyles, ideas and ideologies. These have foundations in migrations, conquests, ancient world systems, discoveries, travels, and economic networks no less profound in the past than in the present. 29756 SOC SOC 351 SOCIAL CHANGE MWF, 11:00:00 AM to 11:50:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits A'Hearn.Thomas Social change is the significant alteration of social structure and cultural patterns through time. In this course, students will learn and apply theories of social change. A special emphasis will be placed on social movements as basic avenues by which social change takes place in societies throughout the world. Students will enter into a dialogue with activists of various political persuasions who seek to uproot social systems and build a better world. MWF, 12:00:00 PM to 12:50:00 PM 17276 SOC SOC 352 SOCIAL MOVEMENTS ARTSC 3 Credits Lazar, Hillary Anne LAWRN 209 This course focuses on modern social movements, including the American civil rights movement, the women's movement, the gay and lesbian rights movement, the environmental movement, and the global justice movement. Empirical studies of these movements will be used to explore such general issues as how social movements emerge, grow and decline.

29766 SOC SOC 1325 TWO CNTURIES DEMOCRATIZATION TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM ARTSC 3 Credits Markoff.John VICTO 229 Today democracy is in trouble in many countries. A generation ago, many people thought democracy was triumphing all over the world. Now things look a lot less certain. How can we understand the problems of the current moment, not just in the US but on every continent? Over the past several centuries people refashioned their political institutions, often in bitter conflict with champions of older systems and sometimes in equally bitter conflict against champions of other kinds of change. Social movements played major roles in these big developments. This happened in several big waves involving many places at the same time. The latest such wave began in western Europe in the mid-1970's, picked up steam in South America in the 1980's, included the overthrow of Communist regimes in Eastern Europe at the end of that decade, and embraced Asian and African countries as well. After past democratic waves, powerful antidemocratic forces emerged and pushed back, only to be pushed back in turn by renewed democratic advances. We will look closely at these large struggles of democratic and antidemocratic forces to give us new perspectives on the processes, prospects and perils of the current moment. Similarly, the vulnerabilities to cyber-assault will be examined. Topics include the use of computer technology to commit crimes such as 'hacking' and other computer based criminology, as well as means of committing more traditional violations of law. Also included will be an analysis of the legal considerations facing law enforcement and other cyber-security professionals who are tasked with meeting the challenges of discovering, investigating and prosecuting cyber-crimes. Since our economy and security enterprises are so dependent on the electronic dissemination of information, effective measures to secure this vital resource will be explored. Given the fact that funds are transferred electronically, the electronic transmission of finances will be examined as well as the more basic methods of raising funds and laundering same to advance terrorist activities throughout the world. 12490 ADMJ 1245 TERRORISM T. 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM ADMJ CGS 3 Credits Fitzgerald, John WWPH 1501 This course focuses upon the social, political, economic and philosophical reasons for the development and spread of terrorism throughout the world, and examines potential dangers inherent in these practices and possible means of solutions to them. They are both part of recent diasporas from Africa and the Caribbean. This course focuses on the issues and experiences of people of African descent in contemporary (20th and 21st centuries) migratory diasporas from both Africa and the Caribbean. The course draws on extensive literature on migration, transnationalism, racial and ethnic identity formation, health and other topics to illuminate the causes for the migration and the experiences that migrants have in different host countries. What experiences do migrants from Africa and the Caribbean share? How do their experiences differ? How do migrants define themselves in new host countries? How do they stay connected to their homelands? 29728 ANTH ANTH 1750 UNDERGRADUATE SEMINAR: Health and Body TTh, 11:00:00 AM to 12:15:00 PM in Pittsburgh ARTSC 3 Credits Wanderer.Emily Mannix WWPH 3300 Undergraduate Seminar. This course examines the relationship between environment and health, with a special focus on the city of Pittsburgh and the surrounding environs as a case study. We will use medical anthropology to systematically investigate the effect of the environment on health and the interplay of natural and human systems. Drawing on research in political ecology, this class will consider the social, political, and economic systems that shaped Pittsburgh and its inhabitants. We will pay particular attention to the way changing industrial and environmental conditions changed incidence of disease, and how exposure to risk and disease are shaped by race, gender, and class. We will examine issues like the history of air pollution, considering the impact of the 1948 Donora Smog, an environmental disaster which killed 18 people and reshaped understandings of the dangers of pollution. We will consider the history of resource extraction such as coal mining and oil and gas drilling and their impacts on the environment and health. The course will examine how knowledge about health is produced and the development of new forms of citizen science that enlist local residents in projects to monitor issues like air quality. 25039 ANTHROPOLOGY OF FOOD MW. 4:30:00 PM to 5:45:00 PM ANTH ANTH 1752 WWPH 3301 ARTSC Musante, Kathleen 3 Credits Undergraduate seminar. This course will examine the social ecology of human nutrition using an evolutionary perspective. It will apply the concepts and principles of anthropology to the study of human nutrition and diet. It asks the questions: "Where do cuisines come from? Discussions will focus on the origins of the human diet; human dietary adaptation to diverse ecological and technological situations; Social, cultural, behavioral and ecological factors that influence diet in technologically simple, modernizing and contemporary societies; the globalization of food supply and food security; and methodological issues in studying food habits and assessing nutritional status. Our focus will be on the relationship between health and culture in various social contexts, with primary attention given to questions of power and inequality on the one hand, and personhood and emotion on the other. In exploring one or two case studies of ritual healing, we will look at the ways in which medical systems are integrated with larger systems of cultural meaning. We will also look at various medical systems in a cross-cultural comparative framework. Following on a consideration of so-called traditional medicine in the non-Western world, we will question the 'objectivity' of Western biomedical science and its various discourses. Extending this critique we will analyze the important relationship between poverty, and the political economy of public health in international development. We will investigate a number of issues, including the growing number of drugs prescribed to Americans each year, the lack of access some populations have to essential medicines, the increasingly global nature of clinical trials, and the role of pharmaceutical companies in the opioid crisis. We will use the study of drugs and medicines to analyze the production of medical knowledge, changing perceptions of health and illness, and the role of the state and the market in the development and distribution of therapeutics. Pharmaceuticals bring together science, clinical practice, marketing, and consumerism, and this course will draw on anthropological research to trace the role they play in global flows of knowledge, capital, commodities, and people BIOSC 1999 MEDICAL MICROBIOLOGY TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM 15815 BIOSC ARTSC 3 Credits Boyle, Jon P LANGY A221 This is an advanced level lecture course educating students in the microbial aspects of human infectious diseases. Students will learn about the microbial basis of infection, the host response, and the nature of specific infections within the human body. The course also will present approaches for the diagnosis of infections and strategies for disease control. The topic of medical microbiology will be presented in a system-based rather than an organism-based approach. 30515 CGS HIST 1090 HISTORY MEDICINE & HEALTH CARE Th, 6:00:00 PM to 8:30:00 PM ARTSC

24080 CGS SOC 477 MEDICAL SOCIOLOGY TBA. 12:00:00 AM to 12:00:00 AM ARTSC 3 Credits Kerr.Margaret Anna WEBTBA This course is designed to provide students with a sociological perspective on medical beliefs, practices, and delivery systems. The practice of medicine is embedded in a particular social system, and social factors have an effect on our understanding of illness, the distribution of illness in the population, how/where/by whom medicine is practiced, and also how it is paid for. In addition, ethical decisions about life and death are based in social belief systems which evolve historically in response to technological developments and changing practice possibilities. Students in this course will develop an understanding of how medical practices can be interpreted within a social and historical context, and will apply this knowledge to issues which are current in medicine today: the crisis in health care delivery, the effects of technological advances on conceptions of health and illness, the treatment challenge of multicultural patient populations, and ethical dilemmas in medical decision making. This course will use microeconomic tools to gain a better understanding of the lives of the world's poor and of the challenges faced in the process of economic development. This course will explore topics such as health, education, and gender, as well as investigate the functioning of labor markets, credit markets and government institutions. This course will also cover empirical methods to evaluate the effectiveness of policy interventions, using applications from developing countries around the world. ECON 2713 TOPICS IN MACROECONOMICS TTh, 12:30:00 PM to 1:45:00 PM 29554 ECON Hur, Sewon Hanley, Douglas B WWPH 4716 ARTSC 3 Credits The gap between rich and poor countries has increased dramatically in the postwar period. Between 1960 and 2000, per capita income in the poorest countries has remained stagnant, while per capita income for the 5 or 10 richest countries has been multiplied by a factor of around 3. For instance, per capita income in the United States was around 70 times higher than in Tanzania in 2000. Understanding the sources of such wide cross-country income inequality is an essential task in modern economics. This class explores frontier research on economic growth and development. Topics include: technology adoption, human capital, fertility, disease, legal institutions, urbanization, trade and growth, agricultural development, sectoral productivity, financial development, and provision of infrastructure. By the end of the class, students are expected to submit a research project in one of these topics. GIS. GPS. DISEASE & HEALTH IN MOD AFRICA TTh. 4:00:00 PM to 5:15:00 PM 29674 HISTH HIST 1725 ARTSC 3 Credits Webel, Mari Kathryn This course explores the history and present of health and healing in sub-Saharan Africa from the era of the trans-Atlantic slave trade to the present day. We will consider disease, illness, and treatment from diverse perspectives, including the international organizations and state institutions promoting improvements in global public health, the African states and communities coping with illness and health interventions, and the individuals whose personal histories and experiences shed light on the day-to-day impact of the interest of so many different stakeholders. Taking a continent-wide approach to broad trends that have impacted health, we will also examine specific cases in their regional and national contexts. Ranging from pre-colonial healing traditions to livestock epidemics in the late 19th century to the battles against polio and Ebola in the early 21st century, we will pursue the social, political, and economic meanings of health and healing in Africa and examine how they have changed over time. In seeking to understand both change and continuity in Africans' experiences of illness and misfortune, we will pursue several lines of inquiry. including: within what different social, political, economic, and cultural contexts can health interventions be understood? How have historical processes shaped understandings of disease, misfortune, and illness in African societies, as well as the remedies developed to alleviate suffering or restore wellness? What are the historical causes of health disparities between different regions of the globe, and within different populations in Africa? How and when did health in Africa become a global issue? We will also consider how and why emerging diseases were understood as 'new' or 'old,' placing international attention in the context of local experience in Africa. We will engage with the goals of public health, particularly ideas about eradication, vaccination, and prevention as they lead us to think about how people, environments, and causes of illness are perceived, understood, and defined, both n Africa and the wider world. We will also explore the continuing challenges posed by chronic diseases and non-infectious sources of illness.

Since the inception of Elizabethan Poor Laws, societies, governments, and charitable organizations have struggled with the welfare paradox. In 1601, for the first time, a government acknowledged the need for a macro-secular effort for assigning the burgeoning populations of the poor, as charities, often with religious overtones, proved unequal to the task. This course focuses on the underlying assumptions of programs designed to assist and evaluate the poor, reviewing the similarities and distinctions of various programs, always addressing their effectiveness and their ability to ameliorate the conditions of their targeted populations. In particular, focus is on Colonial America, the Civil War era, the dawn and evolution of America into the industrial age, and early programs of the New Deal.
